WHITE SOX TAKE WORLD TITLE IN A TORRID FINISH

ZIM'S BLUNDERS ARE FATAL

BENTON PITCHES BRAVELY

While 34,000 fans frantically implored the Giants at the Polo Grounds yesterday to produce a hero on whose classic brow they could nestle a wreath of laurel, the New York club went down to an ignoble 4 to 2 defeat before the Chicago White Sox in the deciding game of the world's series and instead of crowning a new baseball king, Manhattan placed a clown's cap on the head of Heinie Zimmerman of the Bronx.

The once great Zim played the dunce's rôle in the fourth inning, when he made a weird heave to first which permitted Eddie Collins to race around as far as second and a moment later he had a foot race down the third base line desperately trying to tag Collins as Eddie sped on over the plate two jumps ahead of him and started the Sox on their way to the world's championship. Heinie could just as well have thrown the ball to Bill Rariden and squelched Collins, but Zim thought it was a track meet instead of a ball game and wanted to match his lumber wagon gait against the fleetest sprinter in the game.

The great crowd shook with laughter and filled the air with cries of derision at one of the stupidest plays that has ever been seen in a world's series. It was a tough finish for poor Heinie after playing great ball all season, and Zim had been expected to be one of the sensations of the big classic against Chicago. Groans and more of them rumbled through the stands, and the Chicago players who have been predicting all the time that Heinie would sooner or later stage the marble top play of all time, were so happy that they hopped around like jumpingjacks. The crowd called Heinie a "bonehead," and he took his place in baseball history along with Bonehead Barry, the mythical player who is supposed to have made all the foolish, rattle-brained plays of the game.

"Throw the ball!" yelled the crowd. "Throw the ball!" yelled the Giant players, but all the thousands of supplications fell on tin ears. Heinie refused to throw the ball—he wanted to catch Eddie Collins and put him out all by himself. Collins outsprinted Heinie and won the race by yards.

Pitching Battle Previously.

Up to this fourth inning Urban Faber and Rube Benton were having an even pitching battle. Both flingers were at their best and the contest promised to be the best of the series. Eddie Collins was the first man up in the fourth and he slammed a grounder down to Zimmerman. Heinie made a neat pickup and tossed the ball over to first. The ball hit the ground long before it reached Holke and then sputtered away toward the field boxes while Collins raced to second. Joe Jackson lifted an easy fly out to Robertson in right field and Robbie dropped it like a hot potato, Collins going to third.

Happy Felsch slapped a bouncer which was nipped in Benton's glove, and Rube looked over and saw Collins yards down the third base line. Benton didn't trust himself to throw the ball, but ran over and chased Collins back toward third. Then he tossed the ball to Heinie and Collins whirled about and started toward the plate. Heinie set out after him. Bill Rariden moved up the third base line from the plate with his hands all set to receive the ball from Heinie. Heinie didn't see Rariden at all, he didn't hear the yells of advice which were being showered upon him. All that Heinie could see was a spot on Collins's back where he expected to plaster the ball.

On rushed Collins toward the plate and Heinie a few yards behind him. In his own mind the great Zim could almost hear the cheers which would break out when he tagged Collins and saved the Giants from being scored on. Little Eddie says to himself, he says, "Whoever told this Zim he could run? I'll show him." At the halfway mark Collines was gathering speed and gaining in every jump. Heinie's feet were behaving as if they were having a hard time keeping out of each other's way. As the crowd worked itself up to a high pitch of indignation, Collins romped over the plate with the run and Zim hasn't caught up with him yet.

Jackson and Felsch were also on the bases, remember, and they had enough time to go almost anywhere they pleased while Zim was trying to do the Bernie Wefers down the base paths. When Collins had registered the Sox's first run Jackson was at third and Felsch at second.

Benton Becomes Rattled.

Benton wasn't on the field at all. He was up in the air. So were all the other Giants. It looked for a moment as if the Giants were going to form a posse and haul Zim to the tar barrel. Thousands of spectators were anxiously waiting to volunteer in any movement against Heinie. Chick Gandil went to

Joffre Reviews Our Troops; Says 'Victory Will Be Ours'

By The Associated Press.

AMERICAN TRAINING CAMP IN FRANCE, Oct. 15.—Marshal Joffre spent the entire day with the American troops. He reviewed Major Gen. Sibert's contingent and inspected the training schools and the other troops.

Marshal Joffre was accompanied by General Pershing and two other officers, and the party received an ovation at French villages through which they motored.

The Marshal, in addressing the officers, said that America had come to help deliver humanity from the yoke of German insolence, and added:

"Let us be united; victory surely will be ours."

CROPSEY ASSAILS THE G. O. P. LEADERS

ATTACKS HUGHES ALSO

A crowd of 8,000 persons, who occupied all the seats and the standing room at the Academy of Music in Brooklyn last night, cheered heartily for William M. Bennett, the Republican candidate for Mayor, and cheered attacks on the Fusion organization and the intellectual capacity of the Tammany candidate for Mayor.

Although it was a Republican meeting, nothing produced greater demonstrations than bitter onslaughts against Republican leaders, including Governor Whitman, Charles E. Hughes, Senator Calder, Colonel Roosevelt, State Controller Travis, Borough President Pounds, Comissioner Kracke, and others.

The speeches were marked by pungent personalities, and the more pungent they were, the more heartily they were received by the crowd, which took Bennett's candidacy with deadly seriousness. Supreme Court Justice Cropsey, who was cheered as heartily as the Republican candidate, called himself a Republican of Republicans, and repeated his statement that Governor Whitman had "surrendered to the Moneybund," alleged that Senator Calder had "straddled questions so often that he was bowlegged," and declared that Charles E. Hughes was out for Mitchel because of the legal fees that he had received from the Administration.

He and Bennett both spent a good deal of time charging that the press of Manhattan had been engaged by Rockefeller not to mention Bennett's name during the primaries and to deride his candidacy during the campaign.

Cropsey Attacks Newspapers.

"They think we're crazy," shouted one man in the audience, after Justice Cropsey had charged that the newspapers of Manhattan were in a conspiracy to make light of Bennett's chances.

"That's it exactly," said Justice Cropsey. "There is just exactly one man in this city who could not possibly win under any circumstances against Tammany, and that is Mayor Mitchel. The New York papers, bought body and boots by the Moneybund, are trying to make it appear that Mitchel is the man who can beat Tammany, and they must think you are crazy when they attempt that."

Both Justice Cropsey and Mr. Bennett assailed Mayor Mitchel for "wrapping the flag about his body" and allowing posters of himself to appear on billboards showing him in a khaki uniform.

Instead of it being true that Mayor Mitchel would have received more votes at the Republican primaries, had there been more interest in the primaries, Justice Cropsey said that the contrary was true, and that in Brooklyn, where there had been twice as much publicity and interest in the primaries, the vote was far larger than in Manhattan and the majority of Bennett much greater. He continued:

"The press of Manhattan knew that, if the people of the Republican Party really knew what the situation was, the vote against Mr. Mitchel would have been much greater than it was actually, and they tried by every means in their power to prevent the public from knowing what the situation was."

Denounces Fusion Committee.

Justice Cropsey said that the committee headed by William Hamlin Childs, representing the Fusion organization, had pleaded with him not to be a candidate on the ground that a third candidate in the field would assure a Tammany victory. He said that every member of the committee which called upon him assured him that this was the fact. Justice Cropsey then denounced the committee for encouraging Mayor Mitchel to enter the race as a third candidate, after the discovery of ballot-box frauds had thrown enough votes to have carried the primaries over Mitchel. Justice Cropsey said that the committee had admitted that they might back Mitchel as a third candidate, even if he failed to carry the primaries.

"If you know how well Judge Hylan is controlled by Tammany Hall, you know that you don't look for any fighter in him. He does not dare to say a word. He hasn't had his mouth open since the campaign, except to read some matter that must have been typewritten so badly that he cannot make it out.

"You remember Judge Hylan. There never was an occasion in Brooklyn before he was running for Mayor that he wasn't always trying to say something. I don't know what he ever said, but he was always trying to say something. Always. But now, all of a sudden, you can't get him to say a thing. You know why. It must be clear to everybody why this man who was always talking has suddenly stopped. He was told, 'Your orders are to keep your mouth shut, Judge Hylan,' and he is going to be a good soldier and do it."

New Assault on Mitchel.

Mr. Bennett began his speech by showing a stereopticon slide of one of the ballots, which he numbe... at 2,000, which had been cast in his favor, but

MITCHEL DEMANDS OF MURPHY WHY HE NAMED HYLAN

HINTS AT SECRET REASON

MAYOR PRESSES HIS FIGHT

Mayor Mitchel in a statement yesterday put a number of questions to Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, regarding Judge John F. Hylan, the Tammany candidate for Mayor. Using the disclosures published in The New York World regarding Judge Hylan's former connection with an automobile concern as his text, the Mayor, among other questions, asked Mr. Murphy the following:

"I ask Mr. Murphy whether he was ignorant of Judge Hylan's past or whether he knew of it, and intended to use it as a club should Judge Hylan become Mayor and prove disobedient?"

In his statement the Mayor said that the public remembered that "Governor Sulzer was impeached by Mr. Murphy after the club which Murphy held over his head had proved ineffective." The Mayor's statement in full was as follows:

"I call upon Mr. Hearst and Mr. Murphy to explain the reasons which led to their selection of John F. Hylan for Mayor of New York. The next Mayor of New York will have a voice in the disposition of more than two hundred million dollars a year of public money. In the four years of his term, his word may prove a deciding factor in the disposition of nearly a billion dollars.

"Until this morning all that the public knew of the man whom Mr. Murphy and Mr. Hearst have thus honored was that he had served a term as a Police Magistrate in Kings County, and had been elected in 1915 to the County Court of Kings County.

"It is certain that Mr. Murphy and Mr. Hearst did not select Judge Hylan for Mayor because of his knowledge of municipal government. We must look elsewhere for their reasons for entrusting the most important public office in this city to the mute who heads their ticket.

"So far as Mr. Heart's reasons are concerned, I am confident that before this campaign is over the public will have a complete understanding.

"The public has already observed that one of the men managing Mr. Hylan's campaign is a brother-in-law of Jeremiah O'Leary. The public knows that the anti-American press of this city is receiving Tammany election advertising and is supporting Judge Hylan. It sees that every disloyal element in this city is arrayed solidly behind the Hearst candidate. There must be a reason for the unanimity of this support, and before election, I am confident that the public will fully understand why Mr. Hearst selected John F. Hylan for Mayor.

Demands Mr. Murphy's Reasons.

"Mr. Murphy must have some better reason to offer for the nomination which he has inflicted upon loyal members of his party than the fact that his candidate can secure the support of the disloyal. I call upon Mr. Murphy to make these reasons public.

"His reasons cannot lie in Mr. Hylan's public record. They must exist in some peculiar private qualification of his protégé. His reason cannot be Judge Hylan's ability to win votes on the stump, because Judge Hylan, like his prototype, the burrowing mole, spends most of his time not on the stump, but in the hole under the stump.

"His reason cannot lie in Judge Hylan's ability to stand out in the open and discuss the issues, because Judge Hylan consistently refuses to expose himself or to answer questions.

"Since, therefore, there is nothing in Judge Hylan's public record or in his ability as a campaigner, to lead to his selection by Mr. Murphy, the leader of Tammany Hall must have some personal private reason, unknown to the public, for his selection of Mr. Hylan.

Questioned About Hylan's Career.

"I ask Mr. Murphy whether, at the time he nominated him for Mayor, he had knowledge of the private career of Judge Hylan. I ask him whether he knew anything of the facts disclosed in a newspaper story this morning.

"I ask him whether he knew that the man whom he nominated for Mayor was the sort of man which that story indicates Judge Hylan to be.

"I ask him if he knew that Judge Hylan was the sort of man who would imperil a company which he himself had organized and in which he had sold stock.

"I ask him if he knew that John F. Hylan had sued this company for alleged legal services, acting through a agent in his own employ, and then, as attorney for the company, permitted judgment in his own action against his own company to be taken by default.

"I ask Mr. Murphy if he knew that the judgments thus obtained by Judge Hylan were assigned to Alfred R. Goslin, a notorious bucket-shop swindler, who had been convicted and had served terms in prison for forgery and conspiracy before his connection with Judge Hylan's enterprise.

"I ask Mr. Murphy whether he considered Judge Hylan, who is thus reported to have misrepresented the stockholders in a company which Hylan himself organized, fit to represent 2,000,000 people in their public affairs. In the

Predicts New German Peace Move at Once; Munitions Short and Allies Rebellious

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Saturday, Oct. 13, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—In well-informed diplomatic circles here it is considered that peace is imminent.

Despite the extreme secrecy observed in Germany regarding the subjects discussed at the council held in Berlin immediately before the German Emperor's departure for Bulgaria and those now being discussed in Sofia between the three allied monarchs, authentic information has been received here to the effect that new and less irreconcilable peace proposals are to be expected from Germany during the coming week.

In spite of von Kühlmann's pompous statements concerning Alsace-Lorraine and the Kaiser's nervous activity, Germany is faced by the most imperative necessity of stopping the war as the result not only of the insufficiency of her output of munitions and of the growing ascendancy of the Socialists, but also of the imminent danger of a split with her allies.

The Emperor of Austria is known to be none too fond of the Kaiser and the Pan Germans, and he is faced by the utter exhaustion of his army and of Austria. The Bulgarians, too, are now renewing the overtures which they initiated last Winter for a separate peace. They are working busily through special envoys, and in particular through well-known pro-Bulgarian sympathizers in England, with the object of persuading British and French diplomacy that the Bulgarian people are still true to the Entente and can still render valuable service to it by deserting their present friends.

Nor are the Turks behindhand in this scramble to abandon the sinking ship of the Central Empires. A violent article, recently published, against the "Young Turk" Committee, which can have appeared only with the consent of the "Young Turk" censorship, is manifestly a preliminary attempt to placate the Entente.

Of course, the basis of these overtures is that Bulgaria shall be allowed to retain the territories she now occupies at the expense of Serbia, Greece, and Rumania, coupled with the abandonment of any idea of dismembering the Turkish Empire.

SAY ALLEGED SPY IS NAVAL OFFICER

CAPT. STAKE OUT OF ARMY

An arrest, which agents of the Department of Justice admit may prove to be one of the most important made in this country since Congress declared war on Germany, was made yesterday afternoon, when detectives from the Police Department went to the Hotel Manhattan and took into custody a well-dressed young man who was registered there as William J. Dunbar of Washington. For more than a week Secret Service agents have been on the trail of the man who, it was said last night, is believed to be a German who assumed the name "Dunbar," and who during the last few weeks is said to have passed much of his time at one of the principal bases on the Atlantic Coast.

The charge entered on the blotter of the Second Detective Branch, at Lexington Avenue and Forty-second Street, is that "Dunbar" is suspected of having tried to gain information against the United States Government by enlisting in the armed service of the country. The specific charge entered against "Dunbar" by the police is conspiracy to get data of the United States Government. The police say they have reason to believe that the man is an accomplished chemist as well as a good sailor.

About a week or ten days ago "Dunbar" arrived in New York after one of his periodical visits to the naval base referred to. He went to the Manhattan Hotel. Two agents of the Department of Justice knew of his coming and awaited him there. They had instructions not to arrest, but to follow "Dunbar" wherever he happened to go. The man remained in New York about two days, and then went to Washington. The Secret Service men went with him, but he did not know that. On Monday morning the Manhattan received a telegram from "Dunbar," who telegraphed from Washington, asking that a room be reserved for him. He arrived that afternoon at 5:30 o'clock, and the Secret Service men arrived on the same train.

Arrest of Man Delayed.

No move to arrest the man was made Monday night, and it is understood that the Government agents did not desire to make the arrest until certain other suspicions of theirs had a chance to develop. It was intimated last night that the arrest was premature, and that the case against the man was not nearly as complete as it was hoped to make it.

The arrest was made by Detective McGee of the New York Detective Bureau, who took "Dunbar" into custody at the hotel and later transferred him into the custody of Captain William M. Offley, chief of the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation. After questioning "Dunbar" for more than an hour Captain Offley ordered him taken to Ellis Island and held there as an enemy alien pending the outcome of certain investigations which are under way.

Officials of the Department of Justice admitted last night that they have reason to believe that "Dunbar" was an agent, and they admitted also that he has been spending much of his time near the great naval base referred to. One report is that "Dunbar" represented himself on at least one occasion as a junior officer of the United States Naval Reserve. The members of the Naval Reserve are to a great extent assigned to duty on submarine chasers and other small naval craft.

Another report, and this is not denied either, is that he actually served as an ensign on a submarine chaser, and that he first came under suspicion by members of the crew of that boat, who reported the facts in the case, as they understood them, to their flotilla commander. This was about ten days or two weeks ago.

A full report of the case is in the possession of the Navy Department in Washington, as well as in the hands

NATION'S LOAN SALES NOW $800,000,000

Total for New York Reserve District Climbs to $360,000,000.

GAIN OF $32,000,000 HERE

There was a gain of about $32,000,000 in subscriptions to the Liberty Loan reported in this district yesterday, the estimated total advancing to $360,000,000. Returns tabulated by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York showed a total of $262,710,300, an increase of $11,700,000 since the close of business on Saturday. A great many subscriptions that have been announced in one form or another have not yet been officially filed with the Reserve Bank, and for that reason the bank figures are considerably below the estimated total. The Publicity Department of the Liberty Loan Committee fixed $529,000,000 last night as its estimate of subscriptions to date, but this total does not include applications which have not been made public, or those from out-of-town institutions which will be received in this morning's mail.

The Treasury Department at Washington estimated last night that subscriptions had passed a total of $800,000,000, or 16 per cent. of the $5,000,000,000 sought. The total was based on official and unofficial reports from Federal Reserve districts. With ten more working days in the campaign, it was explained, the bond sales would have to average $420,000,000 a day hereafter.

The National Bank of Commerce in New York announced last night that it had sent in a $20,000,000 subscription for its own account. This is the largest single subscription yet reported in this district, but does not come up to the largest ones made to the first Liberty Loan.

On the basis of $1,500,000,000 of subscriptions from the New York Federal Reserve District, there is still a shortage of $1,140,000,000 which has to be made up in the eleven remaining business days of the loan campaign, which closes on Oct. 27. Although thus far applications for the Government war bonus have not come in in as large volume as had been hoped for, the Liberty Loan Committee is not at all discouraged, but, on the contrary, feels confident of success in the long run. It was pointed out yesterday that men of wealth and big corporations had not yet filed their applications, but would do so during the closing week of the campaign. It is these large subscriptions which will swell the figures, but in the meantime every effort is being made to get the general public to subscribe, as every $50 and $100 subscription helps, and a sufficiently large number of them make a million, and from millions will grow the five billions—the goal of the present "drive."

Comparing the present status of the campaign with that of the first Liberty Loan, attention was directed to the fact that in the five and a half days preceding June 15, the day subscription books closed, no less than $1,800,000,000 in subscriptions was received, making an average of more than $300,000,000 daily for the whole country.

To Enlist the School Children.

Arrangements have been perfected for reaching every man, woman, and child in Greater New York with a personal interview on the vital necessity of subscribing to the war loan. More than 25,000 canvassers will start out on their work today. A. B. Leach, Chairman of the Metropolitan Canvass Committee, said last night that by tomorrow he expected to have 50,000 men in the field.

"We have districted the city into police precincts," he said. "There is a Captain in charge of the canvassing in each precinct, and he has a local office. He gets the names and addresses of every organization in his precinct and he visits them for the purpose of instructing the members about Liberty Loan bonds. The Captains give the canvassers a list of voters and a personal appeal is made to every man. The schools are visited and the school children are enlisted as Liberty Loan workers. When they get home they urge their parents to subscribe to the bonds and an appeal from a child is irresistible in most cases."

Mr. Leach said that he had several thousand experienced insurance solici-

250 Are Lost on French Munitions Steamer, 56 on British Auxiliary Sunk by U-Boats

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Two hundred and fifty lives were lost when the steamer Medie was torpedoed on Sept. 23 in the Mediterranean, says a Reuter's dispatch from Paris.

The explosion of the torpedo detonated the munitions in the ship's cargo. There were more than 500 passengers on board the steamer, including soldiers and prisoners of war.

The British armed mercantile cruiser Champagne has been sunk, and the mine-sweeping sloop Begonia is overdue and regarded as lost, says an official statement issued tonight, which reads:

"His Majesty's mine-sweeping sloop Begonia, Lieut. Commander Basil S. Noake, R. N., is now considerably overdue and must be considered lost with all hands.

"His Majesty's armed mercantile cruiser Champagne, Acting Captain Percy G. Brown, R. N., in command, has been torpedoed and sunk. Five officers and fifty-one men were lost."

There is no record of a British steamship Champagne in the shipping register.

The Medie was a French vessel of 4,470 tons. She was built in 1912, and her home port was Marseilles.

MOBILIZE GOLD TO WIN THE WAR, WILSON URGES

WILL RAISE NATION'S POWER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—President Wilson tonight sounded a call for the mobilization of all the nation's gold reserves under the supervision of the Federal Reserve Board.

In a statement made public through the board, the President called upon all eligible nonmember State banks and trust companies to join the Federal Reserve System without further delay, that they may "contribute their share" to the consolidated gold reserves of the country and aid more effectively in "a vigorous prosecution and successful termination of the war."

Scores of such institutions have flocked to the system within the last three weeks, among them some of the largest trust companies of New York, Philadelphia, and other cities. The movement to the Federal Reserve system has lacked only a final impelling force to assume the proportions of a landslide. Within less than three weeks resources of such institutions in the system have risen from $1,200,000,000 to more than $2,600,000,000.

Must Control All the Gold.

Liberty Loan financing, the resultant activity in the money markets, the effect of the Government's huge financial transactions upon the bond markets and the stock exchanges of the country have made it imperative, in the view of the Administration, for the Federal Reserve Board to control not a major fraction of the gold reserve of the country but the entire amount. The recent embargo on gold exports has made it highly desirable that this control be acquired as speedily as possible.

With the board in active daily control of the country's huge store of gold, at present more than $3,000,000,000, watching every avenue through which it may be lessened and vigilant in its supervision of the country's banking activities, officials believe that the financial position of the country may be rendered as nearly impregnable as human skill can make it.

At present the board controls the activities of institutions representing only one-half of the country's total banking resources. The latest report of the Controller of the Currency places at several millions about $16,000,000,000 the resources of the banks within the system. Since that report was issued, however, nearly $1,500,000,000 in resources have been added through the acquisition of new members.

There are, however, between 8,000 and 9,000 eligible banks and trust companies, with resources estimated at from $12,000,000,000 to $16,000,000,000, whose activities are entirely beyond the control of the Federal Government, being governed only by State laws. The President addressed himself to these institutions.

Text of the Statement.

"The White House, Oct. 13, 1917.

"It is manifestly imperative that there should be a complete mobilization of the banking resources of the United States. All who are familiar with financial operations must appreciate the importance of developing to the maximum our banking power and of providing financial machinery adequate for meeting the very great financial requirements imposed upon our country by reason of the war.

"A vigorous prosecution and satisfactory termination of the war will depend in no small degree upon the ability of the Government not only to finance itself, but also to aid the Governments associated with it in the war, which must be kept supplied with munitions, fuel, food, and supplies of all kinds.

"The banking problem involved is one which concerns all banks alike. Its solution does not depend upon the national banks alone, nor upon the State banks. The burden and the privilege must be shared by every banking institution in the country. The important functions of the Federal Reserve Banks in the sale of Government securities, in receiving and transferring the billions of dollars involved, in supplying credit facilities, and in protecting the reserves of the country have become so familiar to all that I am sure it is unnecessary to dwell upon or expound them.

"The etent to which our country can withstand the financial strains for which we must be prepared will depend very largely upon the strength and staying power of the Federal Reserve Banks. The Federal Reserve act is the only constructive financial legislation which we have ever had which was broad enough to accommodate at the same time banks operating under powers granted by the general Government and banks whose charters are granted by the respective States. The unification of our banking system and the complete mobilization of reserves are among the fundamental principles of the act.

"The State banking institutions for some reason have until recently seemed inclined to hold aloof. Congress a few months ago prescribed very generous terms for the admission of the State banks into the Federal Reserve system, which have removed the objections heretofore raised by State banks when considering membership. As the law now stands, it leaves member State banks and trust companies practically undisturbed in the exercise of all the banking powers conferred upon them by the States. The law provides also in definite terms the conditions upon which any State bank or trust company may withdraw from the system.

"Many of the largest State banks and trust companies are now becoming members, realizing that to win the war we must conserve all of the physical, financial, and moral resources of our country; that our finances must rest on the firm-

Torpedoes Italian Vessel, Then Sinks Her Lifeboats

ATHENS, Oct. 15.—A painful impression has been created here by the torpedoing of the Italian steamer Bari, on which were a number of Greek officials from Turkey whose names do not appear on the list of fifty survivors who were landed at Corfu. One hundred and twenty are said to have been landed on the Gallipoli Peninsula, (Turkish territory.)

According to advices reaching here, the lifeboats of the Bari were sunk by the Germans who torpedoed the steamer.

There have been no previous advices of the sinking of the Bari. The only steamer of that name listed in available records is a small one of 324 tons gross, which was formerly known as the Liburno and was built at Fiume in 1873.

REICHSTAG FIGHT CARRIED TO COURT

MICHAELIS CONSULTS CHIEFS

Attempts to Bridge Crisis as Attacks Continue — Scheidemann Opposes Yielding Soil.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 15.—The Hamburg Fremdenblatt says the German Government had decided to prosecute, if possible, Haase, Dittmann, and Vogtherr, the Socialist Deputies whose names recently were linked with the mutiny in the German fleet. The Government has submitted evidence against the three deputies to the Imperial Court at Leipsic and, therefore, has declined the suggestion that a Parliamentary committee of investigation be appointed.

The Lokal-Anzeiger says that the report that Admiral von Capelle, the German Minister of Marine, had resigned, evidently emanated from von Capelle's friends. This newspaper pronounces untrue the assertion that von Capelle exceeded the instructions of Chancellor Michaelis in making his declarations to the Reichstag recently regarding the plot that had been discovered to paralyze the fleet so as to force the Government to make peace.

It is believed that the political situation which has arisen because of discontent with Chancellor Michaelis will reach a crisis before the Reichstag reassembles in December. Dr. Michaelis remains in Berlin, conferring with Reichstag leaders and his personal advisers, endeavoring to find a solution of the situation, but, according to advices received here, he does not seem to realize that his own position is endangered.

Assailed for Drifting.

The political leaders and the newspapers continue to declare him unfit for the high office he holds. They say that he has failed to develop any positive program or to exercise any effectual leadership. On the contrary, they assert, he has permitted himself to be buffeted hither and thither, now by the Pan Germans and now by the Reichstag majority, which wrested from him one grudging concession after another.

The Chancellor's biggest blunder, in the eyes of the moderate press, was his rehabilitation of the Independent Socialists by his disclosures concerning the mutiny on German warships, thus driving the Socialists into a firmer opposition which, many persons believe, will unite the two Socialist wings into a powerful radical group.

The Berlin Germania says that the Centrum Party organization is about to request the members of that party not to join the new Fatherland Party, of which Admiral von Tirpitz is one of the leaders.

Austrian and Hungarian Socialist newspapers received here report that an attempt has been made to start an anti-peace propaganda in Hungary. The propanganda is laid to the Krupp and kindred interests and 2,000,000 marks are said to have been set aside to establish a newspaper in Budapest and carry on the propaganda by means of motion pictures.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 15.—The Berlin Vorwärts, in an editorial on the political situation, says:

"It is enough to make one weep to think that we have a Chancellor like Michaelis, a Vice Chancellor like Helfferich, a War Minister like von Stein, a Naval Secretary of State like von Capelle. It is enough to make one weep that in this critical time of the empire a Government should be in power which has neither at home nor abroad can command, or even lay claim to respect, a Government as to whose incapacity there is a general concensus of opinion from Heydebrand to Scheidemann and from Reventlow to Ledebour, and that we cannot even tell whether this Government will be forced to make way for another, more capable."

After referring to the Government's "recent blunders," Vorwärts asserts that if the majority party had refused last Tuesday to have any truce with "the present unspeakable Government," and had acted as the Socialists did, and refused to vote a supplementary budget, Michaelis would have been forced to disappear.

To Yield No Soil, Says Scheidemann.

At a Socialist meeting in Berlin yesterday Philipp Schiedemann, leader of the Socialist majority in the Reichstag, deplored the fact that Germany's enemies had "scoffed at the German desire for peace." "We will not renounce a square foot of German soil," he added. Dr. Michaelis, Herr Scheidemann said, was unsuited to the post of Chancellor.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—A monster demonstration in favor of "peace by understanding" marked the recent opening of the German Socialist conference at Wurzburg, Bavaria, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen today. Philipp Scheidemann, speaking to the huge audience, said that all conditions of life warranted the attitude which the Socialists were taking toward the war.

GERMANS EXTEND OESEL INVASION; TAKE ARENSBURG

LAND BATTERIES SILENCED

FLEETS FIGHT IN STRAIT

PETROGRAD, Oct. 15.—German forces which landed on the Russian island of Oesel, at the head of the Gulf of Riga, on Friday, occupied Arensburg, the capital of the island, on Saturday, it was officially announced today by the Russian War Office. Arensburg is on the southern shore of Oesel Island.

Fighting for the island, the War Office announces, was in progress all day yesterday:

The Germans who landed on Oesel are pushing forward to the east and south, placing in a difficult position the Russian forces and batteries in the district of Arensburg, and especially those on the Cerel Peninsula. Military critics predict actions in the Gulf of Riga, followed by development of the invasion to the mainland, on the coast of Esthania, rather than an attempt toward the Gulf of Finland, which is protected by minefields which the Germans would have to sweep under the menace of the Russian fleet.

The War Office statement reads:

Baltic Sea.—The fighting yesterday for possession of the island of Oesel continued. After the reports of Saturday Arensburg was occupied by the enemy at 7 P. M. Advanced detachments were observed the day before from four to six miles from the town.

Enemy naval and air forces are energetically supporting their land operations and are attacking the north and south of the island. The south squadron of enemy cruisers, torpedo-boats, and trawlers attempted to force the entrance to Irbe Channel. Its further movements into the Gulf of Riga are covered by our long-range artillery from the Island of Oesel.

The northern group of enemy warships dispatched a squadron of torpedo boats between the Islands of Oesel and Dago which pressed back our patrol boats in the direction of Moon Sound. Our naval forces reinforcing the patrol boats accepted battle and the enemy retired.

A third group of enemy warships, consisting of cruisers and torpedo boats, approached after noon the southwestern coasts of the Island of Oesel and bombarded an unimportant part of the coast.

Enemy submarines were observed several times at different places in the Baltic.

Committee Appeals to Sailors.

The Baltic fleet is ready to carry out all orders of the Government, according to Vice President Ivanoff, of the Presidium Centrofilot, the organization which in the fleet corresponds with the Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates in its relation to the army. Immediately on receipt of news of the German landing, the appeal of the Central Committee was issued, calling upon the sailors to forget internal strife and take all measures to improve the fighting capacity of the fleet. Commissioners carrying instructions hastened to Helsingfors.

"Reports that the fleet is not ready to meet the enemy are untrue," said M. Ivanoff. "The fleet is full of fighting ardor and is ready to repel the enemy. Stories of evil influence exerted by the Sailors' Committee are greatly exaggerated. The near future will show how honorably the fleet will fulfill its duty to the country."

The Central Committee's appeal has caused a cessation of the meetings at Helsingfors. The semi-official news agency says the first naval engagements in Oesel waters have shown that an appeal to the crews of the fleet may be counted on with certainty.

Possession of the Gulf of Riga by the Germans appears to military writers to be a most serious menace and to give a considerable advantage to the enemy, who will be able to make secure his communications with Riga by sea.

Weakness Laid to Internal Discord.

The newspapers exhibit alarm at the landing of the Germans on Oesel. The Bourse Gazette says the situation of the country is the more complicated because a solution must be found not only of the unsatisfactory state of affairs in the interior, but of the problem presented by the closing of the Gulf of Riga by the Germans. The Russkaya Volia says:

"We are being led toward our Cavalry, but perhaps we shall find our resurrection."

The Rech attributes the disaster partly to bad visibility and the unexampled political frivolity of leaders of the Russian democracy.

The Socialist press takes the Maximalists to task. The Volia Naroda recalls Premier Kerensky's warning of the danger of a German coup in the Baltic, which was stigmatized by the leader of the Maximalists as an unworthy political monoeuvre. The newspaper insists on the necessity of an implacable struggle against Maximalism.

The Den says the Maximalist aspirations recently displayed in the fleet are doubtedly contributed to the German success. Only the Izvestia, organ of the Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates, looks on the disaster as a blessing in some respects, saying that the news of the German landing came at a time when Russia, learning of the troubles in the German navy, was beginning to entertain dangerous illusions regarding the imaginary disorganization of the enemy.

The landing of the Germans has increased the exodus from Petrograd, which has been noticeable since the fall of Riga. Since Saturday the ticket offices have been besieged, many persons offering large premiums for tickets. The situation is aggravated by rumors, which were branded officially as unfounded, that passenger traffic would be stopped soon in view of the expected evacuation of Government institutions.

It is stated in Government circles that no extensive evacuation is looked for, as no immediate danger threatens the capital. The new front is still 300 miles distant, and the roads are impassable.

A landing in Finland, it is believed, will not be attempted, owing to the scarcity of supplies there and to the fact that provisioning would be rendered difficult, with Winter approaching, by the freezing of the sea.

Germans Announce Rapid Progress.

BERLIN, Oct. 15, (Via London.)—Rapid progress has been made by the German troops which landed on the island of Oesel, according to the official statement issued today by the War Office. German warships shelled the Russian land batteries and silenced them. Svorb Peninsula has been cut off from the northern part of the island.

The War Office statement reads:

Rapid progress has been made on the island of Oesel. Pressing impetuously forward, our infantry regiments and cyclist battalions, without waiting for the artillery, repeatedly overcame the enemy at the places where he made a stand.

The Svorb Peninsula was cut off from the north, while the fire of our ships silenced the land batteries. We are before Arensburg, which is burning, and are advancing in the eastern portion of the island toward the east coast, on which the Russian forces are rapidly retreating to escape over the mole which connects the island of Oesel with Moon Island.

Our torpedo boats penetrated into the river waters between Oesel and Dago Islands and in repeated engagements pressed back the Russian naval forces into Moon Sound.

RUSSIAN FLEET IS DEMORALIZED

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Saturday, Oct. 13.—The Germans carried out on the island of Oesel and Dagö their first landing operation in this war. No doubt is felt here that the islands are lost and with them the Gulf of Riga, to which they formed troughout the war an effective barrier.

The enemy has been preparing for this operation ever since the capture of Riga, and his preparations kept pace with the march of events in Russia. The Germans follow the rule of securing the maximum of results with a minimum of effort.

Russian disorganization is the most potent factor in the victory of the depleted German forces. The work of the German Staff in Russia now produces greater results than work at the front.

The demoralization of the fleet has progressed simultaneously with the demoralization of the army, and the results have been visible for weeks. The murders of officers, the open defiance of naval orders, and the orders of the Provisional Government by the Baltic Fleet Committee, the brazen boast of a sailor at the Democratic Conference that the crews of the fleet were ready both to repel the invader and determine the form of government in Petrograd—these were some of the outward indications of the destructive effects of German propaganda in the Baltic Fleet.

Those who knew what was happening at the naval bases have long wondered when the Germans were going to strike their blow, and speculated on the reasons for its postponement. It had been expected earlier.

Just before the opening of the democratic conference a large force of German warships steamed northward from Riga. Kerensky's announcement of its approach caused momentary consternation in the conference, but in the heat of party strife this danger was soon forgotten. And the Germans during the Moscow conference bided their time. They withheld their assault for fear of stimulating a patriotic outburst that might have changed the whole character of the conference.

The conference emerged from its chaos of dissension and disorder with only a feeble and dispiriting compromise. The menace to Riga did not lead to an effective concentration of patriotic forces in Moscow.

The new naval menace failed to overcome the forces of disintegration in Petrograd. So the Germans set to work. Their seaplanes bombed the Oesel batteries and reconnoitred the shores of the Gulf of Riga. Their trawlers again and again exploded mine fields in the Irben Straits, but were driven off. But the Russian advance guard was weak. The German dreadnoughts were allowed to approach within firing distance. The bateries on Oesel were destroyed by the dreadnoughts, and German troops landed on the north of Oesel and the southern point of Dagö.

German strategy keeps an eye on the internal politics, not only of Russia but also of Germany, and it is possible that one object of the Baltic operations was to arouse the spirits of the German fleet and prevent the further spread of that disaffection of which von Capelle spoke the other day in the Reichstag. Or did von Capelle intentionally exaggerate minor incidents in order to blind the Russians to their danger?

The Russian squadron that has hitherto defended the Gulf of Riga will now probably make its way out through the northern passage. The northern army may have withdrawn its seaward flank to the Wenden line.

If the Germans secure their position on Oesel and Dagö they may attempt another landing on the mainland at Reval. In any case, the occupation of the islands, a distance of 280 miles from the capital, provides them with the base for air raids on Petrograd.

SHELL THE BRITISH ON YPRES HEIGHTS

200 KILLED IN ARTOIS RAIDS

British on Sunday Wrecked Dugouts and Took Prisoners—Fierce Gunfire on the Aisne.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—German guns heavily bombarded the British positions on the high ground to the east of Ypres last night, but no infantry engagement took place on the Flanders front, according to the afternoon statement from the War Office.

In yesterday's raid near Monchy-le-Preux the British killed 200 Germans, captured thirty-six and destroyed seven dugouts.

Following is the official report issued this afternoon:

Our positions on the main ridge south of Broodseinde were heavily bombarded during the night by the enemy. No infantry action has taken place.

In a successful raid carried out by us yesterday afternoon southeast of Monchy-le-Preux, East County troops captured thirty-six prisoners and two machine guns. Two hundred Germans were killed by the infantry, and seven of the enemy's dugouts were destroyed with explosives.

Another successful raid was carried out by South Midland Territorials early last night northeast of Roeux. A number of the enemy were killed, his dugouts destroyed, and twelve prisoners were taken.

The British official comunication issued this evening says:

Later reports show that the number of prisoners we captured in yesterday's raid southeast of Monchy-le-Preux, was sixty-four, including two officers.

On the Ypres battlefront the activity of our own and the enemy's artillery continues.

The hostile artillery also has shown more activity during the day in the neighborhood of Lens Land in the Nieuport sector.

Aviation: Yesterday there was slight improvement in the weather, and artillery work and photography were carried out by our airplanes. One and a half tons of bombs were dropped on the Ledeghem Railway Station and hostile billets east of Lens.

In the air fighting three German airplanes were brought down and one driven down out of control. Two of our machines are missing.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—Violent artillery fighting is again in progress on the Aisne front, but the only infantry actions reported today were encounters of patrols in Champagne. The French raided the German lines in Champagne during the night, taking a few prisoners.

The announcement made by the War Office tonight says:

In the region of the plateaux between Ailles and Craonne the artillery activity was violent during the course of the day. Patrol encounters occurred in the Champagne west of Auberive. There was an intermittent cannonade on the rest of the front.

Two German captive balloons were brought down today, one by our special guns and the other by one of our aviators.

The official statement from Belgian Headquarters tonight reads:

Yesterday one of our patrols carried out a reconnoitring expedition against enemy organizations north of Dixmude. There were bombardments at various points along our front. Our artillery shelled the enemy installations and the neighborhood of Handzaeme Canal. Last night German aviators dropped several bombs on our cantonments.

Today there were great artillery activity and violent bomb fighting before Dixmude during the whole morning. The Germans launched several thousand projectiles of all calibres and numerous aerial torpedoes against our lines. Our artillery replied very energetically in co-operation with our trench guns, which ceased action only after having silenced the enemy artillery and bomb throwers early in the afternoon.

Says British Failed Near Monchy.

BERLIN, Oct. 15, (via London.)—British troops yesterday attacked on a front of nearly two and one-half miles on the Arras front, between the Scarpe and the Cambrai-Arras Road, says today's Army Headquarters statement, which reports the assault to have broken down except in the centre. Counterattacks at night drove out such of the British as had penetrated the central sector.

Heavy artillery fire and very active reconnoitring operations on the Flanders front are reported in the statement, which reads:

Front of Crown Prince Rupprecht: The activity of our own and the enemy's artillery in Flanders yesterday was of varying intensity. In the coast sector and in some sectors between the Lys and the Deule the fire was concentrated with powerful effect at times. Extensive reconnoitring occurred in the crater fields, and engagements frequently took place.

In the Artois, the British attacked with strong forces on a front of four kilometers between the Scarpe and the Cambrai-Arras road. The assault broke down on the wings as the result of our fire. The enemy penetrated into our lines in the centre, whence he was cleared out at night by counterattacks.

Near St. Quentin the artillery fire was revived for a time. The cathedral received an additional fifteen hits by shells.

Front of the German Crown Prince: Between the Ailette Valley and Braye, and in the central section of the Chemin des Dames, there were violent artillery duels throughout the day. North of Rheims, in the Champagne and on the Meuse, the artillery fire increased at times.

BERLINERS' ALLOWANCE OF CLOTHING REDUCED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 15.—"And wherewithal shall we be clothed?" is a question that is being seriously asked by Berliners since the amount of clothing they may obtain has by official ukase been seriously reduced. The problem is all the more unpleasant in that the reduction comes at the beginning of cold weather, which has set in early and severely.

Cards must now be obtained for such articles of apparel as woolen stockings, Winter gloves, ready-made jackets, collars, shirts, baby linen, furs, traveling rugs, and bed covers, which previously were sold freely; and a ban has been put on such things as furniture covers, lest they be used for clothing. If one has a Summer overcoat or cloak, a Winter garment of the same sort may be obtained in exchange. A medical certificate is necessary in order to have both.

A man's wardrobe may officially consist of nine collars, three pairs of cuffs, three shirts, three undervests, one underjacket, one workday suit and, if he can afford it, what morning and smoking suits his fancy may suggest.

A woman's wardrobe is slightly more complicated, but among the things it may include are two blouses, one Winter mantle or jacket, one morning dress or jacket, together with a small amount of underwear.

No person is allowed to have more than two pairs of shoes or boots, one pair of house shoes or slippers, (for which pairs of worn boots may be used,) one pair of sandals, exercise or tennis shoes, one pair of wooden shoes, two pillow cases, two bed sheets, two bed covers, one quilt, three towels, two dishcloths, and three dusters.

The amount of cloth which may be used for clothes is reduced. For example, a woman's ordinary dress must be made from four and a quarter meters instead of four and one-half. Shops are already advertising that they can make clothes in accordance with the reduced allowances of material.

All this makes a writer in the Lokal-Anzeiger very mournful. "Darkness and cold in Berlin," he exclaims sadly. "Those are signs of the times, and he must be an optimist indeed who can see things in rosy colors."

GERMANY HAS CALLED MEN UP TO 47 YEARS

Even Those Rejected for Military Unfitness Are Summoned to Army.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 15.—Germany has extended military service to men 47 years old, and is calling up those who have heretofore escaped service on account of military unfitness.

The army already included a large number above the legal limit of 45 years on the ground that although nobody above that age could be mobilized, yet no requirement existed for the discharge of a soldier reaching 45.

The new regulation calls to the colors all exempts born after Sept. 8, 1870.

GOVERNOR DEFENDS PUBLICITY ON TROOPS

INQUISITIVE ABOUT CREEL

Secretary Baker Says Any Disciplining of Officer Will Rest with Pershing.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 15.—Governor Marcus H. Holcomb, in an interview tonight defended the publication of news of the safe arrival in France of Connecticut militiamen, and upheld the action of Colonel Ernest L. Isbell, who sent the much discussed cablegram with the request to "publish." He was not in his offices Saturday when the cablegram was received, but fully upheld his Secretary, John Buckley, in acting as requested in Colonel Isbell's cablegram.

The Governor said:

"I see nothing wrong in printing the cablegram. Especially when the Colonel of the regiment, who sent the message requested its publication by the use of the word 'publish' and when I was assured the message was genuine as it must have been being a censored cablegram.

"I have never received from the War Department or any other branch of the Federal Government any instructions as to what should be published and what should not be, and if any restrictions were received at the capital I would know about them. I had no understanding with Colonel Isbell about his cabling when he reached the other side and the last time I saw him was several months ago at New Haven, when I addressed the two regiments that were combined to give him his command.

"I should be very sorry to know that he became involved in any trouble through the cablegram. However, I can't see what harm can have been done by its publication. It did not give any information to the enemies of our country which could be used to imperil the safety of troops which had landed and were out of harm's way from submarines and mines. It would be a different matter in the case of printing news of the sailing of the transport vessels with troops aboard for the European side. It would be manifestly wrong to print anything about the troops leaving this country.

"I have received no communication from Washington about the cablegram and have never been requested by George Creel or any one else at Washington not to give out news."

The Governor asked several questions about George Creel and his supposed doings at Washington, and expressed interest, in a semi-jocose way, as to what censure might be coming to himself from the national capital.

As a result of the protest of the Creel Committee at Washington, the "news" of the soldiers' arrival is getting renewed publicity. So far as can be discovered, the only person who put the matter up to Washington was the Hartford representative of the International News Service, who at 1:30 P. M. Saturday wired Washington his New York office, and at 1:58 received a reply that the War Department desired that its original instructions should be respected.

"The assertion from Washington that Colonel Isbell of the 102d Infantry has rendered himself liable to court-martial and the Governor of his State liable to censure by his action in calling for publication the news that his command had arrived safely on the other side of the ocean is distressing if true.

"Colonel Isbell's cable was obviously passed by the censor, presumably both the British and American censors. The fact that it apparently violated so far the hitherto preserved restrictions, that it was almost the first really prompt announcement of the arrival of a designated unit, will be indication to those of the Colonel's acquaintance that it possessed the sanction of authority much higher than even the censors. In all his long career Colonel Isbell never sent a message bearing upon military matters without passing it through the proper military channels. It was improbable he had waited until wartime to begin improprieties.

"We incline to the belief that the Colonel knew what he was about, that high command knew what he was about and that high command approved it. That his news came through somewhat quicker than has the news of engineer regiments, hospital units and other forces reaching Europe may indicate that he was more prompt in acting or that the authorities have decided to lessen the severity of their restraints.

"The dispatch could have afforded no aid and comfort to the enemy,' which can hardly be dependent upon Connecticut newspapers for the accomplishments of its Secret Service. It was a mighty cheering, reassuring message. If it has done any damage it is only to the sense of self-importance thriving so plentifully in the person of George Creel."

Pershing to Decide on Discipline.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Aroused by publication in some parts of the country of private cablegrams announcing the arrival of American troops in France, the War and Navy Departments today took steps to prevent a repetition of such incidents.

Secretary Baker indicated today that the War Department was not contemplating ordering any action against the officers involved in the present instances. He said that, while the voluntary censorship rules to which the press in the United States had agreed forbade the publication of such messages, he did not know of any restriction upon officers preventing them from informing their families privately of their arrival in France.

It is understood that the matter is in General Pershing's hands, and that he will determine whether the officers involved shall be disciplined in any way.

EXPLAINS PUBLICITY CHANGE

Daniels Tells Why Navy Bureau's Activities Were Curbed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Secretary Daniels today explained his order which resulted in newspapers being asked not to publish matter sent out by the Naval Publicity Bureau and his decision that all news concerning the navy, given out by any branch of the service, must pass through the hands of the Committee on Public Information. He said that the Navy Publicity Bureau was organized for recruiting purposes, and when that work was completed there was nothing further for it to do in that line. The bureau had authorized the publication of stories that others in the department thought ought not to have gone out, and the Secretary therefore ordered that thenceforth all publishable information should go through one channel.

The Navy Department, Mr. Daniels said, was planning to have more publicity than it has had in the past, but all must pass through the hands of the Committee on Public Information.

D'ANNUNZIO TELLS OF RAID.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Oct. 15.—The award to Gabriele d'Annunzio, for his daring air raid on Cattaro, of his fourth medal for valor since the opening of the war, gives great satisfaction here. The poet is flooded with congratulatory telegrams, among others that of the Caproni brothers, which reads:

"To the ideal commander of the most daring squadron; to the knight of the skies who transforms enthusiasm and faith into lasting action; to him who inspired the great war in the air, our homage of admiration and devotion."

Discussing his raid on Cattaro, d'Annunzio said:

"In my opinion it was the most extraordinary ever attempted by airplanes fitted for flying overland. We crossed the sea with little aid from the compass, making more than 250 miles without any landmark.

"The flight was more enjoyable than any other I have made because of its character of adventure. It was a true and proper adventure of Ulysses. As we sighted the enemy's coast line each one of us felt a mysterious emotion which we shall never forget. The minutes consumed in recognizing places through the mist and the treacherous brilliance of the moon are for me among the most lyric of my memories. I would not exchange for any other remembrance of joy the emotion I felt in recognizing the points of Arza and Ostro. We felt in ourselves a subtle, silent cheerfulness such as must sometimes have been that of Ulysses, while we struck the enemy in his sleep.

"The uncertain play of his signal lights, [referring to the signals which the Austrians flashed, as they supposed, to one of their own flying squadrons, and which pointed out their targets to the Italians,] made us laugh homerically in our seats. I turned toward my pilots and received their beautiful, youthful hilarity through their strange masks, [caution] much higher than even the censors. In all his long career Colonel Isbell never sent a message bearing upon military matters without passing it through the proper military channels. It was improbable he had waited until wartime to begin improprieties.

"What shall I say of our return, of the moment when we discovered in the mist the thin line of our coast? It was like the ravishment of love."

Pershing Reports Two More Deaths.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—General Pershing today advised the War Department of the following deaths in the American Army Expeditionary Force in France: Private Charles F. Hammond, Jr., Field Artillery, died Oct. 9 of acute nephritis; Private Rayner B. Nye, Medical Department, attached to Infantry, died Oct. 13 of acute dilatation.

PERSHING MAY JOIN ALLIED WAR COUNCIL

Washington Considers Participation in Big Conference at Paris This Week

TO PLAN NEW CAMPAIGNS

Winter and Spring Operations on All the Fronts Are to be Taken Up.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Secretary Lansing today admitted that the American Government had under consideration the advisability of sending representatives to the allied military conference which is to be held in Paris the present week.

In this conference there will be a general canvass of the present war situation and the position of the Entente forces on all fronts. The State Department admission went no further than to say that the question of sending delegates to the conference was being considered, but the acknowledgment was considered important, since the decision to have this country represented in the coming conference, if that is the decision reached, will probably mean that this country will be represented in subsequent interallied military councils.

From the meagre official information available here, it has been indicated that among the more important questions which will be considered at the conference are the bringing into complete harmony of the war aims of the Entente Powers and revolutionary Russia; the attitude of the allied nations toward the new Russia, and the assistance which American and the Entente countries can extend so as to help her recover her fighting efficiency, including financial as well as military aid.

Other questions to be discussed are the plans for the Winter campaigns; the Anglo-French and Italian offensives, with special reference to the Spring drives; the Balkan situation, which has taken on fresh characteristics since the adhesion of Greece to the Entente cause, with the consequent swelling of the international army in Macedonia; the Mesopotamian and Palestine operations, and America's contribution to the military and economic strength of the Allies. All these problems will relate directly to the serious shortage of tonnage.

Neutral representatives here believe that their policies also will be discussed at the conference, and that, as a result, even more stringent measures may be directed against them than are now in force in the allied-American effort to make airtight the blockade of Germany and her allies.

It has not been indicated who will represent the United States at the conference, but it is considered likely that Major Gen. Pershing and Ambassador Sharp will be present, and probably, also, Admiral Sims, commanding the United States naval forces in European waters.

PERSHING PRAISES WOMEN.

Flag Presentation the Occasion for Tribute to Their Sacrifices.

AMERICAN TRAINING CAMP IN FRANCE, Oct. 14, (Delayed.)—The Mayor of the town in which the American field headquarters is located presented to General Pershing today a silken American flag, the work of women residents of the place. The ceremony took place in the Hôtel de Ville, the interior of which was decorated with French and American flags. Many French and American officers, civilians, officials, and women were present.

In his presentation speech the Mayor referred to the splendid sacrifices of the women of France and America, who not only were sending away their sons to fight for democracy but were making the war possible by their energetic work at home. Accepting the flag, General Pershing said:

"This occasion brings home to us the tenderness with which our own women bade up good-bye. This war is being fought by women. It is women who suffer and lend courage to us. Women are the ones to whom honor will be due when the war is over, and they will deserve honor for their aid in establishing democracy."

PARIS, Oct. 15.—The French Government has authorized subscriptions in France to the Liberty Loan by American soldiers.

The Government in this instance waives the application of the general decree against subscriptions to foreign loans in France, and also the interdiction of the exportation of money. This privilege is limited to American soldiers.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—An official statement relating to operations around Saloniki, issued today, reads:

GOVERNMENT SEIZES 500 OCEAN STEAMERS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15 — The program of the United States Shipping Board to requisition all American-owned ocean-going steamers of more than 2,500 tons dead weight was put into effect at noon today without a hitch. It was said at the offices of the board that the new charter rate system, which, it is believed, will facilitate the movement of cargoes, had been accepted without complaint.

Sailing vessels and steamers under 2,500 tons do not come under the requisitioning provision, but sailing vessels of American registry have been refused clearance for foreign ports, on the theory that they will prove more effective in coastwise trade. These ships, with small cargo steamers, will replace the larger freighters and passenger ships which from time to time are being taken from the coastwise trade to carry foods, munitions, and troops to Europe.

There are about 2,000,000 tons of shipping—approximately 500 vessels—involved in the commandeer program. Commissioner Bainbridge Colby, who has been in charge of putting the new system into operation, received many favorable reports today concerning the spirit in which ship owners had accepted the Government rulings.

Mr. Colby said the requisitioning would not make any material difference in the present movement of ships.

"We are turning the ships back to the owners to operate them on Government account, under the same system as in England," he said. "We will not disturb them until there is a concrete case of need. Our purpose is to unify the control of all these ships available for ocean traffic. We have fixed a requisition rate, based on a fair appraisal, which replaces the speculative, hectic bidding for tonnage under old private charters. The rates are considerably under the prevalent high rates."

Reports that the French were suffering severely because of a shipping shortage and that a critical situation was faced were discounted in official circles. It was made known that France was being supplied with tonnage from several directions.

SMASH AUSTRIAN ATTACKS.

Italians Successful in Heavy Fighting on the Julian Front.

ROME, Oct. 15.—Heavy fighting took place yesterday along nearly the whole Julian front, the Italians withstanding violent local attacks by the Austrians, launched after extensive artillery preparation, the War Office announced today. Sharp reconnoitring encounters occurred at various points, in some of which prisoners were taken by the Italians.

The text of the statement reads:

On the Trentino and Carnia fronts there was considerable activity by our reconnoitring patrols. Enemy attacks in the Lagarina, Assa, and Felia Valleys failed.

There was lively action of a local nature by the infantry along the entire Julian front. On the southern slopes of Monte Rombon we captured prisoners in a successful surprise attack. Between Castagnavizza and Selo a raid by arditti on the enemy lines brought us other prisoners.

In the Brestovizza Valley large parties of the enemy, protected by bursts of violent artillery and machine-gun fire, approached our lines, but were driven back. Near Lokavac, after lavish artillery preparation, extending from west of Flondar to the sea, the enemy made an attack which was completely broken up. The enemy left prisoners in our hands.

VIENNA, Oct. 15, (via London.)—An official communication issued by the War Office today says:

During the continuance of the unfavorable weather yesterday there was increased fighting activity on Monte San Gabriele and in the Wippach Valley. Enterprises undertaken by our storming troops were successful. Italian thrusts were repulsed.

SAY ALLEGED SPY IS NAVAL OFFICER

of Attorney General Gregory. The man is said to assert that he was born in England and educated in part in Austria. Whether or not he claims American citizenship is not known, but if he does make such a claim the fact that he is held as enemy alien on Ellis Island indicates that the Federal authorities are in possession of proof that he is an alien. No American citizen could be held on Ellis Island. They would either be turned over to the military authorities on Governors Island or else held as a Federal prisoner in the Tombs.

The Secret Service is said to be making a census of the reserve personnel of both the army and navy. The officers of the first line battleships, the cruisers, destroyers, and other vessels which are manned by the regular personnel, it was said last night, can be trusted to be ever on the alert so far as their own ships are concerned, and any German who tried to get into the crew of one of those vessels is certain, in the opinion of the Secret Service agents, to be detected in short order.

"The United States Naval Intelligence Service," said one of the highest officials of the Secret Service last night, "is today one of the most efficient organizations of its kind in the world."

A naval officer pointed out that every new recruit who came on board a battleship or other line vessel was immediately made the subject of an unofficial investigation by the bluejackets.

"These youngsters," he said, "know what has happened in England, and they are taking no chances, and God pity the German who comes aboard one of our ships for the purpose of starting trouble in the interest of the Kaiser."

Another arrest made yesterday was that of a man, said to be a German, who was arrested in Brooklyn as he was going on board the steamship Madawaska, one of the seized German liners, which is being converted into a naval transport for the oversea service.

The prisoner when searched was found to have a bomb in his possession. Whether or not he is an enemy alien, or whether evidence was disclosed to indicate that he intended to blow up the Madawaska, were two questions which Federal agents would not answer.

The arrest was made by A. D. Savage, a chief petty officer of the Navy, who is in charge of the Madawaska. Savage would not say what disposition was made of the prisoner, although it is believed that the man was turned over to agents of the Department of Justice.

DROPS CAPTAIN STAKE FROM THE ARMY ROLLS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. The War Department has begun to go into the records of officers of the Army who have had German affiliations, and it is expected that some of those in the Reserve Corps whose sympathies are believed to have been strongly with Germany will be dropped fro. the rolls. Under the law this may be done without other action than a direction by the President.

An order has been issued by the War Department discharging Captain Walter Stake, Assistant Quartermaster, Officers' Reserve Corps. Ex-Captain Stake was formerly assistant editor of The Fatherland, (now Viereck's Weekly,) the New York publication conducted by George Sylvester Viereck.

No official explanation of the reason for the discharge of Captain Stake was offered in the office of the Secretary of War or that of the Quartermaster General, but the information was obtained in a trustworthy quarter that Captain Stake's former connection with The Fatherland was responsible in some degree for the dropping of his name from the army rolls. There was no disposition on the part of War Department officials to make any charge against him. It was intimated, however, that his pro-German connections had been too marked to permit the War Department to overlook them.

Involved in the Stake case is a curious bit of official procedure that may have had a bearing on the decision to discharge Captain Stake. He was ordered to report for Quartermaster duties at San Antonio, Texas, but before the order became effective it was rescinded, and Captain Stake was ordered to Governors Island, the headquarters of the Eastern Department of the regular army. The story told in connection with the case has it that Captain Stake obtained the services of an influential New York lawyer to have his order changed so that he might take station at Governors Island instead of at San Antonio. At any rate, the order was modified so that Captain Stake remained in the vicinity of New York.

It was learned today that the order for his transfer was changed on the recommendation of the Quartermaster's Department. Major Gen. Henry G. Sharp, the Quartermaster General, could not be seen, although he was in his office, to obtain his version of the report that it was on his recommendation or that of one of his trusted subordinates that Stake was enabled to go to Governors Island instead of the Texas post. The suggestion was made in the Quartermaster General's office that application for information be made to Brig. Gen. David L. Brainard, the administrative officer of the office.

When General Brainard was told what was known concerning the case, he said that the only person who was privileged to make a statement was the Secretary of War. Secretary Baker declined to make any statement other than that he might be quoted as saying that the Secretary of War had nothing to say.

The use of influence to obtain transfers of officers is deprecated by the War Department. Recently efforts to influence the department through outside sources in behalf of certain reserve officers or student officers at Plattsburg caused the department to instruct the commander of that camp to inform those under his command that political or other influence would not count, and that officers and students would be assured of fair treatment if they communicated their desires directly to the department through the proper military channels.

An investigation of Stake's connection with The Fatherland was instituted, after a youth who had formerly worked as a clerk on the Viereck publication, and had later joined the service, met Stake at Governors Island. He told a retired Major of the Regular Army of the meeting, and the Major wrote a letter to the Secret Service asking for an investigation.

A recommendation concerning this case was made by the Secret Service before the order was published on Oct. 4, honorably discharging Stake.

PRESIDENT WANTS GOLD MOBILIZED

est possible foundation, and that they must be adequately and completely conserved so as to respond instantly to every legitimate demand. How can this necessary condition be brought about and be made permanently effective better than by the concentration of the banking strength of our country in the Federal Reserve system?

"May I not, therefore, urge upon the officers and Directors of all non-member State banks and trust companies which have the required amount of capital and surplus to make them eligible for membership to unite with the Federal Reserve system now, and thereby contribute their share to the consolidated gold reserves of the country? I feel sure that as member banks they will aid to a greater degree than is possible otherwise in promoting the national welfare, and that at the same time, by securing for themselves the advantages offered by the Federal Reserve system, they will best serve their own interest and the interest of their customers. I believe that co-operation on the part of the banks is a patriotic duty at this time and that membership in the Federal Reserve system is a distinct and significant evidence of patriotism.

"There are probably eight or nine thousand State banks and trust companies eligible for membership which have not yet united with the system. These institutions have it in their power to add enormously to the resources of the Federal Reserve Banks, thereby broadening and strengthening the foundation upon which our whole financial structure must rest. Permit me to urge that every bank officer and bank Director owes a solemn obligation to the country, which I am sure they wish to discharge. I therefore wish again to impress upon them my solemn conviction that they can best measure up to their duties and responsibilities through membership in the Federal Reserve system.

JUDGE HYLAN DENIES ACTING FOR GOSLIN

RETAINS MOSS AS COUNSEL

Judge John F. Hylan, Tammany Hall-Democratic candidate for Mayor, devoted part of his speech delivered at two Brooklyn meetings last night to making denial of statements embodied in an article which was published in The World yesterday dealing with his relations as Director and counsel of the now defunct Black Diamond Automobile Company.

Judge Hylan, The World asserted, was one of the organizers of the company which was capitalized at $500,000, of which $1,150 was paid in, $1,000 of that amount being the Judge's own money paid for the purchase of 200 shares at $5 each. After a brief unprofitable existence the Black Diamond Company was sued by Judge Hylan for legal services in the amount of $5,995. The claims, assigned by Judge Hylan to Frank J. Herbert, his law clerk, were pressed in suits brought by Mr. Hylan himself until the company filed a petition in bankruptcy, when Alfred R. Goslin, a noted swindler who had served many prison terms, was brought in to reorganize and set the Black Diamond Company on its feet financially again. While the reorganization was pending Goslin, who since has died in Paris, became a fugitive from justice.

What Judge Hylan said last night was directed chiefly toward refuting the charge made in the article that he had acted as counsel for Goslin. Judge Hylan said that he did not know Goslin, and charged that The World was actuated by ulterior motives in publishing the article. Judge Hylan also told his audience that he had retained counsel and taken steps to bring action for libel against The World.

The first meeting which Judge Hylan addressed last night was held at the Democratic Club of the Twentieth Assembly District in Brooklyn at 1,155 Bushwick Avenue. This is Judge Hylan's home district.

"Before discussing with you tonight the issues of this campaign," Judge Hylan said, "I want to call your attention to the latest attempt to distract us from a discussion of the issues. The attempt to hide the corruption and wrongdoing of the Mitchel administration behind the American flag having failed, Mr. Mitchel's supporters now come forward with a new camouflage in the form of an untruthful and libelous attack upon me published in The New York World today.

"In their desperation they have taken a perfectly proper business transaction in which I was forced to go to the courts to collect money due me for professional services, and by working these facts into a tissue of innuendo and insinuation have sought to make it appear that in some way I was connected with some of the transactions of Alfred R. Goslin, a notorious swindler, and that I was his attorney.

"I warned The World before the publication of this libel that I would hold the newspaper responsible under the law for any untruthful and malicious statements it made about me. I also informed them that I had never acted as attorney for Goslin, and had never seen the man in my life. Instead of being Goslin's attorney I had occasion to fight Goslin and his attorneys, Black, Olcott & Gruber. Yet The World printed these ridiculous and untrue statements, and for that malicious publication I have already taken steps to bring The World and every other paper that republished the statement into court. I have retained Mr. Frank Moss and instructed him to bring an action for libel against those newspapers.

Assails Newspaper's Motives.

"Now just one word as to the motive which prompts The World to carry its antagonism to me and its support of Mr. Mitchel to such a malicious extreme.

"You all know that the New York Central Railroad is fighting desperately to get control of the waterfront along the west side and make a freight yard out of Riverside Park. Its only hope of accomplishing that end is in the re-election of Mr. Mitchel, who is the ardent servitor of that railroad and has done everything in his power to surrender the property and rights of the people to the New York Central Railroad.

"One of the things we are fighting in this campaign is to prevent the consummation of such a steal. You may not recall that Mr. Ralph Pulitzer married the daughter of Dr. W. Seward Webb, one of the very large security holders of the New York Central Railroad and related to the Vanderbilt family.

"You can see that my election will interfere with the nice-laid plans to line the pockets of the New York Central security holders, among which Mr. Pulitzer's family is included, at the expense of the people of this city.

"I have no quarrel with Mr. Pulitzer for opposing me, but I intend that the people shall know his motives, and I insist that in that opposition he must stay within the law."

There were about 200 members of the club crowded into the room where Judge Hylan spoke. They were all personal friends or acquaintances, and gave him a very hearty reception when he arrived. William F. Delaney, Democratic leader of the district, introduced Judge Hylan in a speech in which he assailed the newspapers as unfair to the Democratic candidate for Mayor.

After defending himself against The World's charges, Judge Hylan took up an utterance attributed to Mayor Mitchel in a recent interview, and used this as a text for the rest of his speech.

"Now that we have disposed of those untruthful statements," the Judge said, "let me call your attention to a statement made by Mr. Mitchel which reveals him in his true light. I quote from a Sunday article in which Mr. Mitchel is told by a reporter that a lot of people are going to vote against him because they think he belongs to the Four Hundred; that his friends are in high society, and that he has nothing in common with the people. To that Mr. Mitchel replied: 'If they don't like my friends, they can go to hell.'

Tells of the Mayor's Friends.

"Now, let us see who Mr. Mitchel's friends are that we do not like. First, there is William H. Reynolds, Mr. Mitchel's intimate friend, now under indictment. There can be no doubt about the Mayor's friendship for Mr. Reynolds. You will remember in vouching for Mr. Reynold's character to the people of this city in February the Mayor took pains to acclaim Mr. Reynolds his friend. He is so good a friend of Mr. Reynolds that he lost no opportunity to help Mr. Reynolds sell to the city several million dollars' worth of property which is useless, and out of which transaction Mr. Reynolds profited enormously. Had the Mayor been a little less a friend of Mr. Reynolds and little more a friend of the people, who he now says 'can go to hell' if they don't like Reynolds, we might have a few more school houses and less children on half-time.

"Rockefeller is another name you find conspicuous in the list of Mr. Mitchel's friends. It is to Mr. Rockefeller and his paid agents that Mr. Mitchel has turned over the control of the education of our children, disregarding the fact that the Rockefeller idea in education proposes to restrict the training in fundamentals and substitute a system which will train our boys and girls to be workers for the industrial machine of our money kings. This is the same Rockefeller that was responsible for the outrages in the Colorado mine fields and the oil refineries of Bayonne. If we don't like what happened in Colorado and at Bayonne, and if we don't like the surrender of our schools to Rockefeller, and if we don't like to have Rockefeller run the City Government in the interests of the public service corporations and special privilege in general, Mr. Mitchel says we 'can go to hell.'

"If we don't like the fact that William M. Greve, Mr. Reynolds's business partner, and another friend of the Mayor's, refused to waive immunity and go before the Grand Jury and tell the truth about the transactions by which this city was mulcted out of hundreds of thousands in the purchase of the Rockaway sand dunes from Reynolds, Greve and Bailey, the Mayor tells you what you can do about it.

"If we don't like the fact that William Hamlin Childs, Chairman of the Executive Committee in charge of Mr. Mitchel's campaign is one of the Standard Oil associates and that his company has, by reason of closed specifications, obtained a practical monopoly in the sale of paying materials in this city, we are told where to go.

"If we don't like the fact that on this committee, which is managing Mr. Mitchel's campaign, there is one of the registered lobbyists at Albany of the Interborough, which would like to raise the price of street car fares and charge 2 cents for transfers, the Mayor very plainly points to the future residence he has set aside for us.

"If we don't like those 100 men on Mr. Mitchel's Campaign Committee who are interested in the control of 500 corporations, with total capital and resources of $9,000,000,000—corporations which primarily are drawing their revenue from the public and interested in obtaining special privileges from the City Government—the Mayor says we can 'go to hell.'

"This is the answer Mayor Mitchel makes to the charges of rottenness and misrule made against him. They are charges which he cannot answer, and, apparently, he does not care about attempting to justify his official acts.

"This is the kind of answer that might have been expected from an official who has lived for four years as Mr. Mitchel has in this atmosphere of special privilege, invisible government, and obedience to corporate dictation. This arrogant young man who seeks the suffrage of the people has taken his cue from the historic declaration of the late Commodore Vanderbilt who declared: 'The public be damned.'

Says People Cannot Be Browbeaten.

"But the people of New York City cannot be browbeaten into silence. They have witnessed an attempt to debauch the ballot and steal a primary election for Mr. Mitchel; they have seen him try to avoid responsibility for hese frauds by waving the American flag and proclaiming his patriotism, but they have had no answer from him to charges that he has been wasteful and extravagant, and that he has turned the government of the city over to the Rockefeller and allied Wall Street interests. And these charges have been specific and in detail. They are charges which bear upon the real issue of this campaign."

Judge Hylan later repeated his speech at a meeting held under the auspices of the Dock Workers' Hylan League at Third Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street, Brooklyn.

Judge Hylan spent two hours yesterday at the headquarters of the Democratic Fusion Committee, but the Tammany Mayoralty candidate kept in seclusion. All attempts to interview him regarding The World's article proved fruitless. To all inquirers the answer was made that Judge Hylan under no circumstances would discuss campaign matters or the charges with the accredited representatives of the newspapers.

The charges against Judge Hylan led to a hurried conference of the campaign managers at the headquarters of the committee. This was in progress for more than two hours during the afternoon. Judge Hylan in the meantime was attending the base ball game at the Polo Grounds. After the conference it first became known that Mr. Moss had been called in as counsel in a libel action against The World.

No one in a position of power at Democratic Fusion headquarters was willing to comment on the article embodying the charges against the candidate for publication, although some said that they would have little or no effect on the vote for Judge Hylan.

At Tammany Hall it was said that Leader Murphy was out of town and would not be back until today. Men who generally speak for the Tammany Chieftain in his absence sank into silence when they were asked yesterday what would be done to counteract the effect of the charges, or how these would affect the political fortunes of the Tammany candidate for Mayor.

MAYOR URGES LOYALTY AS THE CAMPAIGN ISSUE

Addresses Italian Citizens, Who Pledge Support—Tells Business Men What He Has Done.

Mayor Mitchel forced the issue of Americanism to the front yesterday when he told a delegation of prominent Italian citizens who called upon him at the Hotel Manhattan to assure him of their support that behind his candidacy could not be found any disloyal element, while every man who was opposed to the policy of the present Administration in supporting the national Government in the war—"everybody, beginning with Hearst, running down to Cohalan, O'Leary, Bruckner, and their associates, Untermyer and the whole galaxy of anti-Americans, is opposed to the Administration and particularly to me."

The delegation reported to the Mayor on the progress they have made so far in organizing support for him among fellow Italians in the city. The Mayor thanked them and pointed out that the campaign was such that its success from now on would depend largely upon the personal work of individuals.

The Mayor also addressed a noonday meeting yesterday in "Camp Mitchel" at 557 Broadway, the headquarters of the Commercial and Business Men's League.

"I have just left the Board of Estimate, where we have been working on the budget," the Mayor said at this meeting. "You know that we promised the city a business government, and that we have been and still are striving to make good on that promise. That we succeeded is shown by the fact that the budget for 1917 is $1,250,000 less than it was for 1914. I do not need to tell any of you that next year's increase will be largely due to the greatly increased cost of all supplies which this city needs, and an increased pay for low-priced city employes, the Street Cleaning Department men, and the police and firemen.

"I am sure that you all know these men of these departments, who are doing better work for the city than ever before, deserve the comparatively small increase they will get. I say we have redeemed our promise of four years ago, but the prime consideration is that we have extended and improved all departments. The Police Department has been changed from the Beckers of the system under Mr. Murphy's control to the best the city has ever had, and the same is true of the Fire, Water, Light and Street Cleaning Departments. While Arthur Woods is Commissioner every policeman knows that no man has the influence to get him undeserved promotion as obtained in the past, and Commissioner Woods will retain his office so long as I am Mayor.

"My political opponent, Judge Hylan, is Murphy's candidate, selected by Hearst, and he takes his inspiration on one hand from what Murphy stands for, and on the other from what Hearst stands for in his German propaganda. What Murphy stands for was better expressed some years ago in Mr. Hearst's papers when he said Murphy ought to be in jail. But today they have clasped hands in an unholy alliance. It is said that in this campaign of loyalty I am wrapped up in the American flag, and if I am, what better covering could any man have? But I do not claim any more or greater patriotism than all you have or can be found in all true and loyal men in this city. If there is to be no issue of loyalty in this city, let Judge Hylan repudiate Hearst, Cohalan, and O'Leary. Will the people of this city repudiate this City Government because it has stood for the United States against German horrors?"

Other speakers were E. R. Kennedy, former Park Commissioner of Brooklyn; Albert Turner, who spoke for the Gary school system, and Neils F. Holch, who is in charge of the Liberty Bond sale in the Tenth Police Precinct.

Asserting that he can and will support Mayor Mitchel without being disloyal to Tammany Hall, of which he is a member, Charles Blandy, of the law firm of Blandy, Mooney & Shipman, yesterday said that although he worked for the election of Edward E. McCall four years ago, he would assist in every way to make sure the re-election of Mayor Mitchel.

"No man," said Mr. Blandy, "could be in public office so long as Mayor Mitchel unless he was a mere puppet, without making enemies. The fact that he has made enemies shows that he has been independent and aggressive. I have admired the manner in which Mayor Mitchel has upheld the President, both in preparedness and since the war started. I find the enemies of the Government are opposed to him. His election is a matter of national importance."

KINGS CANDIDATES ASK FOR RECOUNT

CHARGES ALARM DEMOCRATS

Application Also Made for Reexamination of Vote for Supreme Court Candidates.

Through joint action of the two candidates, the opening of Democratic ballot boxes in Kings and re-examination of the ballots cast for Sheriff Edward Riegelmann and Bird S. Coler for the nomination for Borough President of Brooklyn in the recent Democratic primaries has been practically assured.

Algernon I. Nova, a lawyer, of 50 Court Street, Brooklyn, appeared before Justice Van Siclen in the Supreme Court in Long Island City yesterday and obtained an order, returnable before Justice Callaghan of the Supreme Court today, to show cause why the ballot boxes should not be opened and the Riegelmann-Coler ballots reinspected. Mr. Nova said that if the order was affirmed by Justice Callaghan, as he expected, he would be prepared to go on with the recount at once.

The court action followed a conference in the office of Mr. Nova, at which James D. Bell, Chairman of the Kings County Democratic Committee, was present. Shortly afterward this statement was made public by Mr. Nova on behalf of Sheriff Riegelmann and Mr. Coler:

"We have instructed our counsel, A. I. Nova, to take immediate proceedings in the Supreme Court to secure an examination of all the ballots cast in the late primary election for the office of Borough President of Brooklyn. We take this action at this time because of statements in the public press charging that irregularities had taken place in certain districts which might have affected the result. We regard it as a duty which we owe not only to our party but to the public that no doubt should be permitted to rest upon the result of that primary as to who was in fact the nominee. Be the result of that examination what it may, each of us will be bound by it and render loyal support to whoever is declared the candidate."

Sheriff Riegelmann was the regular organization candidate for the nomination in a three-cornered contest with Mr. Coler and Frank J. Prial. Soon after the primary returns, which gave the nomination to Sheriff Riegelmann by 1,262 votes, the cry of fraud was raised and friends of Mr. Coler asserted that he had been counted out. Then District Attorney Lewis of Kings began to take an interest and made an investigation of the returns in a number of election districts.

After this investigation had been under way twenty-four hours, William M. Bennett, the Republican candidate for Mayor, dared his Democratic rival, Judge John F. Hylan, to have the Democratic ballot boxes in Kings opened. Mr. Bennett declared that worse primary frauds had been committed there than in Manhattan. Then Judge Hylan and the other candidates on the Democratic ticket took alarm, and at a conference on Saturday decided on the action taken.

A friend of Mr. Coler said that, in his opinion, a recount of the Riegelmann-Coler vote would show that in the final count Mr. Coler had been cheated out of about 4,000 votes. While the cry for a recount had been raised by persons not immediately interested, Mr. Coler has been silent, for party reasons, some declare.

A re-examination of the vote cast for the designees for Supreme Court nomination in the Second Judicial District, including the Counties of Kings, Queens, Nassau, Suffolk, and Richmond, in the Democratic primaries was demanded yesterday by County Judge Burt J. Humphrey and George J. S. Dowling of Queens, the candidates credited with the lowest number of votes. The vote, as tabulated by the election boards, stood—Kelly, 50,053; Newcombe, 36,921; Lazansky, 36,221; Humphrey, 34,315, and Dowling, 31,997.

An order to show cause why the vote should not be examined was signed by Justice Van Siclen of the Supreme Court at Long Island City. It is returnable before Justice Stephen Callaghan in the Supreme Court today.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday affirmed a decision of Supreme Court Justice Whitaker granting an order to William E. Slevin to open the ballot boxes for a recount in the Municipal Court Justice election contest between Slevin and Municipal Court Justice Leopold Prince. The matter was taken to the Appellate Division by Justice Prince, who, the returns showed, had won the right to be the candidate on the Democratic ticket.

SINGLE TAXERS IN FIELD.

Candidate for Mayor Not a Resident of New York.

A sixth municipal ticket was put in the field yesterday when the Single Tax Party filed its petition of candidates for election with the Board of Elections. The party's candidate for Mayor is George Wallace, a lawyer. He is not a resident of the city, but lives at 80 South Ocean Avenue, Freeport, L. I., and is in business at 33 North Village Avenue, Rockville Centre, L. I. The law states that a candidate for Mayor must be a resident of the city, and, while the Board of Elections has accepted the petition, the matter was referred to the Corporation Counsel for an opinion whether it would be legal to place the candidate's name on the election ballots.

Mr. Wallace's running mates include Antonio Bastida, for Controller, and Benjamin W. Burger, for President of the Board of Aldermen. Both men live in this city.

CORRIGAN TAKES UP FOOD.

Will Discuss Swann's Alleged Failure to Deal with Extortioners.

Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan, independent candidate for District Attorney, will address a mass meeting tonight at Bon Ray Hall, Ninety-second Street and Madison Avenue. He said he would have something further to say on District Attorney Swann's alleged failure "to prosecute the food sharks" and would show how William L. Ransom, the Republican candidate, "will be unable, owing to his machine connections, to protect the New York public against the food extortioners." He said:

"The fact is, no District Attorney owing his nomination to machine influence is a free agent or can give wholehearted service to the people; he must, in the nature of things, be deflected from the straight path of duty at times by considerations that are foreign to the public interest."

PLAN MITCHEL INDORSEMENT

Republican Club Will Act on Resolution Friday Night.

The Republican Club last night decided to hold a special meeting on Friday evening for the purpose of acting on a resolution indorsing Mayor Mitchel for re-election. The resolution was reported last night by the Campaign Committee, of which Henry W. Goddard is Chairman. Under the by-laws of the club, a resolution indorsing a candidate in a municipal campaign cannot be acted upon at the meeting when it is offered.

The resolution says:

"The Republican State Convention held in 1913, adhering to the principles of nonpartisanship in municipal affairs, as established by the Constitution of the State adopted in 1894, indorsed the fusion of all anti-Tammany organizations in this city and recommended that the Republicans of this city that year support the Fusion ticket, headed by our present Mayor, John Purroy Mitchel. The people of this city, following the lead of the Republican Party, elected the candidate on the Fusion ticket that year by a tremendous majority. The result has been the best administration New York City has ever had.

"Mayor Mitchel's courageous and uncompromising Americanism has enabled the City of New York to maintain the position of national leadership. This is no time for partisanship, which would result in placing the safety of life and property in the first city in America in the hands of inexperienced, incompetent, and weak men, or for intrusting official power to those who, whatever their attitude, are supported by very dangerous, sinister, and unpatriotic influence. Be it, therefore,

"Resolved, That this club indorse the candidacy of John Purroy Mitchel for Mayor of the City of New York and his associates on the Fusion ticket, and we pledge them most hearty and loyal support."

MARCUS'S DEED PRAISED.

Daniels Extols Action of Commander of Submarine.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The official report of the investigation of the explosion on the submarine A-7 at Manila last July, which resulted in the death of her commander, Lieutenant Arnold Marcus of San Francisco, and several men, praises the conduct of Lieutenant Marcus in the highest terms.

Secretary Daniels, in a letter transmitting the report to the officer's widow, concurs with the official board's report that Lieutenant Marcus, by his gallant conduct when he was dying, upheld "the best traditions of the service."

The official investigation disclosed that after the explosion, caused by the ignition of gasoline vapor by an electric switch, Lieutenant Marcus sent all of his men out of the hold before leaving himself; went to the bridge while suffering from burns which killed him, and personally took the helm with the idea of saving his ship by beaching her. When rescue ships took off the crew, Lieutenant Marcus refused to leave and asked that he be disregarded.

"It was shown from the evidence brought before the board," Secretary Daniels wrote, "that the conduct of your husband was that of a most gallant officer, who, although fatally injured, without regard to self, devoted every action and thought to the care of his vessel and men."

PUSHES FITNESS ISSUE.

Mayor Tells City Democrats About the Hylan Disclosures.

The issue of the personal fitness of Judge John F. Hylan to hold office was introduced into the campaign by Mayor Mitchel last night in a speech at the City Democracy Club house at 235 East 109th Street. The Mayor took up the article published yesterday, referring to Judge Hylan's connection with the Black Diamond Automobile Company.

"To the issue of honest government versus Tammany Hall and of loyal Americanism against Hearst and the pro-Germans there is added the issue which was framed when the disclosures of this morning came to the people of the city," said the Mayor. "And that is the issue of personal fitness for the office. I have wondered since reading the story that was published of Mr. Hylan's personal and professional transactions whether it might be that Mr. Murphy selected his candidate with a cunning knowledge of that in order that after he was in office to have a lever by which to compel compliance with his will. It has happened before under Mr. Murphy, and it is not inconceivable that it might happen again."

Mayor Mitchel also addressed meetings last night at the Park View Palace on 110th Street and at Camp Mitchel, on 125th Street. The meetings from the point of attendance were the best so far in the campaign. At Park View Palace, where fully a thousand persons crowded the hall, there was one heckler. The Mayor was describing the increase in efficiency in the Police Department under Commissioner Arthur Woods when a voice called out:

"Why did the police beat the women up in the east side food riots?"

There were cries of "Answer, answer," from the crowd, and Mayor Mitchel said:

"You want an answer. When I assumed office the first direction I gave to the Police Commissioner was that the policy of forbidding the use of clubs upon peaceful and law-abiding citizens in this city should continue, [applause,] and that the police officer found guilty of so using his club without warrant—and warrant meant the danger of attack upon himself or an active breach of the peace involving a felony—should be punished and disciplined by his Commissioner. That policy has been followed.

"There were disturbances when those people came to the City Hall. There was disorder. If clubs were used, and used improperly, upon people who were not guilty of breaches of the peace, the Commissioner of Police was under direction, and I have no doubt he has followed the direction to impose discipline upon those men, and let me say to you concerning that matter that the day when that committee came to the City Hall no one had notified me of their intention to come or I should have met them as I met the earlier committee that called upon me. I am prepared at all times to meet all committees that come to the City Hall to discuss public questions with me and to present any reasonable demands that any City Government ought to consider or ought to sanction."

Iowa Votes for "Dry" Amendment.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Oct. 15.—With a majority estimated at 30,000 to 35,000, Iowa voters today decided to prohibit the manufacture and sale of liquor in this State by constitutional amendment. The State has been dry by statutory provision for two years. The amendment becomes effective immediately.

"Who is this man for whom it was necessary to commit all these frauds?," he demanded.

"The great posters on the streets, which show him in a uniform for the wearing of which, if he tried it, he would be arrested, say it is because he is a fighting Mayor. But for whom does he fight?

"When he aided in enriching his close personal friend, ex-Senator Reynolds, by taking troublesome real estate off his hands at fancy prices, when he fought in favor of these deals, was he fighting for the citizens of New York City or was he fighting for ex-Senator Reynolds?

"When he fought to turn over to a railroad the waterfront of New York City from 129th Street to Spuyten Duyvil, was he fighting for the city or for the New York Central?

"When he established a system of espionage by wiretapping, the like of which never existed in any country on earth, not even in Russia, was he fighting for the city or for private interests?"

Mr. Bennett said that there was no business man in this city who was fighting against Mayor Mitchel or opposing interests favorable to Mayor Mitchel who did not believe that his telephone wires were being tapped.

Mr. Bennett began a new attack on Mayor Mitchel for introducing the issue of patriotism, whereas he insisted that Mayor Mitchel had not shown that he possessed any large amount of that virtue. The audience applauded when some one shouted:

"He's a pasteboard soldier!"

Mr. Bennett went on to charge Mayor Mitchel with having wasted the city's money and crippled the city's power for real work of improvement by investing too much in "fads and extravagances" of Government and buying too much property which "a ring of real estate speculators wanted to dispose of."

LA FOLLETTE HINTS DODGING OF INQUIRY

Asks Detailed Charges as to "Disloyalty" and Requires Full Protection.

MAY NOT APPEAR TODAY

Pomerene Says Committee Seeks First to Establish the Accuracy of St. Paul Speech.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—A decided hint was sent by Senator La Follette today to the committee investigating his utterances and attitude that he would ignore its request that he appear before it tomorrow with whatever proof he might have as to the truth of anti-war statements made in his St. Paul speech.

The Wisconsin pacifist demanded that the committee reduce its charges against him to particularized accusations, and permit him to make his defense in his own way after the procedure in criminal cases. "After" and not "before" these requests were granted, he said, he would desire to appear before the committee.

Senator Pomerene, Chairman of the investigating committee, replied in a conciliatory tone. He said the committee was seeking all the truth in the controversy. He hoped Senator La Follette would aid these labors by giving the sources of the information on which he based his statements. He assumed that, if the Wisconsin man had since found his statements not well founded, he would be "eager to correct them." Senator Pomerene concluded:

"The sub-committee renews its invitation of the 12th inst. for you to appear before it at the committee room of the Committee on Privileges and Elections at 10:30 A. M. on the 16th day of October, 1917, and hopes you will accept it."

Senator La Follette was silent after receiving the letter. His friends said that if he attended the meeting tomorrow at all it would be a mere technical appearance.

Raises Question of Disloyalty.

"The public has been led to believe," said Senator La Follette in his letter, "that the action of your committee is the initial step involving the title to my seat in the United States Senate, and that the investigation you are making is for the purpose of determining the validity of the charge of disloyalty made against me—the gravest charge that can be made against a public servant. If this is not the purpose of your investigation, then it seems to me both the public and myself are entitled to know it now.

"You further say in your letter of the 12th inst. that at the next session of the sub-committee, Tuesday, Oct. 16, it is the desire of the sub-committee 'to afford you (me) an opportunity to be heard and to inform the committee with reference to the accuracy of various statements in the speech referred to.'

"The procedure you contemplate following as indicated by the above, if I understand you correctly, is most extraordinary and wholly unprecedented. It amounts to nothing less than requesting me to support the accuracy of various statements—which are not indicated by you—in the speech in advance of any information from your committee that any of the statements are challenged, or if so, by whom they are challenged, or in what manner."

Senator La Follette argued that the humblest person accused of a misdemeanor invariably was confronted with the specific charge against him; with the evidence unfriendly to him, and face to face by the witnesses hostile to him. He demanded, therefore:

"What statements, if any, in the speech are challenged? In what respect is the accuracy of any statement in the speech challenged?

"Has any evidence been offered to the committee tending to show that any statement in the speech is not accurate? If so, I ask that I be accorded the right to inspect such evidence. I insist upon my right to meet face to face and cross-examine any person who challenges the accuracy of any statement in my speech."

This would include, according to the best information of the committee, Secretary of State Lansing, former Secretary Bryan, and President Wilson himself. All are said to have denied to Chairman Pomerene that Secretary Bryan warned the President, four days before the Lusitania sailed, that she was illegally laden with munitions, as Senator La Follette alleged in his St. Paul speech.

Expects Advice of Counsel.

"After these requests have been complied with," continued Senator La Follette, "if it shall appear that any evidence has been submitted to the committee tending to show that any of the statements in the speech are inacurate, I shall then and not before [These six words are underlined in the letter] desire to offer such evidence in reply as I deem necessary to meet the proof, if any is produced, tending to show inaccuracies in the speech. I shall expect also to have the advice and assistance of counsel at every step of the proceeding, as well as compulsory process to secure the attendance of witnesses and the production of records and documents."

Senator Pomerene replied that the committee conceived it to be its duty to ascertain the accuracy of the statements in the St. Paul speech "for the purpose of enabling the full committee to determine whether or not charges shall be later preferred." He admitted that at present the sub-committee had no direct accusation against Senator La Follette.

Regarding Senator La Follette's St. Paul statement, he wrote:

"Our only desire is to arrive at the truth of them before making a report to the full committee. The committee assumes that if the statements in the speech are well founded you will be glad to testify and to give your authority for them. If they are not, it assumes you will be eager to correct them and thereby assist the committee in arriving at the real facts. In any event they feel that the simplest and most direct way to conduct the inquiry is to invite you to appear before it as the one witness best qualified to verify the statements contained in your speech, or to make such explanation as you may desire, and to give the committee the sources of your information."

Senator Pomerene warned Senator La Follette that once he appeared before the committee all its members would consider it their right to question him concerning any phase of his St. Paul speech.

ACTION BY REPUBLICAN CLUB.

Petition to the Senate Asks Expulsion of La Follette.

The Republican Club, at its regular monthly meeting last night, adopted by unanimous vote a resolution calling on the United States Senate to expel Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, as his continuance in high office would be "fraught with danger to the Republic." Here is the resolution:

In this grave period of national concern, when the people of the country, inspired with grim determination, are prepared to offer their lives and all their material resources to preserve their honor and security against the sinister, brutal, and perfidious attack made upon them by the Imperial German Government, the supreme duty of every American is in every way to uphold the National Executive and all other authorities intrusted with the prosecution of the war for civilization and to refrain, by act and speech, from doing aught which will impair or weaken their efforts to bring about a successful and speedy conclusion of the conflict into which the United States has been forced. He who fails in this duty is recreant to the nation's interests, gives comfort and strength to the enemy, and becomes directly responsible for an increased and unnecessary sacrifice of the lives of America's defenders. Whether the offender occupy a high official position or an humble place in civil life, the nation's security requires that he be dealt with effectively, sternly, and promptly. The higher and more public his station, the more aggravated and dangerous is his wrongdoing.

Whereas, Robert M. La Follette, a Senator of the United States from the State of Wisconsin, has on various occasions, in the Senate and elsewhere, given utterance to sentiments which give conclusive proof of his opposition to the nation's course in entering and prosecuting the war in which this country is now engaged, and has by this conduct incited and stimulated others to seditious and disloyal speech and acts; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Republican Club of the City of New York regards the continuance in high office of the said Robert M. La Follette as fraught with danger to the Republic and hereby respectfully petitions the Senate of the United States to expel said Robert M. La Follette from membership therein; and be it further

Resolved, That the President of the club be and he hereby is directed to communicate with the Senators from the State of New York and request them, at the earliest possible moment, to lay this preamble and these resolutions before the Senate of the United States; and, be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this preamble and these resolutions, duly authenticated by the President and Secretary of the club, be sent to the President and the Vice President of the United States and to the Senators from the State of New York, and that copies of the same be also sent to each other Senator of the United States and to every member of the House of Representatives.

DEMAND LA FOLLETTE QUIT.

Wisconsin Men Ask for His Expulsion or Retirement.

Special to The New York Times.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 15.—The following resolution, introduced by Irwin R. Nye of Bayfield, Wis., was unanimously adopted today at a State-wide meeting of the members of the Wisconsin State and County Councils of Defense, meeting in the university armory:

"We declare emphatic condemnation of the course that has been and is being pursued by Robert M. La Follette, the senior United States Senator from this State, in opposing the prosecution of this war into which our nation has been forced.

"We demand that he, Robert Marion La Follette, do our State an honor by forthwith resigning his Senatorship. Should he fail so to do, we ask on behalf of the people of this State, who have conclusively proven Wisconsin's loyalty, that the Senate of the United States cleans itself by expelling him from membership in that body when the Congress shall have reassembled in December."

SUSPENDS GERMAN EDITION.

Appleton (Wis.) Paper Will Appear Herafter in English.

Special to The New York Times.

APPLETON, Wis., Oct. 15.—The Appleton Volks Freund, the largest German language weekly in the State outside of Milwaukee, has suspended publication, and an English language daily will be started in its place, according to Richard Meyer, President of the Volks Freund Company. This is on account of the stringent law compelling publishers of German papers to submit a correct translation of all war news, editorials, or comments on the war to the postmaster before publishing.

The Volks Freund has communicated with its subscribers and according to replies received they are willing to stand by the paper and subscribe to the English daily, although many say they cannot read English, but will have their children read it.

MAYOR ASKS MURPHY ABOUT MR. HYLAN

light of the disclosures made this morning Mr. Murphy must explain, as well as Mr. Hylan.

"The public remembers that Governor Sulzer was impeached by Mr. Murphy after the club which Murphy held over his head had proved ineffective. I ask Mr. Murphy whether he was ignorant of Judge Hylan's past, or whether he knew of it, and intended to use it as a club should Judge Hylan become Mayor and prove disobedient."

Discusses Whitman's Statement.

Earlier in the day the Mayor, who appeared to be more confident than at any time since the primaries, commented further upon the statement of Governor Whitman that disloyalty was not an issue in the municipal campaign. All that Judge Hylan had to do to eliminate it as an issue, the Mayor said, was for him to repudiate William R. Hearst, Daniel F. Cohalan, Jeremiah O'Leary, and Henry Bruckner, the Democratic candidate for Borough President of the Bronx.

"I notice," said the Mayor, "that Governor Whitman in his statement last night said that he was only slightly acquainted with Judge Hylan and had no doubt of his loyalty to the country. I, like Governor Whitman, am very slightly acquainted with Judge Hylan—in fact, have only seen him across the bar of the Board of Estimate—but I do know who his backers are in this campaign. It is those backers who have raised the issue of Americanism and loyalty in this campaign; that is to say, the seditious and disloyal element in the community who are engaged in a bitter assault upon me because of the strongly American position taken by my administration.

"Now, to the point. If Judge Hylan wishes to eliminate the question of loyalty and Americanism from this campaign, he has a very simple way of doing it. Let him repudiate Hearst and all that Hearst stands for, the doctrine of the Hearst editorials. Let him repudiate Mr. Cohalan, Mr. Murphy's personal adviser, and all Cohalan stands for. Let him repudiate O'Leary, whose relative is directing Hylan's campaign, and all O'Leary stands for; O'Leary, to whom President Wilson wrote a year ago saying that he did not want his disloyal vote or the votes of men like him. Finally, let him repudiate Henry Bruckner, who supported the McLemore resolution and recorded himself thereby for the von Tirpitz submarine policy. That is the way we can get rid of the American loyalty issue in this campaign. We can't get rid of it in any other way."

The Mayor said that he was thoroughly satisfied with the receptions he had received to date at the meetings he has addressed.

"I am always satisfied," he said, "when a crowd wants to know something and gets an answer. In Greenpoint I had a crowd that evidently was not friendly, and they asked a number of questions. Every one they asked was completely answered, and they were silenced. I am not afraid to answer questions from the platform or anywhere else, and I do not think anybody is fit to be elected Mayor who is afraid to subject himself to questions."

The Mayor added that he was well pleased with the registration last week, as it showed that a large percentage of the so-called silent or independent vote had been registered. The Mayor said he would keep right on making the so-called Gary school system an issue in the campaign.

"The school issue," he said, "will be an issue until the people understand what the school problem of the Board of Education and what the financial support of the Board of Estimate have been. It is an issue only because of the amount of lying that has been done about it. When understood, it won't be an issue, and our task is to make the people understand what the Gary experiment really is."

Queens Independents for Fusion.

Independent Democrats in Queens are taking an active part in the Fusion campaign in behalf of Mayor Mitchel, it was announced at Fusion headquarters yesterday. Headquarters have already been opened in various parts of the county. Joseph Fried has started a citizens' movement at Far Rockaway and is meeting with success in enrolling citizens who are independent in politics and who favor Mayor Mitchel's re-election. Independent Democrats of Jamaica have opened headquarters, with Alvin Dunham in charge.

TIEUP IN HARBOR MAY BE AVERTED

Settlement of Difference Practically Agreed Upon at Washington Conference.

MAY ARBITRATE DEMANDS

Tug Owners Say They Cannot Grant Request of Men for Higher Wages and Shorter Hours.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The danger of a tieup in New York Harbor because of the threatened strike of longshoremen and other workers was practically ended today at a conference attended by R. B. Stevens of the Shipping Board and T. V. O'Connor, President of the International Longshoremen's Union. They left for New York tonight to confer with the employers, and said that wage demands undoubtedly would be arbitrated and the question of the open or closed shop put over for the present. Both were confident that a speedy agreement would be reached.

After conferences lasting four hours yesterday the New York Boat Owners' Association and the New York Towboat Exchange decided they could not grant the demands for higher wages and shorter hours made on them last week by their crews. The owners declared that they would turn over their vessels operating in New York Harbor to the United States Shipping Board for the period of the war, rather than submit to the demands. There are 170 tugboats belonging to the companies forming the New York Towboat Exchange, and their value is estimated at $5,000,000. The owners said in reply to the ultimatum sent out by their employes that they had been working for the Government in this port at a loss, but did not mind that, as they considered it a patriotic duty to do so.

Captains, engineers, and deck hands generally are satisfied, the owners declared, and the trouble, they asserted, was caused by walking delegates from the various unions urging the crews of the tugboats and floats to demand more money while the companies are all busy with Government contracts.

Both the New York Boat Owners' Association, which comprises owners of floats, barges, and any other kind of harbor craft that has no propelling power, and the New York Towboat Exchange have appointed a committee to meet R. B. Stevens, Vice Chairman of the United States Shipping Board, who is coming from Washington, and T. V. O'Connor, President of the International Longshoremen's Association, at the Custom House today. Other representatives of the marine workers of New York Harbor will attend the meeting, when both sides will be heard.

"The demand for increase is made without relation to the service of the men employed on the tugs and regardless of their size," the statement of the New York Towboat Exchange reads. "For instance, it is demanded that all Captains of towboats shall receive $150 a month and board of $18 a month, making a total of $168. This is asked for a man on board of a small tug towing a single canal boat or a harbor lighter, the same as for the man on a large, powerful towboat handling ocean steamships. The example applies to the demands of each member of the crew on a tug, whether large or small.

"The present rates for towage are all that the business can stand," the statement further explained. "The shipping community whom we are serving can pay no more. Finally, none of our members will agree that our boats are to be manned by any but members of the association represented by the Marine Workmen's Affiliation, or any other organization."

The statement, in conclusion, announced the willingness of the members of the exchange to meet their employes and discuss their demands, but insisted that the Marine Workmen's Affiliation does not represent these employes.

COAL SUPPLY AMPLE, GARFIELD ANNOUNCES

Seizures by Communities in the Middle West Are Deplored by Administration.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Communities really in need of coal can get it at Government prices, Fuel Administrator Garfield announced tonight, and the supply is ample to meet immediate needs even in the Middle West, where an acute condition arose through failure, he said, of cities to state their needs specifically.

Appeals should be made to the fuel administrators in each State, Dr. Garfield said, but where there is no State administrator, communication should be made directly to the Fuel Administration here.

Dr. Garfield, who has just returned from Ohio, where he discussed the situation in that State with Homer H. Johnson of Cleveland, the new State Administrator, served warning against attempts of communities to confiscate coal in transit, cases of which were reported from places in the Middle West.

"When local officials," he said, "have undertaken to confiscate coal for the use of public institutions or local communities, they not only have assumed to exercise powers not vested in them, but, at the best, would be required to pay contract prices for the coal, instead of the lower prices fixed by the Fuel Administration. When the Fuel Administration acts it has the power to furnish coal at Government prices."

Arrangements to relieve a threatened coal shortage in Michigan were made by the Fuel Administration tonight after the situation had been presented by Governor Sleeper and members of the State Coal Board. Enough coal will be diverted from shipments now going through lake ports to the Northwest and Canada to meet pressing needs.

Produced in the Laboratory of Thos A. Edison

There, behind those secret doors, whence have come so many miracles of genius, The New Edison was conceived.

The same master who gave you electric light and motion pictures; who made the telephone and the telegraph practical, has given you also Music's Re-Creation.

Can you believe that Thomas A. Edison could have spent five full years of his fruitful life to give you "just another phonograph?" Is it not likely that his genius has produced infinitely more in

The NEW EDISON

No Needles to Change
Can Be Made to Play All Makes of Records

Think of this as an indication of what the master inventor has accomplished:

His instrument is the only one which has passed the test of actual comparison with the living tone.

800,000 music lovers have heard this test and, as over 500 newspaper critics have publicly declared, it was impossible for the ear to distinguish original from Re-Creation.

Who could expect so much from a "talking machine?" Indeed, what "talking machine" has dared to venture this test?

CLOSES LOOPHOLES FOR ENEMY TRADE

War Trade Board Will Require Iron-Clad Pledges of All Seeking Shipping Licenses.

RE-EXPORTATION IS BARRED

Exporters Must Satisfy the Government as to the Final Destination of Every Cargo.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The new War Trade Board lost no time today in exercising the powers granted in the Trading with the Enemy act, to end Germany's last hope of profiting, through indirect channels, by American products or capital invested in this country.

Hereafter exporters who apply for licenses must sign an ironclad agreement that they will not sell or deliver, directly or indirectly, or trade, or engage in the doing of any business with enemies or enemy allies or their agents, at least for the period of the war.

This agreement is to include all exporting and trading under severe restrictions which are set forth in detail. Exporters must make it possible for the United States Government to determine the final destination of every cargo and the actual use to which it is put.

It is provided that no business may be carried on through exporting or re-exporting with the Government, agent, or agency of an enemy country or its allies, and that American products must not be permitted to contribute even in the most indirect manner to the supplies of the enemy.

At present the Government is putting its program into effect by refusing to release ships of the northern neutral nations loaded with wheat and fodder which might feed herds in Holland and other countries which supply fats to Germany. Germany is represented, in the case of Holland, at least, by an unofficial agency which has dealings with an agency representing the Dutch.

The board's announcement reads:

"Shippers' agreement provided by the War Trade Board:

"The War Trade Board, created by the Executive Order signed by the President on Oct. 12, 1917, has drawn up the following agreement to be signed by exporters when shipping to their own branches:

To the War Trade Board, Washington, D. C.:

In consideration of the issuance to us of the license or licenses for which application is pending before the War Trade Board, permitting shipment to us or to branch houses or agencies in countries other than the United States, we do hereby represent and declare and agree as follows:

1. That none of the articles contained in any of the shipments for the licensing of which applications are pending will be directly or indirectly re-exported, or sold, transferred, or delivered, either in their present or any other form, contrary to the engagement herein contained.

2. Neither we nor any of our branches or agencies are now engaged in exporting, re-exporting, selling, trading or doing business contrary to the terms of this engagement; and we declare that during the continuance of the present war we and none of our branches or agencies will export, re-export, sell, trade or do business, directly or indirectly, with any enemy or enemy ally as herein defined, to wit:

(a) Persons or associations of persons residing in any country or ally of any country with which the United States is at war, including any territory occupied by the military or naval forces of such enemy or enemy ally nation.

(b) Any such persons or associations residing outside of the United States and doing business within such enemy or ally of enemy territory.

(c) Corporations incorporated in any country or ally of any country with which the United States is at war, including territory occupied by the military or naval forces of such enemy or enemy ally.

(d) Corporations incorporated in any country except the United States and doing business within such enemy or enemy ally country or territory.

(e) The Government of any nation or ally or any nation with which the United States is at war, or any political or municipal subdivision thereof, or any officer, official, agent or agency thereof.

(f) Such other persons, natives, citizens or subjects of any country or ally of any country with which the United States is at war (other than citizens of the United States,) wherever resident or doing business, as may by any Presidential proclamation be included within the term "enemy."

3. And we engage not to sell or deliver directly or indirectly, or trade, or engage in the doing of any business with enemies or enemy allies, as herein defined, or for or on account of, or on behalf of, any such enemy or enemy allies during the continuance of the present war. And this engagement and declaration includes all exporting, trading and doing business and shall not be construed as limited to the goods or articles described in the pending application for license.

4. No sales or deliveries of any of the articles constituting such shipments shall be made without having first obtained the written approval of the United States Consul at the place where such sale or delivery is to be made.

5. This is a continuing obligation upon our part and shall apply without further agreement to all future shipments.

It is understood that the War Trade Board will soon issue further orders putting into effect new powers of the Trading with the Enemy Act. It is not unlikely that the German-controlled public utilities in South America, which are now permitted to obtain coal for their maintenance under license, may come up for drastic treatment, as the Government is determined to stop the use of money made in such manner to aid Germany, if proof is obtained that such aid is given.

The first order of the War Trade Board, made public tonight, tightens the embargo upon shipments of munitions to Mexico. In the future regular applications for permits must be made for such shipments, regardless of their size. Heretofore less than $100 worth of munitions could be sent into Mexico under a customs collector's license, granted upon a declaration by the shipper as to destination and purpose.

CONFERS AGAIN WITH MAYO.

But Daniels Will Give No Hint of the Naval Questions Discussed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. — Secretary Daniels had another conference at his Wyoming Avenue residence tonight with Admiral Mayo, commander of the Atlantic fleet, who has just returned from the inter-allied naval conference at London. Admiral Benson, Chief of Naval Operations, and other members of the General Board of the Navy were present at tonight's meeting. The Secretary refused to comment on the nature of these conferences or to authorize any statement regarding the oral reports that have been made by Admiral Mayo.

More Liberty Bonds Arrive.

Six million dollars worth of the new 4 per cent. Liberty Loan bonds arrived here yesterday from Washington, and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York promptly placed them on sale "over the counter," and made allotments to sixty-six banks in this district which have urgently pleaded for the bonds. The bons should have been delivered long before this, but the delay in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving in Washington is said to have been unavoidable. The Reserve Bank had 428 "cash customers," consisting of men, women, and children, most of whom came to buy a $50 or a $100 bond. The sales totaled $41,700, the same including three $500 bonds and thirteen $1,000 bonds. Today it is expected that practically all the banks and trust companies will have a limited supply of the new bonds on hand, which they will sell for cash. The Reserve Bank will receive daily shipments from Washington, and it is believed that within a short time the demand will be supplied.

Mayor Mitchel addressed about 500 furriers at the Masonic Temple yesterday, and following his appeal for subscriptions to the war loan there were gathered up applications to the amount of $1,800,000. The fur merchants have come from all parts of the country and Canada to attend the annual Fall sale.

"Because you have made more money this year than ever before," said the Mayor, "your country has the right to ask you, and does ask you, to subscribe to the second Liberty Loan. No war was ever fought without money, and this is the most expensive war in history. In these days, when the loyalty of certain citizens in this city is being questioned, the best answer you can give America's enemies is to oversubscribe the loan."

Among those contributing $25,000, or more, were: Becker Brothers & Co., $50,000; M. Cohen & Brothers, $50,000; Chapal Freres & Cie, $100,000; William Eitingon, $50,000; Eitingon, Schild Company, $50,000; A. and J. Engel, $35,000; Gottlieb Brothers, $50,000; Gross, Engel & Co., $25,000; New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, $100,000; A. H. Herskowitz & Son, $50,000; William Jackmann's Sons, $25,000; Kaufman, Oberleder & Co., $25,000; S. J. Manne & Brother, $25,000; Joseph S. Steiner & Brothers, $50,000; Theodore Forer, $25,000; Joseph Ullmann, $50,000; J. Gaudig & Blum, $50,000; Kaye & Einstein, $25,000.

The Advisory Trades Committee of the second Liberty Loan announced yesterday that complete figures for the first two weeks of the campaign showed that the 120 trades in this city had raised $53,407,000. This is approximately $220,000,000 short of the amount that should be on hand at this time. The trades committees set out to obtain $520,000,000 in subscriptions. It is planned to speed up the work during the remaining eleven days.

The shipping export and import trade leads the list with $7,120,000 collected. Others well up in the column are: Tobacco trade, $3,391,000; sugar trade, $2,750,000; jewelry trade, $2,262,000; chemical and drug trade, $2,250,000; fur trade, $1,400,000, and the distillers, $1,000,000.

Cold Spring, Islip, and Cazenovia have the honor of being the first towns in the New York Federal Reserve District to report an oversubscription of their Liberty Loan quota. Cold Spring leads with $89,550 in an allotment of $60,000, or 149 per cent.; Islip follows with $70,050 in an allotment of $64,500, or 110 per cent., and Cazenovia is third with $116,400 subscribed in a quota of $106,500, or 109 per cent.

Charles M. Schwab's Appeal.

Charles M. Schwab, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, in a statement issued yesterday, declared that the investor in a Liberty bond not only bettered his own position from a "long-range economic viewpoint," but also gave active support to the American Government in its battle to uphold the principles and spirit of 1776.

"Never before in the history of the United States has the ordinary citizen had the opportunity which is afforded to him by the second Liberty Loan," Mr. Schwab said. "Not only can he better his own position from the long-range economic viewpoint, but here is his chance emphatically and effectively to demonstrate that he stands behind his Government in the great fight for the principles and the spirit of 1776.

"It seldom happens that we have a national crisis which calls so loudly for the support of each and every citizen as does the present war. In fact, if this war is to be won it will have to be won by the sacrifices, personal and material, of the rank and file of the American people. Every buyer of a fifty-dollar bond can gain tremendous satisfaction from this situation. He or she has the most extraordinary assurance that the amount of money contributed in the great cause, no matter how great or small, represents the ultimate effort to preserve the traditions of our colonial forefathers—traditions so vital in their appeal that in less than a century and a half they have resulted in expanding this country into the greatest, the wealthiest, and, therefore, the most powerful nation on earth. The great duty for each of us now is to see that our priceless liberty is maintained, to see that not the least iota of this liberty be lost, to prove to the world and posterity that each and every one of us intends that this country's freedom shall always be at the disposal of all who desire it. The bit of money that each of us invests in this great undertaking cannot possibly be risked in a better cause, and the fact that it is risked so willingly, so unanimously, makes it certain it cannot be lost."

President Hibben Urges Aid.

President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University declared yesterday that the success of the Liberty Loan would give to the whole world unmistakable evidence that the United States was in earnest when she entered the war. President Hibben said:

"If you purchase a Liberty bond you help to support one or more soldiers who represent you and are fighting for you at the front. In a critical emergency you help your own Government without any sacrifice to yourself. You can give and yet lose nothing by the giving. It is your country that the soldier fights for, as well as his own. It is your home for which he is ready to die. It is your wife and children whose lives and honor his own life defends. The chosen guards of your country are willing to go through hell itself for you and all you hold dear. Will you not resolve that the very best possible equipment shall be theirs, the wisest provision for their health and security, and the most skillful guidance into the storm of battle and the victory beyond?

"The success of this Liberty Loan campaign will be to the whole world a declaration and a proof that America is in earnest and is grimly determined to put an end as soon as possible, and once for all, to the hideous warfare which Germany has waged to defeat, degrade, and dominate the free peoples of the world."

The Governors of New York, Connecticut and New Jersey, as well as the Mayors of all important cities within the Second Federal Reserve District, were urged yesterday by Governor Benjamin Strong of the Federal Reserve Bank to issue a proclamation similar to that of President Wilson, setting aside Oct. 24 for the holding of special Liberty Loan meetings in every community.

Guy Emerson, Director of Publicity for the Second Federal Reserve District, has sent the following letter to Isaac Gimbel, President of Gimbel Brothers, congratulating the firm on its subscription of $1,000,000 of Liberty Loan bonds.

Liberty Loan Committee.
Publicity Department.
120 Broadway, New York.
Oct. 12, 1917.

Isaac Gimbel, Esq., President Gimbel Brothers, New York City.

Dear Mr. Gimbel: It is my privilege to write to you in behalf of Governor Strong and the other members of the Liberty Loan Committee to express most sincere congratulations on your generous subscription of $1,000,000 of Liberty bonds for the New York store of Gimbel Brothers.

You have a large following in New York and elsewhere, a great portion of which will be guided by your spirit of patriotism and good business judgment. Very truly yours, GUY EMERSON, Director of Publicity, Second Federal Reserve District.

A Liberty loan meeting will be held this evening at Cooper Union. The speakers will include Abram I. Elkus, ex-Ambassador to Turkey; George W. Wickersham, formerly United States Attorney General; John A. Kingsbury, Commissioner of Charities, and Samuel C. Benson.

City College's plan of having every student subscribe a dollar to the Liberty Loan has been taken up by Dr. John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education, and will be extended to all the students of the State of New York under the name, "The City College Liberty Loan Scheme." A committee of fifty representative City College men has been appointed to push the sale of the dollar subscriptions in the college and to speak on behalf of the loan in schools and other meeting places during the bond campaign.

WASHINGTON REPORTS THE OUTLOOK BETTER

Estimates of the Loan Subscription Now Reach a Total of $800,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. — Liberty Loan reports received at the Treasury Department today and tonight indicated a sharp upward turn of the subscription curve. From a total of $390,000,000 Saturday night the figures went up to $714,000,000, and the estimates at the Liberty Loan Division were that more than $800,000,000, or 16 per cent. of the expected total, had been subscribed. This means that in two business days the country has taken as many bonds as had been applied for in the preceding twelve days.

Unofficial and incomplete reports from eight of the twelve Federal Reserve bank districts, added to official reports from three other districts, showed a grand total of approximately $714,000,000. The official returns are known to be less than the actual subscriptions. The $800,000,000 estimate, which is thought to be liberal, makes allowance for sales in the Minneapolis district, from which no report has been received since the drive started, on Oct. 1, and the probable increase in the other three districts in which no new figures are available.

Totals to date, including official reports from the Richmond, St. Louis, and Dallas districts up to the close of business Saturday night, follow:

New York	$300,000,000	San Francisco	$31,000,000
Kansas City	50,000,000	Atlanta	9,000,000
Cleveland	72,000,000	St. Louis	5,756,000
Chicago	66,000,000	Dallas	3,175,000

Reports from New York previously indicated that the $300,000,000 mark had been passed. It was not until today, however, that the Treasury Department was advised that the New York committee had moved the hands of its giant clock, showing the progress of subscriptions, up to that point. The Philadelphia committee tonight made its first estimate on its district total, and it did not include sales in all outside cities, of which there have been many.

A flood of small subscriptions in the Boston, Cleveland, and Chicago districts greatly increased their totals and gave workers high hopes of achieving their maximums with the aid of large subscribers later. The Cleveland total was divided as follows: Pittsburgh, $29,000,000; Cleveland, $23,000,000; Cincinnati, $11,000,000; Toledo, $3,250,000; Lexington, $3,250,000, and Columbus, $2,500,000.

Six New England States reported the following totals: Massachusetts, $40,898,000; Rhode Island, $10,188,000; Connecticut, $9,805,000; Maine, $3,272,000; New Hampshire, $2,494,000, and Vermont, $1,924,000. Totals of some of the larger cities were: Boston, $25,000,000; Providence, $8,500,000; Hartford, $5,000,000; New Bedford, $2,410,000, and Springfield, $2,205,000. Plymouth, N. H., with a record of $510,000, was the first New England City to pass its minimum quota.

Thirty-one thousand persons have bought bonds in Chicago, bringing the total for the city proper to $13,742,350. Women will subscribe $1,000,000, it is declared. The Kansas City district campaign is "just getting under way," according to an optimistic message received tonight. The regular daily Liberty Loan luncheon in Kansas City today resulted in added subscriptions of $440,000.

From Coronado Beach, Cal., Secretary McAdoo today directed the Treasury Department to forward to the Governors of all States the following dispatch:

"The President by proclamation has designated Wednesday, Oct. 24, as Liberty Day, and has made the afternoon of that day a holiday for all Federal employes throughout the country whose services can be spared. The success of the Liberty Loan is so vital to the nation that it is the first duty of every citizen to support to the utmost the financial measures essential to the effective and successful prosecution of the war.

"The observance of Liberty Day by the people of each State in the Union will immeasurably stimulate the sale of United States Liberty bonds, the subscriptions to which will close on Oct. 27, 1917. The co-operation of the Governors of the various States of the Union is indispensable to the proper observance of Liberty Day and to the successful completion of the second Liberty Loan. May I not beg that you will by proclamation designate Oct. 24 as Liberty Day within your State and to make the afternoon of that day a legal holiday, if it is in your power to do so? If it cannot be made a legal holiday, will you not urge that stores and all public places be closed on the afternoon of that day and that the people in the cities, towns, and country districts join in appropriate ceremonies?

"I have requested the organizations co-operating in the Liberty Loan campaign to do everything in their power to encourage patriotic demonstrations on that day and to promote the success of the Liberty Loan. May I not also suggest that in your proclamation you request the Mayors and other local governing authorities to make it a special point to co-operate in their several localities to celebrate Liberty Day?

"W. G. McADOO."

URGES AID FOR BORROWERS.

Loan Committee Appeals to Banks for Easy Terms for Bond Buyers.

The Liberty Loan Committee has sent letters to all banks and trust companies in this district suggesting that a margin of not more than 10 per cent. be asked on loans secured by Liberty Loan bonds. Attention of the bankers has also been directed to the recommendation of the Clearing House Committee, of which Walter E. Frew, President of the Corn Exchange Bank, is Chairman, that customers of banks be encouraged to borrow freely for the purpose of financing their Liberty Loan subscriptions.

The letter sent to the banks follows:

"In order that the banks may assist subscriptions to the Second Liberty Loan in every way, as in the flotation of the first issue of Liberty bonds, the Clearing House Committee again recommends that loans secured by Government bonds or interim receipts therefor be made, when circumstances warrant, at a rate not higher than one-half per cent. above the rate established by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York for the rediscount of paper secured by Government bonds or interim receipts, and that not more than 10 per cent. margin be required.

"It is further recommended that the banks freely use their discount privilege with the Federal Reserve Bank, and that loans to customers secured by bonds of the Liberty Loan should not be considered as part of the regular lines previously granted to them for commercial purposes.

"As the banks in rediscounting with the Federal Reserve Bank would obligate themselves to take up their bills at the end of ninety days, (the limit of time for which the Federal Reserve Bank can discount,) the suggested spread of one-half per cent. in the rate would seem equitable.

"The Liberty Loan is fundamentally one to be taken by the people, and customers of banks are urged not only to invest their surplus funds and present savings, but also to borrow freely from their banks in order to increase their subscriptions."

BOSTON TOTAL IS $68,381,000.

Every One Urged to Devote Hour a Day to Bond Sale.

BOSTON, Oct. 15.—Every man and woman in New England was urged today to devote at least one hour a day to work on the Liberty Loan to insure success in raising the maximum quota of $560,000,000 for this district. The Loan Committee expressed the belief tonight that the loan in this region was dragging because people had not given it enough serious attention.

Reports today added $9,291,000 to the grand total, bringing it to $68,381,000. Three banking institutions made million-dollar subscriptions on their own accounts, which were not included in the tabulated reports of the day. They were the National Shawmut Bank and the State Street Trust Company of this city and the Industrial Trust Company of Providence.

WHITMAN SPEAKS FOR LOAN.

Gives Addresses at Women's Bank and Before Body of Employes.

Governor Whitman made two speeches for the Liberty Loan at large meetings here yesterday. His first speech, at the "Liberty Bank," conducted by the National League for Women's Service, in Madison Square, was followed by a large sale of bonds. After the Governor and Sergeant Guy Empey of "Over the Top" fame, had spoken, Gertrude Atherton, the novelist, and other women workers helped to make up the list of buyers. The largest amount was $25,000, taken by Mrs. John T. Pratt, Chairman for the Second Federal Reserve District of the Women's Liberty Loan Committee.

In beginning his speech at Madison Square the Governor recalled political speeches he had made there, and told his audience that he had been asking for votes for political candidates or for something for only a part of the people.

"Now I am not asking you for something only for a candidate or a party, but for the people of the city, of the State, and for every citizen in the country. I am asking nothing you are not more than willing to give for the cause of civilization and humanity."

After the Madison Square meeting Governor Whitman went to a Liberty Loan meeting of the employes of Kurzman & Co., at Thirty-sixth Street and Fifth Avenue. His talk there was similar to that given at the Madison Square meeting. He said that by lending money "to the most secure bank in the world, our Government," the public was not only making a good investment, but it was also aiding in equipping and feeding armies so that there would be a minimum of loss of life from sickness and inability to combat the modern weapons of the enemy.

Governor Whitman and Sergeant Empey had as members of their party Mrs. William G. McAdoo, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, and President Wilson's cousin, John A. Wilson.

INVESTIGATE CHEMICAL FIRE

Cause of Explosion in College Point Plant Not Determined.

Thomas Brophy, Fire Marshal in Brooklyn, continued his investigation of the causes of the $250,000 explosion and fire in the plant of the British-American Chemical Company at College Point, L. I., on Saturday, when damage was also caused to the plants of the L. W. F. Manufacturing Company, makers of airplanes for the Government. Several chemists of the British-American Company were summoned to the Municipal Building yesterday, but they reiterated that war supplies were not made in their laboratories, and that the fire spread to the airplane factory despite their efforts to check it.

Officials of the British-American Company said the fire had followed an explosion in one of the condensing systems and that they had been unable to find a cause for the explosion. They said also that an explosion had occurred in another condenser several days before and that the resultant fire had been put out without the aid of the Fire Department. No report upon the first fire had been made by the Fire Marshal, but he has expressed the opinion that it was accidental. He will continue the investigation.

More Bonds and Less Blood

DURING the first year of the war the taking of a German trench cost endless lives. The fields of France were soaked with the blood of French and British soldiers.

Last week a wounded officer in New York described his part in Haig's advance. His regiment took a German trench without losing a single life. The German trench was demolished.

These are simple facts. Yet they are facts which go straight to the hearts of the men and women of the United States whose boys are going into the trenches during the next few months.

These facts do not constitute an appeal. They simply express the deepest, strongest, most lasting emotion of the human heart—the love of sons and husbands and brothers.

The bravery of men, the offer of their lives—is the great glory of manhood today. But the saving of these men from unnecessary risk is the triumph of modern science and invention.

This is the whole story. Let us give our men the most wonderfully complete protection that the genius and power of united America can devise. Guns and shells save lives. Liberty Bonds provide the guns and shells. Is there anywhere in this great, young nation a man or woman or child with heart so cold as to hesitate? Where the choice is clear between lending our money to our Government and permitting one unnecessary drop of blood to be shed by our boys in France—when it is bonds or blood—who will deny we will take three, five, yes, fifty billions of bonds if necessary?

Go to your bank or any department store today and put every dollar you can spare at work saving lives and bringing those boys home alive and victorious.

The stockings that are hanging from bayonets must be the first to be filled.

Santa Claus must make his first visit to the trenches, the turrets and the fighting tops.

The money best spent for Christmas this year will go for our officers, soldiers and sailors.

And the needs of the boys "over there," at the training camps here and on the battle ships have been more carefully studied by this establishment than by any other house in existence.

NEW YORK GREETS LEADERS OF SOUTH

DISCUSS AFTER-WAR TRADE

CO-OPERATE WITH NORTH

Speaker Says World's Lanes of Trade Will Centre in New York.

The Southern Commercial Congress began in New York yesterday its ninth annual convention, and the first which has ever met outside of the Southern States. With Governors and Senators and Congressmen from most of the Southern States at the head of thousands of visiting merchants, manufacturers, and bankers, it was officially greeted by the State and City of New York and by representatives of Southerners who have become domesticated here, and set forth on a three-day program of depicting the varied activities and the unlimited possibilities of the Southern States.

A plan was presented to the congress for a comprehensive advertising campaign, at a cost of $1,000,000, to set before the people of the United States—the tourist, the investor, the merchant, the settler, the young farmer or business man who seeks a freer field than the one in which he has grown up—the possibilities of all sorts offered by the South. These possibilities and the solid achievements wrought by the men who have built up the new South from the ruins left by the civil war were portrayed by speakers from various sections of that region, and methods of economic improvement and advancement were talked over in various group meetings.

In another of these gatherings the response of Southern business men to the war emergencies was described by speakers from several different States, and in still another woman's work was discussed. Last night Southern Governors talked of the rising of the South in response to the nation's call, and the Southern Society of New York closed the day's meetings with a reception for the visiting statesmen.

The group meetings are continued today, with good roads and agriculture the principal topics. The diplomatic representatives of the nations allied with the United States are the guests of the Congress, and will be guests of honor at a dinner given at the Astor tonight. The diplomats will meet at the Waldorf at 10 o'clock this morning and will drive to Forty-first Street and the North River, where a naval vessel sent by Secretary Daniels will be waiting to take them on a tour about Manhattan Island. At 12:15 they will land at the Battery and will proceed up Broadway to the City Hall, where Mayor Mitchel and his Committee on National Defense will receive the diplomats, the visiting Governors, and members of the Congress.

SAY SOUTHERN STATES STAND BEHIND WILSON

Speakers at the House of Southern Governors, which met in the Hotel Astor last night as part of the ninth annual convention of the Southern Commercial Congress, made it plain to their hearers that the Southern States were elaborately organized for war and that their populations, with but few foreigners to breed dissension, are unalterably behind President Wilson.

"The people of Maryland are wholeheartedly behind the President," said Governor Emerson C. Harrington of Maryland. "We have organized every hamlet in the State and committees of men and women have done splendid service. I followed the President with some reluctance when the Lusitania was sunk and we did nothing; I followed him with some reluctance when Mexican soldiers invaded our country and killed American soldiers and we did nothing, but I now thank God that we had a man like Woodrow Wilson at the head of our nation. Every Governor will stand behind him fair and square until victory crowns the American arms and until we have a worthy peace."

The loyalty of the South and its organized readiness to play a full part in prosecuting the war was pledged similarly by Governor Richard I. Manning of South Carolina, who presided. Gov. Manning asserted that his State would buy Liberty bonds to the limit. The gathering then passed a resolution indorsing the loan and urging all to participate in it to the fullest extent possible.

A new era for Pan America and Pan Americanism was one fruit of victory in the war which John Barrett, Director General of the Pan American Union, the next speaker, promised. He said:

"When the war is concluded, we will realise tht it has done more than any other international influence since the declaration of the Monroe Doctrine, in 1823, to develop ideal and permanent Pan American solidarity; that it has accomplished more than all the diplomatic notes of a century to make the Monroe Doctrine an unquestioned principle in the relationship of nations. After the war the Monroe Doctrine must and will become a great Pan American doctrine. Then it will belong to, and be espoused by, every other American Government from Canada, Cuba, and Mexico south to Argentina, Uruguay, and Chile, as much as by the United States. Then, being Pan American and supported by every American Government, it will be forever accepted and respected by the rest of the world—and, in its essence, become a world doctrine standing for the integrity, independence, and self-government of every nation, great and small.

"Victory for the United States and the Allies will remove for all time the only international menace to the Monroe Doctrine. The new Pan America and new Pan Americanism which will follow the war will also be so powerful in their own inherent strength and backing that never again can a new menace from the old world assert itself."

Governor Edge of New Jersey urged support of his Southern neighbors in efforts to maintain militia organizations within the States during wartime and to get for them necessary Federal support.

The varied enterprises of the State of Maine in support of the country in its emergency were detailed by Governor Carl E. Milliken of that State. Among them he mentioned the work of Committees of Public Safety and Councils of National Defense, the passage of laws providing for dependent families of men in service, additional police protection, registration of automobiles, and listing of alien enemies, as well as State-wide surveys of resources.

The response of Southern business to the war emergency was discussed at one of the sectional meetings of the Southern Commercial Congress, held in the afternoon in the East Ballroom of the Astor, and speakers from half a dozen Southern States told of the willing and energetic response which the business men of their particular sections had made to the demands of the national conflict against Germany.

Leland Hume, Second Vice President of the Congress, said that the time had passed when business men prided themselves on taking no part in politics, and now regarded politics as "the real business of the country."

"Business men are not moved by sentiment," he said. "Deeper and more serious considerations are required to put them in motion. But in the crisis that faces us practically all the business men of the country have risen in their might; they have decided that all that they have and all that they are shall be dedicated on the nation's altar."

Thomas S. Southgate, First Vice President of the Congress; William H. Saunders, its Treasurer; H. S. Shelor, Julian S. Carr, and S. T. Morgan told the various phases of the South's response to business conditions.

John Temple Graves, speaking on "The South and the New Republic," said that the spirit of patriotism in this war was like that in the Spanish-American war, when "the States south of Mason and Dixon's line gave more men to the service of the country in proportion to population than any other section."

Edward N. Breitung advocated the mobilization and extension of credits both for farmers and manufacturers, which he declared was a vital necessity if America is to compete with other nations which pay lower prices for labor and materials.

"We can get a credit system," he declared, "which will allow us to do world business and will enable us to pay our workmen large wages and have a far greater business than any other nation ever had."

NEW DEVICE WARNS OF AIRSHIP APPROACH

Calvin W. Rice Tells Southern Congress of What American Inventors Have Done in War.

American inventors have made great strides in improving methods of attacking aircraft, it was stated yesterday by Calvin W. Rice, Secretary of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, who spoke on "The War Activities of the Technical Societies" before the Engineering and Research Section of the Southern Commercial Congress at the Hotel Astor.

An American inventor, Mr. Rice said, working in connection with the National Research Council, has developed a device for locating airplanes by sound, an invention which makes impossible a surprise attack by airplanes, and which enables a warning to be given in time, so that airplanes may be sent to attack the aircraft whose approach is detected.

Another invention of American genius, strengthening defense against aircraft from land or from warships, is an improved fire-control device for regulating the fire of anti-aircraft guns. Another American invention of great importance in air fighting and in making observations of the enemy from aircraft is an adaptation of the wireless telephone which makes it possible for one aircraft pilot to telephone to another while both are in the air.

One subject under investigation, which Mr. Rice touched on, was an application of the principle of locating airplanes by sound to the problem of finding the range of enemy artillery by the report of their firing. A number of American scientists are at work on this method of searching out enemy batteries behind the lines—a novelty of American origin in modern warfare, which is called "sound ranging."

Other American steel experts are at work, Mr. Rice said, in experimenting with a great many forms of steel protection to save soldiers in and out of the trenches from rifle and shrapnel fire. Mr. Rice said that it was believed that important progress was being made in this respect, but that no detail of protective armor being developed could be made known at this time.

One of the greatest achievements of American energy and scientific skill, Mr. Rice said, had been that of improving the manufacture of the optical glass required in all sorts of military and naval service, such as periscopes, range-finders, sights, and field glasses. Until the war began the United States had been almost solely dependent on Germany for optical glass, and the only modern periscopes in the United States Navy two years ago were of German manufacture.

Inventions and proposals for improvements in naval fighting apparatus were coming to the Naval Consulting Board at the rate of more than 200 a day, the public was told, and this made necessary the continuous voluntary service of a large number of representatives of technical societies, in order that everything submitted to the Naval Consulting Board should have a fair hearing.

Phinehas Varnum Stephens, a consulting engineer of this city and Chairman of the Engineering and Research Committees, urged that this country should not make the mistake, which England and France were now repenting, of stripping universities and technical schools of instructors in engineering and half-trained engineering students. He added that it would take five or six years to repair the mischief done, if a wholesale movement to the army of students and professors took place from technical schools.

Nothing Unusual.

An advertising agency placed in The New York Times a want advertisement for a companion to a mother who had lost an only daughter. Three days later the agency wrote this letter to The Times:

It may interest you, as it certainly surprises me, to know that a little three-line advertisement, Help Wanted Female, (companion,) placed by us for a client on Wednesday, and appearing exclusively in The Times, was capable of producing 107 written replies and a number of personal calls. I have had some experience in this line, but that number of replies, and more particularly at this time, simply amazes me.

CALLS FOR $1,000,000 TO ADVERTISE SOUTH

E. B. Wilson Urges Commercial Congress to Conduct Wide Publicity Campaign.

BUREAU FOR NATION ALSO

Lindsay Russell Says England and Germany Used Publicity to Promote Their Interests Abroad.

In the North Ball Room of the Astor yesterday afternoon one of the sectional meetings of the Southern Commercial Congress discussed the question of advertising the resources and possibilities of that district under the slogan, proposed by Edwin Bird Wilson of "Success in the Sunny South." Mr. Wilson proposed a plan for this advertising, St. Elmo Massengale of Atlanta and Herbert S. Houston discussed the need of it, Mayor James H. Preston of Baltimore told how his city had been advertised with great success, and Lindsay Russell, President of the Japan Society, discussed methods of national advertising.

Mr. Russell made a strong plea for publicity work by the United States to put trade conditions in this country before the world in the years to come, and discussed the publicity methods of other nations. Germany, he said, had persistently sought to sow discord among other nations, treating public opinion as a commodity to be bought and sold; England had freely used publicity to promote her interests abroad, and the Japanese had been handicapped by "the barrier of language, their instinctive reserve, and Bushido, the old samurai spirit of silence under attack."

Nations in Need of Good-will.

"A nation," he said, "like a business corporation, stands in need of good-will. It cannot in this age live to itself alone. A national Government is compelled to deal with so many problems of commerce and finance and on so vast a scale that it may, without losing sight of its other functions, regard itself as a gigantic corporation inrusted with the task of safeguarding the interests and material welfare of its nationals.

"With the end of the world war will come baffling problems of reconstruction. Money must be secured with which to rehabilitate industry and commerce. A market must, therefore, be obtained for securities. There will be keen competition also to control the tides of tourist travel bringing their rich argosies of treasure. How are these feats to be accomplished? We are on the eve of a contest of extra-national publicity such as we have not heretofore seen.

"What are we as a nation doing to extend our ideas, our ideals and our social system into foreign lands to blaze the trail through national publicity for American trade and industry, especially in those countries where the barrier of language exists? Neither our Government nor our Chambers of Commerce have given this subject the attention it merits, nor have individual Americans who are doing this work for the common good, such as publishers of American papers in foreign countries and others at home rendering a service of interpretation, had the encouragement and support they deserve.

"It becomes vitally necessary for us to anticipate what Germany, as an outlaw nation, and other nations may do after the war to further national policies through publicity, legitimate and otherwise. Our national security demands at least defensive measures. Educational publicity is especially needed in Russia just now to combat the influences working against us.

Advocates Publishing Papers Abroad.

"The establishment in foreign countries of clean and progressive weekly American newspapers, such as we have in The Japan Advertiser in Tokio, published daily, primarily for their influence on the vernacular press and to create a bulletin service of brief news items in each country, supplemented by direct advertisements in vernacular papers, are points to be considered.

"A weekly paper would have a limited circulation, but it would be clipped largely by American papers, and thus it would serve as a window through which we could look into those countries. As an offensive and defensive measure the necessity will become apparent to us as we become more aggressive in foreign trade. True, American publications already exist, but they cannot well subsist after the war without support, which will surely be proffered from other sources if American merchants do not do their part. Perhaps there is no better way to approach this whole subject than through a permanent bureau specializing on this one subject.

"Nations, in their attempt to influence public opinion, have tried various methods. Germany is the most conspicuous example of persistent effort to further national policies and commerce, treating public opinion as a commodity to be bought and sold. Her campaign was successful for the reason that it was unsuspected, and therefore, no effort was made to offset it. The war between Russia and Japan is a case in point. In the light or subsequent events it is fairly clear how German statesmen used the German press and the Russian press to bring about that war. We now know to what a strain the friendly relations between the United States and Japan have been subjected in the last ten years and the trouble we have had with Mexico as a result of German propaganda.

"France, too, has been the victim of Prussian intrigue. Prior to the present war Germany attempted to manipulate the French press in such a maner as to partially defeat armament appropriations and to disrupt other national policies. All this is now a matter of history. The present Bolo Pacha disclosures reveal a continuation of her policy and indicate what we must combat in future.

A favorite method of press control has been to combine German banks and business houses in an agreement to patronize the advertising columns of only those papers which gave prominent and favorable display to German news and propaganda.

"Shanghai has been the centre of activity, and the German Boxer indemnity, the fund from which German publicity in the Far East, and to some extent in the United States, for the purpose of creating dissension between this country and Japan, was directed. In fact, China has been a hotbed of political intrigue and vicious international publicity.

"Great Britain has freely used publicity to promote her interests in foreign countries. Reuter's News Service has been one of the agencies employed. Recently a huge patriotic fund has been raised by subscription in England for the purpose, it is said, of 'saving England's face' and post-bellum commerce, especially in the Orient. Press propaganda, reinforced by pamphlets, facts, and moving pictures, is being spread throughout China. Britishers almost without exception, business men, and even missionaries, are doing their part to preserve the good will which England has built up in that country at ... years of effort. One of the most credible publications in the Orient, The New East of Tokio, has this purpose in view. Only last year Great Britain established a school for Oriental studies in London, at an annual cost of $75,000.

Japan Lacks Publicity.

"Japan has done little to place her story before the world. Let a libel be published in the United States against England, France, Russia, or Germany, and at once from a thousand sources there spring denials and a statement of the facts. Even China has a potent voice in self-defense through hundreds of Chinese educated in this country and three or four thousand Americans residing in China. She also maintains a news bureau in New York. But one may publish any misstatement or canard regarding Japan; one may write a muckraking article flagrantly unjust to the Island Empire, with comparative impunity. There is no loss of subscriptions to the publisher; there are no wrathful advertisers. In the entire United States there are only a few Japanese who can or will write effectively in defense of Japan. There are but few Americans who have the knowledge and the inclination to do so. Why, it may be asked, do not the Japanese adopt the tactics of other nationals? The barrier of language and their instinctive reserve handicap them. Bushido, the old Samurai spirit of silence under attack, is theirs. Japan has no Roosevelt or Lloyd George to advertise and popularize her."

Mr. Russell also referred to the national advertising undertaken by the Canadian Pacific Railway and the specific work of Brazil in advertising coffee and Formosa tea. He predicted that the United States would probably be the principal scene of competition in national advertising after the war, but thought that this would be of considerable benefit to this country by rousing the American people to greater knowledge of and interest in foreign peoples and affairs.

Advertising Helped Baltimore.

Mayor Preston told of the work Baltimore had done in advertising her great improvements in public utilities, transit and terminal facilities, and harbor and dock conditions, and said that this campaign had resulted in the acquisition of $100,000,000 worth of new industries and additions to old plants for the city.

"An intelligent, active, and discriminating follow-up," he said, "is in the minds of advertising men the most important and perhaps the most difficult. Now a city government rarely contains in its municipal activities an agency suited to carefully follow up prospects that have come in reply to advertisements, and the jealousy among manufacturers and the membership of trade bodies often will prevent a satisfactory examination and exploitation of the prospects as they come in. This question of follow-up is embarrassing and difficult. In practice we have had to depend on the multiplicity of our agencies in getting good results."

Mr. Houston said that if the Congress adjourned without a definite plan to give wide and effective distribution to the information about the South that was presented there it could be likened to a high-power dynamo with no machinery to run.

"The South," he said, "has been advertised to its hurt and disadvantage more than any other section in the world. The news of a lynching will travel further than the news of all the work the South has done in building up the black man so that he may be a useful member of society. A Frank case will get more publicity, to the great damage of the South, than the factories you are building, the colleges you are endowing, the progress you are making on all constructive lines. Why shouldn't this congress see that the whole truth about the South is told?"

Mr. Massengale undertook to present the variety and extent of Southern resources and their great growth in recent years, as well as the varied appeal which the South makes, not only to Northern money but to Northern settlers.

"The South should advertise," he said, "for the same reason that any business firm should advertise—because she has the goods and knows it, but all the world doesn't know it. She was the poor relation of Uncle Sam's family a few years ago, but now, praise Providence, she has grown up and learned to make a living for herself, with a little bit left over for the rest of the country."

He told of the attractions of Southern land and the Southern climate, no less for the young farmer who finds that the lands about his own home are all pre-empted and cost more than he can afford than for the "business men who have left their investments in safe hands and are in search of a climate where they can play golf 350 days in the year and poker the other fifteen."

Would Spend a Million.

Mr. Wilson presented a plan for a three-year advertising campaign, to be conducted by the congress, at a cost of $1,000,000. The slogan, he said, should be "Success in the Sunny South," and most of the advertisements should be in the form of stories of success.

He recommended the use of magazines, newspapers, agricultural, and trade publications, moving pictures, and art posters in the campaign, and a clearing house for information, to be established by the Congress, which should not only answer queries and conduct follow-up work but prepare booklets of information and clear the literature of publicity and information of all the business and industrial bodies of the Southern States.

"A great and far-reaching economy," he said, "could be effected in this national emergency by directing the efforts of farmers and manufacturers to the fields of the Southland, where farming and manufacturing can be carried on uninterruptedly the twelve months of the year; where several crops instead of one can be grown between January and December; where raw materials are at hand in unlimited abundance, and where the labor problem is less complicated than in most parts of the country. In this great crisis the nation cannot afford to waste the efforts of its agriculturists on barren ground under unfavorable climatic conditions. It cannot afford to waste the efforts of its manufacturers in places far remote from raw supplies and under unfavorable labor conditions."

LAUD ALLIES' PRESS FOR PUBLIC SERVICE

300 Newspaper Editors and Publishers Guests of Southern Congress.

Nearly 300 newspaper editors and publishers were entertained at luncheon at the Hotel McAlpin by the Information Committee of the Southern Commercial Congress, of which Herbert S. Houston, Chairman of the National Advertising Advisory Committee, and ex-President of the Associated Advertising Club of the world, is Chairman. Stephane Lausanne, editor of the Paris Matin, was the guest of honor, and responded for France; Melville E. Stone, general manager of The Associated Press, spoke for America, and Dr. Toyokichi Iyenaga, managing editor of the East and West News Bureau, for Japan. Their speeches were a tribute to the efficiency and public service of an honest press, and a warning of the evil influence of corrupt or sensational publication.

Mr. Houston, in introducing the guest of honor, praised the work of the newspapers of America and the allied countries in pointing out the true interest of their nations and in getting forth the truth in answer to the campaigns of manipulated news which were part of the war methods of the Central Powers.

"It is because the press is a shining mark of power," he said, "that Germany has launched against it every poisoned arrow she could find in her armory of treachery and mendacity. But even so skilful an archer as Bolo, supported by so infamous a diplomat as Bernstorff, has accomplished little in Paris or New York except to throw into high relief the incorruptibility, fidelity, and patriotism of the press of the Allies. A few yellow exceptions on either side of the sea are conspicuous, not because of their importance, but because of their dishonor."

It was to those yellow exceptions, however, that Dr. Iyenaga devoted a considerable portion of his speech. He dealt particularly with what he called the insane attacks of American yellow journals on Japan, and their effect in Japan. From some Japanese papers, he said, they had provoked response, but had not affected the representative papers of his country.

"The respectable and influential papers of Japan," he said, "remained undisturbed, and simply ignored the extravagance of American yellow journalism, for they had a clear insight into the business policy of some American papers to secure wide circulation and the inside working of American politics. The responsible press of Japan has never wavered in its profound faith that the best interests of America and Japan lie in their perfect mutual understanding, and has consequently never stooped to play a dirty trick by furthering its private interest at the expense of the public weal.

"The ideals of America and Japan are one and the same. We want the sanctity of treaties to be respected, and not to be torn up into scraps of paper at the whim of the war lord of Europe. We want the principle of 'Live and let live' firmly established, and its antithesis, 'We are the overlords of the earth, let the rest go to the devil,' which in German is 'Deutschland ueber Alles,' eternally banished from the face of the globe."

Mr. Lausanne attributed the unity and patriotism of all classes in France very largely to the attitude of the press, which, without regard to partisan views, had been loyal to the nation and unwaveringly patriotic.

"We are fighting for an ideal of liberty," he said. "That spirit of Prussianism which is opposed to liberty must go. We fight for a victory that will not be a victory for England, for France, for Russia, or for the United States merely, but for all the world, and for peace and liberty and democracy."

Mr. Stone praised the loyalty of the press in America, and told how at a meeting of The Associated Press, 1,100 newspaper proprietors had voted as one man for firm support of the war. He discussed the behavior of the German authorities, and said: "For a hundred years to come persons with German names will blush for shame whenever they think of the atrocities committed by the German Government."

Harry Lauder entertained the guests, and then at the close of the luncheon turned to seriousness, told how one of his sons had been killed at the front, and declared that there must be no cessation of the war until Prussian autocracy was crushed.

A reception was held in the afternoon by the Woman's Auxiliary of the congress in the Rose Room at the Hotel Astor. Miss Louise G. Lindsley, the President of the General Woman's Auxiliary, made an introductory address, Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Chairman of the New York Woman's Auxiliary, welcomed the women attending the congress to this city. A response was made by Mrs. Moultrie Mordecai, State President of the Woman's Auxiliary of South Carolina. The Marchioness of Aberdeen and Teamir, President of the International Council of Women, made a brief address. An address was also made by Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett of Virginia.

GOVERNOR AND MAYOR WELCOME DELEGATES

President of Congress Says This City Will Soon Be Focusing Point of World's Trade.

The delegates to the Southern Commercial Congress were greeted in the name of New York yesterday at the Astor in the opening session of their three-day convention, and were told by Governor Whitman that the South was destined to be the central link in the chain of countries unravaged by war, the three Americas, on which would fall much of the work of rehabilitation of the world in the years to follow the great conflict.

"In the post-bellum period," he said, "the section which you gentlemen represent should know a development unprecedented outside of America, for the very qualities that have made America in 100 years what she is will be at the call of the world, which as never before will be the voice of humanity in dire need.

"We have excused our lack of military preparedness on the ground that we did not believe that war was coming. We cannot excuse our failure to prepare commercially for the aftermath by saying that we do not believe it is going to end. With nine Central and South American countries already hand in hand with us, it is the highly important task of the South to draw more of them to us and to hold to the United States those already united with us.

"New York as the financial centre, working through and with the Southern Commercial Congress, may be the means by which a lasting understanding can be achieved. The opportunity presents itself to New York to become the primary money centre of the world, to this end we must become the trade centre, and in order to become that we must cultivate and build up new markets for our manufacturers and merchants, and the work, therefore, of the Southern Commercial Congress is a labor in which New York must properly co-operate for the sake of her own future as well as for your...

"The wonderful S... whose men and women have done so much for humanity, is a vast field for American enterprise, and in time of peace, which, God willing, may come soon, we shall turn to you, knowing that humanity cannot call in vain on you for the development of your resources to the full, not only for your own benefit, but for the advantage and benefit of all mankind."

The congress opened with an invocation by the Rev. Dr. Randolph McKim of Washington, D. C., and Oscar S. Straus, Chairman of the New York General Committee of the congress, delivered the first of the addresses of welcome.

"From the first," he said, "the aim and purpose of the Southern Commercial Congress was national in spirit. The progressive men of the South—her merchants, business men, and statesmen—recognize, even more intensely, perhaps, than the rest of the country, that the era of sectionalism has passed, and that interest, duty, and patriotism alike demand as never before that the North, East, South, and West be riveted together in co-operative bonds of national solidarity."

William A. Barber, President of the New York Southern Society, and Mayor Mitchel also spoke in greeting to the congress, and Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida, the President of the body, responded.

TO GREET ALLIED DIPLOMATS.

Representatives of 13 Nations Will Be Welcomed at Congress.

New York City will welcome today as one group the diplomats of all the allied nations who are coming to the city as the guests of the Southern Commercial Congress. They will be received at the City Hall at noon by Mayor Mitchel. The diplomats will parade from Pier A, at the Battery, starting at 12:30 o'clock. They will be escorted up Broadway by the Old Guard, a detachment of sailors from the navy yard, and two companies of soldiers from Governors Island.

At the City Hall the thirteen distinguished visitors, representing France, Great Britain, Italy, Japan, Russia, Portugal, Siam, Cuba, China, Panama, Serbia, Belgium, and Greece, will be welcomed by a reception committee of which George T. Wilson is Chairman, and Oscar Straus, Charles E. Hughes, Job Hedges, George W. Wickersham, E. R. Outerbridge, Morgan J. O'Brien, and William Fellowes Morgan are members.

The Mayor will greet the diplomats and the officers of the Southern Commercial Congress in the Council Chamber at 1 o'clock. Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, President of the congress; Mr. Straus, and Jean J. Jusserand, French Ambassador, will also speak.

AVIATRIX SEEKS DIVORCE.

Mrs. Dorothy Rice Peirce Alleges Non-Support and Cruelty.

Special to The New York Times.

BANGOR, Me., Oct. 15.—Mrs. Dorothy Rice Peirce of New York City, daughter of the late Isaac Rice and an aviatrix of some renown, has filed suit for absolute divorce from Waldo Peirce of Bangor. She alleges non-support and cruel and abusive treatment, specifying that in February, 1915, her husband struck her and knocked her down in a New York restaurant, and again in the same Winter. The case will not be heard until January.

Mrs. Peirce has offered her services to the Government to teach aviation to women. In addition, she wants to fly on the French front. Some months ago she fractured her hip in an airplane accident on the southern shore of Long Island.

Mr. Peirce, a native of Bangor, was a Harvard football guard, and is now a driver in the American Ambulance in France. He has received the Croix de Guerre from the French Government for bravery.

The couple were married in Madrid, Spain, Sept. 6, 1912, as the result of a romance which began in Paris, where they were both art students. They lived in New York for some months after the wedding, Mr. Peirce maintaining a studio in the Washington Square section.

ALLIED OFFICERS WILL TRAIN TROOPS

First of Ten Assigned to Camp Wadsworth Arrive After Delay from U-Boats.

TRENCH EQUIPMENT ISSUED

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP WADSWORTH, SPARTANBURG, S. C., Oct. 15.—Experts from the armies of our allies will tutor the men of the Twenty-seventh Division in the specialties of modern warfare, Brig. Gen. Charles L. Phillips, U. S. A., commanding the camp, announced today. Ten instructors are to be sent here, seven from the French forces and three from the British. The first of the allied officers to report for duty was Major Pierre Forrister, French artillery, veteran of the Marne, and of Hartmanns-Weilerkopf, who arrived tonight.

It had been planned to have all of the instructors at camp a month ago, but the activities of German spies in England prevented this, it is said. According to the story, the future Wadsworth instructors were told to report at an English seaport on a certain date. They arrived there, boarded a returning troop transport and got well out to sea, when an Admiralty wireless recalled the vessel. The instructors were informed that British agents had learned that the German Foreign Office, apprised of the sailing of the men who were to prepare American soldiers, had sent submarines to lie in wait for the transport.

Trench boots and heavy Winter clothing, were distributed in the Fifteenth Infantry, composed of negroes, this morning. Colonel William B. Hayward's negro soldiers, although in camp only five days, are said to be far in advance of their white comrades in rifle training, an item regarded as highly important by General Pershing. It is said that the regiment will not have to take the rifle training course, which occupies more than half of the training schedule here.

There seems to be little doubt that the War Department intends to form a full second division from the troops left in camp when the first line moves out. The regiments available for this purpose are the Twelfth, Seventy-first, Tenth, Forty-seventh, First, Seventy-fourth and possibly the Fifteenth. To bring all of these units up to full war strength about 6,000 select men would be needed.

4 KILLED IN POWDER BLAST.

Explosion in du Pont Works at Gibbstown, N. J., Wrecks Building.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—An explosion in the nitro starch drying house at the E. I. du Pont powder works at Gibbstown, N. J., twenty miles from here, today completely demolished the building with its stores of powder and caused the death of four workers. The force of the explosion was so great that buildings here rocked for miles around. Reports from Camden, N. J., and other towns near Gibbstown said that windows had been broken in villages six miles from the plant.

The building was isolated from the other factories, where less dangerous work was being done, and no other damage resulted. Work in all the buildings was stopped for several hours after the explosion, but it was resumed when workmen were reassured that there had been no great loss of life and that there was no danger of a second explosion. Only four men were at work in the building when the explosion occurred. Their bodies were so badly charred and mutilated that identification was difficult, but the company timekeepers, in checking up their lists, reported no other men missing.

The names of the dead men, as given out, are: Jesse Devault and Marple Reel of Paulsboro, N. J.; Martin Stalangian of Gibbstown, N. J., and Raymond Snellbaker of Westville, N. J. No estimate of the damage was given at the works.

FAVORS LOWER DRAFT AGE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Prospects that Congress at its next session will lower the draft age were brightened today when Secretary Baker went on record in favor of drafting men between the ages of 19 and 26, and Representative Julius Kahn, ranking Republican member of the House Military Committee, advocated changing the draft law so as to have embraced all males between the ages of 18 and 40.

Chairman Kahn intimated that he would introduce a bill in the next session providing for drafting all between 18 and 40. The present draft ages cover those between 21 and 30.

When Secretary Baker was asked whether he or the Administration favored the Kahn plan, he replied that it had not received Administration indorsement, and said that he did not favor amending the law as proposed by Mr. Kahn. The Secretary explained that he was in favor of reducing the draft age so as to have it cover males between 19 and 25. "A youth of 19," he said, "has reached manhood, and can fight for his country, while taking a man more than 26 years of age affects the industrial service of the country."

MOSKOWITZ NAMED HEAD OF MARKETS

President of Municipal Civil Service Commission Appointed by Mayor to New Office.

Henry Moskowitz resigned yesterday as President of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, and was immediately appointed by Mayor Mitchel as Commissioner of Markets, the new commission which the Legislature gave the city power to appoint at its last session. The Mayor's first choice for the position was George W. Perkins, but the Legislature refused to amend the law to allow Mr. Perkins to accept while still holding his nonpaying position as President of the New York and New Jersey Interstate Park Commission.

The new Commissioner has the appointment of one Deputy Commissioner and a personal office staff. The other clerks of the new commission will be transferred from departments which have had to do with city markets. It is expected that the Board of Estimate will fix the salary of the new Commissioner at $7,500 a year. In announcing the appointment Mayor Mitchel said:

"The high cost of living is the most pressing burden which the people of New York are bearing. It is crying for immediate action.

"The delay caused by three years of selfish opposition to the passage of a law enabling the city administration to act has been and is a great handicap. The delayed passage of the act will prevent us from obtaining at this late date the benefits that earlier preparation could have obtained from this Fall's harvest. We are consequently handicapped in securing the quickest results.

"Many investigations and reports have been made on the subject. I will at once avail myself of the information and recommendations that these contain. I hope to find that they will make it necessary to lose any more time in further investigations, surveys, or reports. We must cut the red tape and get down at once to the beginning of a program of action. This will certainly be my first endeavor."

3 RICH LITTLE POOR GIRLS.

Sisters of Orphan Adopted by the Shepards Also Get Fine Home.

When Mr. and Mrs. Finley J. Shepard adopted an orphan girl, as told in the news recently, they completed the transition from institutional rearing to fine homes of three little orphans from one Yonkers family. It was announced yesterday that the two sisters of Roberta Sarah Clark Shepard already had become the legal daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Colton Bond of Chicago, and for months had been under the care of their foster parents at the Bond estate in Evanston, a fashionable Chicago suburb.

That the three orphaned daughters of a poor Yonkers carpenter all should have found their way into homes of luxury was due to the fact that Mrs. Bond, after a long search for just the right child to adopt, wrote to Mrs. Shepard, believing that her earlier experience in finding lovable little ones might aid her own search. Mrs. Shepard wrote back glowingly of three orphans she had recently discovered in the Leake and Watts Orphan Asylum in Yonkers.

Mr. and Mrs. Bond hurried from Chicago and spent an afternoon at the home. They chose May, then 9 years old, and bore her off to Evanston. The little girl was happy and satisfied on the country place, except that she missed her sister Evelyn, then 5, her closest playmate in the orphans' home. Though at first the Bonds meant to take but one little stranger into their home, they could deny the child nothing, so they also adopted Evelyn. Then, after several months, Mrs. Shepard decided to take the third of the little girls as companion to the child she already had adopted, and the last of the carpenter's children passed out of the asylum.

LOYAL COLUMBIA MEN CHECK THE RADICALS

Scheduled Demonstration Will Be Broken Up—Trustees and Faculties to Co-operate.

The Committee of Nine of Columbia University has completed its report on the controversy that resulted in the resignation of Professor Charles A. Beard, and will submit it to the University Council at its meeting today. The report is said to contain recommendations for a closer co-operation between the Trustees and members of the Faculties along the lines forecast in THE NEW YORK TIMES last week.

Yesterday some of the radicals in the student body who attempted to hold a demonstration on the steps of the University Library last week distributed handbills for two other demonstrations at 116th Street and Amsterdam Avenue this week, but it was announced last night by patriotic students that the meetings would be broken up. The ostensible object of the proposed demonstrations is to force the university authorities to refuse to accept the resignation of Professor Beard.

The Columbia Alumni News, a weekly publication issued by the Alumni Federation of Columbia University, expresses regret in an editorial in its current issue over the resignation of Professor Beard, but asserted that he had hurt himself more than he had helped the cause of "academic freedom."

"Professor Beard's connection with the university has been severed because he believes in freedom of speech as a principle," the editorial says in part. "We do not believe he resigned because he disapproved of the expulsion of the others, (Professors Cattell and Dana,) but because he considered their expulsion an indication of the carrying out by the Trustees of a policy with which he is not in sympathy. He has the courage to support his convictions, and his letter indicates that fact amply.

"But his resignation will hurt himself far more than it will assist the cause of 'academic freedom,' for he has done himself an injustice by this act, which will be construed as one of support of the expelled professors—and we do not believe that Professor Beard subscribes to their doctrines. He is not only one of the most popular professors at the university, but is a recognized authority in his subject in this country—in fact, to him has often been accorded the place of foremost American political scientist. His loss will be keenly felt."

The editorial concludes by regretting that the "squabble over academic freedom" could not have been settled without "airy persiflage" in the public prints which is not welcome to persons of refined tastes.

AIR AGE FORESEEN BY THE CAPRONIS

PLURIMOTOR TYPES SAFE

Thirty Passengers in Closed Cabins Can Now Be Carried, According to the Brothers.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Oct. 15.—The Caproni brothers, airplane inventors, when interviewed by a NEW YORK TIMES correspondent today, said:

"Our company for manufacturing Caproni airplanes at Taliedo and Vizzola is now in full swing and the demand for new machines is so great that we are working incessantly day and night. For reasons easily understood, we are now prevented from giving details concerning our works, but it is enough to state that we are employing about 5,000 workmen, who are rapidly increasing through the addition of new workshops. Mounting hails and hangars already are covering four times the area occupied in 1914.

"We are fully convinced that the enormous development of aviation through the war is not only to continue thereafter, but to increase by leaps and bounds. We believe the day is approaching when aerial lines not only will join town and country and country to country, but will span continent to continent with aerial trains transporting hundreds of passengers traveling from 125 to 190 miles an hour.

"Future airplanes will have to be gigantic but of light construction, most luxuriously fitted, surpassing any train de luxe ever seen, and having all possible modern comforts. They will be built according to the biplane and multiplane systems, and fitted with a series of motors varying from three hundred to five hundred horse power, because the plurimotor types obviously afford a genuine guarantee of safety.

"However, it would be erroneous to suppose that airplanes can immediately or even in the near future replace trains or steamers. Aviation, still in its youth, must be developed gradually. People must not be impatient, but must recall that navigation by steam took 130 years to reach its present perfection.

"Aviation has had far more rapid development. Essential difficulties to overcome have been of two kinds—those occasioned by atmospheric conditions and those resulting from accidental breakdowns, which are chiefly confined to motors. The latter are almost entirely obviated through the introduction of the multimotor system, which secures greater safety, for if one motor or even two break down the journey can be continued by using a third motor until the nearest landing. In the present war many instances have occurred wherein the Caproni trimotors have found themselves amid half a dozen enemy machines, having to stand concentrated fire which struck two of their motors and tore their wings to pieces, but nevertheless have been able to return to our lines. The worst enemy of aviation is fog, which already has been somewhat vitiated.

"Aviation will be especially useful for quick communication between mainlands and islands, as between Italy and Sicily and Sardinia, between England, Ireland and Europe, America and the Antilles, and eventually South America will be linked. Airplanes will replace a long and weary transport system by caravan which is both risky and costly, especially for transportation of valuable goods such as precious stones, ivory, skins, and feathers, avoiding the danger of highway robbery. Soon aerial lines will go around the world.

"Immediately after the war large transoceanic airplanes will be constructed, capable of carrying aboard from fifty to sixty passengers and traveling between Europe and America. Our triplanes already can carry easily as many as thirty passengers in comfortable closed cabins, while many trips have been made by our biplanes with ten passengers between Milan and Turin and back. Also longer journeys have been made in America.

"Recently one of our biplanes piloted by Gabriele d'Annunzio with three others aboard accomplished without a landing a flight covering 875 miles, corresponding as the crow flies to the distance between New York and St. Louis.

"Aviation in peace times will bring about extraordinary economic, political, and social changes in the life of the people of the United States. The air lord in the near future will be in a true sense 'monarch of all he surveys,' possessing and ruling a dominion of unlimited power and importance and superseding the lord of the seas. Aviation demands legislation. State, interstate, intercountry, and intercontinental. Governments must be put in a position to control aerial flight.

"There is now the theoretical difficulty of crossing frontiers which raises a question of custom house duties and international problems. Arrangements must be made between different countries to organize an international aerial service on lines something like those already existing for international postal service."

SEEKS REVENGE IN ARMY.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, YAPHANK, L. I., Oct. 15.—Drilling with Company B of the Three Hundred and Second Engineers, not with the light-hearted enthusiasm of the rest of the recruits but with the determination of a man who sees his day for vengeance approaching, is James Kelly, whose sister and two brothers were killed by the Germans.

Kelly was born in Glasgow, Scotland. He came to this country eight years ago, and found employment in New York as a scenery painter. He made yearly trips to visit his family in Glasgow. The outbreak of the war found Kelly in Glasgow. He tried to enlist, but was rejected because of tobacco heart. He returned to this country and entered a shipbuilding plant as a camouflage painter for patrol boats for the British Navy.

A year and a half ago Kelly heard that his brother Kenneth had been wounded and captured by the Germans. When questioned by a Prussian intelligence officer, Kenneth Kelly refused to divulge important military information he possessed, and was put in prison. Later he was shot.

On receipt of this news James Kelly sailed for Scotland. He tried again to enlist, and again he was rejected because of his heart. Kelly then returned to camouflage British patrol boats being built in this country.

Ten months ago Kelly again visited Glasgow. This time news came that his brother John had been killed by a German shell. James Kelly for the third time tried to enter the service, but his tobacco heart was against him.

The United States had entered the war when Kelly returned to New York. He tried to enlist in the regular army without success, and then went back to his camouflage work. When he registered for the draft he refused to claim exemption as an alien, and declared that he had two reasons for wanting to fight. His happiest day came when he was called by his local draft board to Camp Upton. Because of his expert knowledge of camouflage he was assigned to the Three Hundred and Second Engineers.

A letter from Glasgow this morning brought the news that three weeks ago his sister Angelina, a Red Cross nurse, was killed in France. Tonight Private James Kelly has three reasons why his service should not be the cunning of camouflage but the steel of trench knife and bayonet.

Chicago Council Backs Lowden.

CHICAGO, Oct 15.—By a vote of 44 to 8 the City Council this evening adopted a resolution commending Governor Lowden for sending troops to Chicago to suppress the convention of the People's Council of America for Democracy and Terms of Peace after Mayor Thompson had directed the police not to interfere. The resolution constituted an indirect criticism of Mayor Thompson.

Among the purchases were $5,000,000 by the First National Bank and $2,500,000 by the First Trust and Savings Bank. Marshall Field & Co. and the Standard Oil Company of Indiana each bought $1,000,000 worth of bonds.

High value after years of service

Pierce-Arrow trucks, even after years of service, have a remarkably high resale value. Try to buy a Pierce-Arrow truck and you will get a new light on what Pierce-Arrow owners think of their investment. The absence of Pierce-Arrows on the used truck market is good evidence of the satisfaction they give in service.

Pierce-Arrow
Motor Trucks

for example: Prior's Express, Inc., of Lynn, Mass., operating a fleet of eleven Pierce-Arrow Motor Trucks, has nothing to sell but transportation. In such a contract business the depreciation of trucks is a big factor, and this firm's standardization of its service with Pierce-Arrows is significant. Many of these trucks run regularly on a schedule calling for over 120 miles a day.

Such great commercial successes are built upon sound economies like those effected by Pierce-Arrow trucks. A smaller business should not deny itself the advantages on which big business thrives.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The War Department has received an official report showing bad forage conditions at a certain army depot and supply base at a point the name of which cannot be disclosed for military reasons.

The report asserts that decidedly dangerous hay has been issued and accepted, that the health and stamina of army animals have been lowered and that there is a great lack of knowledge of forage on the part of certain officers and veterinary surgeons and the enlisted personnel. Steps are to be taken to correct these conditions.

In conclusion, the report asserts that if the present veterinary corps were constructed with a properly organized system, having a head to it, with rules and regulations for guidance, it would be vastly more efficient in every way and would save the Government many hundred thousand dollars.

At the depot base where the investigation was conducted there were on hand 12,000,000 pounds of alfalfa, 700,000 pounds of timothy and clover, 1,000,000 pounds of prairie hay, and 100,000 pounds of straw. The remount supply had 850,000 pounds of hay, divided as follows: 400,000 pounds of alfalfa, 400,000 pounds of prairie hay, and 50,000 pounds of timothy.

The report says in part:

"The depot supply is composed of twelve piles, of which six are alfalfa, two are timothy and clover, and four are of prairie hay and straw; and they [the officers reporting] find that three-fourths of the alfalfa is good and one-fourth is bad, that one-third of the timothy and clover is good and two-thirds is bad, that all of the prairie hay is bad, that all of the straw is fair. The piles of alfalfa were much too large.

"They are of the opinion that this large amount of bad hay is the result of (a) insufficient protection; (b) faulty storing; (c) acceptance of an inferior grade of hay.

"The insufficient protection is due to the fact that some of the piles are built up square, with flat or almost concave tops, which are inadequately covered with 'paulins,' thus allowing the rain to collect and soak through. The faulty storing consists in placing the hay directly on the ground, instead of on a raised platform of some kind, the consequence being that through surface water the bottom layer and most probably the next layer are unfit for food for animals.

"Oats were inspected. It was found that owing to the cement floor of the warehouse being laid on the ground, the floor water had come in and soaked all the bottom tier of sacks. In all there are about 2,965,000 pounds of oats, out of which about 4,000 sacks or 300,000 to 350,000 pounds of oats were lost; some of the oats may be saved. Of the oats a third is of an inferior quality, immature and full of dust and dirt.

"There was also about 70,000 pounds of bran, of which about one-third was spoiled."

The report submits these recommendations:

"That at base forage depots all hay and grain that cannot be housed should be put on raised platforms two to three feet in height, according to the local situation, and that the air space underneath be kept clear at all times.

"That piles of hay should not contain more than 700,000 to 800,000 pounds and should be topped with a ridge and covered by a sufficient number of paulins.

"That grain piles can be built and protected in the same way. The regulation of the size of piles is necessary owing to the danger of heating in a larger sized pile, and in case of actual fire less hay will be lost. Also, facilities of some kind for extinguishing fire should be ample, and at hand.

"That, depending upon the number of days' supply drawn, each organization should have a proportionately sized platform to store its forage and have sufficient overhead protection as well.

"That these platforms should be at least a foot from the ground, and the air space underneath kept clear at all times."

TOOK SCENES IN TRENCHES.

D. W. Griffith Returns with Moving Picture Views of Warfare.

David W. Griffith, an American motion picture director, who has been in France for seven months taking scenes of real warfare at the front, returned yesterday to an Atlantic port, accompanied by the sisters Dorothy and Lillian Gish, who took part in the realistic drama that will be produced in this country.

"Thanks to the assistance of the British officers," Mr. Griffith said, "we caught actual scenes in the first line trenches and the surrounding panorama which was often a view forty miles long and ten to fifteen miles deep. By the aid of the new French lenses, with their fourteen-inch depths, one is able to show a charge along a two or three miles front and also to picture the grim work in the mudholes called trenches close enough to depict men actually wounded at their work, while others are tossing hand grenades over the ridge at the enemy's lines fifty yards away.

"There were numbers of Americans fighting in the Canadian ranks and in the French Army. On one occasion near Ypres a shell burst close beside one of our big cameras and knocked it to pieces. Another shell which fell a little distance away killed eleven men who were mending a hole in the road."

With regard to the life in the trenches, Mr. Griffith said: "The soldiers do not get used to it. They bear it because there is no other place to go. When a barrage is moving slowly across a field you have to watch and see if it is coming your way. If you lose your head and become nervous it means that you run into the curtain of fire and are killed instantly."

The Misses Gish said that they were not nearly so affected by the artillery fire at the front as they were in London during the six air raids which occurred in one week. The hotel where they were staying was struck three times, but not badly damaged.

Dancing Dollys Again at the Palace.

The dancing Dolly, who are beginning to threaten the Palace record of Nora Bayes, returned to that theatre for another week yesterday, and are this time coupling their Palace appearances with a week at the Alhambra. The program also includes a playlet by Edward Elsner, inventor of vaudeville's "flash drama" and author of "The Young Mrs. Stanford." The new one is called "The Notorious Delphine," and, like its predecessor, ends with a revolver shot.

Conroy and Le Maire return with foolery more or less familiar, and others include the laughable Edwin George and the no less amusing George McKay.

Laurette Taylor's New Comedy.

Laurette Taylor's next play, which is announced to follow "Out There" at the Liberty Theatre within a few weeks, will be "The Wooing of Eve," a comedy by A. Hartley Manners. Miss Taylor's rôle in the new play will be that of an American girl in London. Many members of her present company will appear in the play, among them being Frank Kemble Cooper, Lynn Fontanne, J. M. Kerrigan, Leonard Mudie, and Douglas Ross.

MUSIC NOTES.

The National Red Cross will give a pageant at the Metropolitan Opera House on Oct. 24 and 25. Daniel Frohman will manage the production, and among those taking part will be E. H. Sothern and Frances Starr.

The Trio de Lutece will open the People's Symphony Auxiliary concert at Washington Irving High School next Saturday night in place of the Flonzaley Quartet, which will play later in the series, on Dec. 22.

A TWO-PIANO RECITAL

Messrs. Maier and Pattison Give an Interesting Program in Aeolian Hall.

Performances upon two pianos are in general more interesting to the players than to the listeners, unless the players are of an unusual artistic distinction. Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, two young pianists who played together in that way last evening in Aeolian Hall can hardly be called such; but they gave their performance interest by a program that included some unfamiliar pieces. There was an excellent finish of ensemble in their playing, intelligence, and musicianly feeling.

The pieces of most interest were one by J. Guy Ropartz, in B minor, not otherwise entitled, and Debussy's "In Black and White"; three sketches, one "To Igor Stravinsky," in which might be heard suggestions of "Petrouchka"; one "To Lieutenant Jacques Charlot," killed in battle in 1915, in which a fragment of bugle call is followed by the wraith of a German chorale, and one "To A. Kussewitsky," Russian double bass virtuoso and orchestral conductor, in which the personal allusion, if there was any, had to be guessed. These are all characteristic of Debussy in manner, yet not of his best in their matter.

A set of variations by von Wilm, incessantly suggesting other men's music; Raff's neat gavotte, a transcription of Saint-Saëns's symphonic poem, "Omphale's Spinning Wheel," and pieces by Gilère and Ijinsky were the other numbers.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"We Should Worry," the Blossom-Sloane musical comedy which Elisabeth Marbury and Frederic McKay will produce, has gone into rehearsal. Among those in the cast are Muriel Hudson, Helen Lee, Dama Sykes, Ruth Alexander, Roger Grey, Ray Raymond and Charles Holly.

Miss Chilson Ohrman, a soprano who has recently been appearing in vaudeville, has been added to the cast of the Winter Garden show, scheduled to open on Thursday.

"Fleuette's Dream," a war-time fantasy, will be given Thursday and Friday afternoons of this week at the Booth Theatre. The performances will be under the direction of Lady Duff-Gordon, and the proceeds will go to the Secours Franco-Americain pour la France Devastee.

"The Masquerader" last night moved from the Lyric Theatre to the Booth, where it will be continued indefinitely. "De Luxe Annie" was transferred from the Booth to the Thirty-ninth Street.

"On With the Dance," a drama by Michael Morton, had its first performance at Wilmington last night. In the company are John Mason, Eileen Huban, William Morris, Julia Dean and Edward Abeles.

"The Spreading Dawn," the first Goldwyn film made by Jane Cowl, will be shown at the Strand Theatre next week.

"The playgoer of discrimination is to be congratulated at the prospect of Miss George in a series of plays to last through the season. She acted the impulsive, rebellious life-loving girl with naturalness and an exquisite reserve that have become characteristic of all her acting." —Eve. Telegram.
"I liked Irene; I don't think anybody could help liking her, thanks to the impersonation of Grace George. GOVERNOR WHITMAN FOR MITCHEL.

"It is plainly impossible to elect a "Republican. The only hope of de-"feating Tammany Hall lies in the "candidacy of Mr. MITCHEL." These are the words of Governor WHITMAN, the Republican leader in this State. They will have a very great effect in the Mayoralty campaign, we might feel that they would be decisive of the issue were it not for the fact that the heavy registration indicates that the voters themselves have already decided the contest, making the re-election of Mayor MITCHEL and his associates on the Fusion ticket practically certain.

These words of the Republican leader strip Mr. BENNETT not only of all hope, but of his last justification for remaining in the fight. He stands before the people of New York now as one engaged in a mere personal adventure. What his motive is baffles conjecture, but if we may suppose that he intends the necessary consequences of his own acts we must assume that he wants to help Mr. HYLAN. That is absolutely the only effect his candidacy can have. He is doing, within the limits of his small powers, what he can to elect a Tammany Mayor, to turn the city over to Tammany.

Now that the Republican leader in the State supports his opponent, declares that he is going to vote for Mr. MITCHEL, Mr. BENNETT can claim to be the regular Republican candidate only upon the narrowest technical grounds. The County Committee of his party in Manhattan declines to give him its indorsement, the Republican Governor of the State is squarely against him. Governor WHITMAN says not only that Republicans may properly support Mr. MITCHEL and still maintain their party regularity, but that "even if "such were not the case and the "choice were between the obligation "of partisanship and the obligation "of citizenship, our duty would be "entirely clear."

The Republicans of the City of New York should faithfully heed this exhortation to a performance of a duty that is above all partisanship. When their leader, also Governor of the State and a regular Republican of the strictest sect, supports the Fusion nominees and will vote for them, professions of regularity as a justification for the support of Mr. BENNETT become fantastic. We suppose it is useless to appeal to Mr. BENNETT himself, but Governor WHITMAN said four years ago, in declaring his support of the Fusion movement, that "personal ambition or partisan feel-"ing must be subordinated to the "public good," and he now declares that the statements he made at that time "were true when they were made, and they are true now." Mr. BENNETT, therefore, both as a citizen and a Republican, convicts himself of subordinating the public good to partisanship when he persists in running. Governor WHITMAN concedes to Mr. BENNETT all his rights; he is undoubtedly the regular Republican candidate, he is entitled to the emblem, the name, and to watchers at the polls. But good sense, pride in the character of the City Government, in the reputation of the city, abhorrence of Tammany corruptions, ought to prompt all Republicans to the resolve that Mr. BENNETT shall be left with nothing but the emblem, the name, and the watchers. Now that the Governor has spoken, Mr. BENNETT is entitled to the support of no Republican who desires honest and efficient administration of the affairs of the city.

The surprisingly large registration has given immense encouragement to the Fusion forces. In addition to the 600,000 names enrolled in this city, a large proportion of the 100,000 young men from New York now engaged in war service must be reckoned with. The total number of voters entitled to cast their ballots on Nov. 6 will approximate, if it does not exceed, the total registration of 1916, Presidential year. The total vote will be not far from 675,000. On that registration, making every allowance for the various forces other than those of politics, some of them very open and some concealed in darkness, which are working against Mr. MITCHEL, the partisans of Mr. HYLAN will have to perform prodigies of ciphering in order to figure out victory for him.

THE RATE HEARING.

For thirty years the Interstate Commerce Commission has been wrestling with economic questions like those which the war precipitated upon the Administration at a day's notice, and the Commission has not made as much progress in a generation as the Administration has made in the few months since we entered the war. The method of the Administration is not the method of the Commission. The Administration has learned from its conflict with business and has profited from the counsel of business men. The Commission still regards the railways as defendants. That time has passed. It is now the Commission which is on trial. It confessed as much when it said, at the time of making the decision now appealed from on the results of compliance with it, that, if the railways' fears were realized, it would meet that situation by amendment of its orders. The Commission undertook to keep itself informed of conditions by the railways' current reports, and to act "promptly, adequately, and fairly." That would justify action on the Commission's own initiative to remedy, not the railways' financial embarrassment, but the obstruction to the country's commerce by embargoes due to the lack of cars, terminals, and every other facility which the railways cannot supply for lack of the means.

The scarcity of cars in the West and the congestion of cars in the East are parts of the same trouble. The crops are yet to be moved, and the hindrances of the Winter weather are yet to be met. But already conditions are worse than last year. It is a safe statement that farmers, shippers, traders have lost more in profits during the years since the Commission has been refusing the railways' requests for a profitable basis for their business, and the means for its development, than they gained in rate reductions. Certainly nobody is asking for rate reductions now. What is wanted is what the Commission is powerless to supply. If the Commission should allow the railways to write their own rates they could not for a long time supply themselves with cars or rails or anything else.

They wanted to do it when it would have benefited the country to have it done, years ago. They are now to have another hearing on the subject, and if permission is allowed, they will have to spend the increase of rates under the most burdensome conditions, and perhaps have their increased facilities seem excessive if there should be any trade reaction. Then the Commission would say "I told you so." The Commission is not entitled to a monopoly of mistakes. When there is an equality of mistakes, there will be dispassionate judgment between the railways and the Commission. At present the conduct of the railways under the stresses of trying times entitles them to be considered and treated as useful public servants. The Commission's ears are not burning because anybody is saying that of it.

LIBERTY BONDS AND OTHER BONDS.

A correspondent asks why owners of railway bonds should buy Liberty bonds. The suggestion seems to be that the owners of securities owe so little to the Government for its care of their interests that subscriptions to the Liberty Loan might be withheld, just as votes might be in ordinary times. The argument fails even for those of that way of thinking. These are not ordinary times, and the Liberty bonds are not ordinary bonds, which anybody is free to take or not to take for investment reasons solely. What would railway bonds be worth if Kaiserism should not be crushed, or perhaps might even prevail? Americans revolted against being a colony of England, and it is unnecessary to ask how they would like to be a colony of Germany. They would like it as much as Alsace-Lorraine, where Germany is hated after a generation's experience of Kultur.

Only the remoteness of Germany from the United States, with the ocean between them, allows a person of intelligence to imagine that it is so impossible for Germany ever to impose its will on this country that the Liberty bonds could be neglected safely. But the freedom of the seas is an issue in this war, and the German notion of the freedom of the seas is not compatible with American interests or with American self-respect. Those of the way of thinking of our correspondent will never have engraved on their monuments, as it is on the monument of an immortal Virginian, "All that he had he gave for Liberty." Those putting politics or profit above the Liberty Loan are as different as possible from NATHAN HALE, who regretted that he had only one life to give for his country. They will not even give a share of their fortune for the protection of that Liberty which alone made their fortune possible, or protects them in the possession of it.

As matter of fact, the offer of the loan is not a passing of the contribution platter for a gift. Rather, it is the passing of a platter from which gifts may be taken by those who have either the public spirit or intelligence to take that view of it. The Liberty Loan is a preserver of fortunes threatened by the unsettlement of politics. Profit is not the leading consideration for taking Liberty bonds. Security is the leading financial reason. But there is good assurance of profit, nevertheless. There never was a United States bond which did not sell at a premium, and there never was an issue which had so good a prospect of that sort of profit at the time of issue as this loan. It is an altar of refuge as well as a rock around which the forces of civilization are rallying. There is no reason to evade the strictest examination of the worth of what is offered along with 4 per cent., but there is cause for regret that anybody could take a purely financial view of the opportunity to safeguard personal and national fortunes, along with the world's best hope of peace and prosperity. If the Liberty Loan should not be taken as it ought to be, the fight for civilization is made suddenly harder than had been expected. Is it possible that such reproach can be cast on the United States, the wealthiest people of the world, the freest, who formerly at least thought more of their public spirit than of their private possessions.

THE GODS AND THE GIANTS.

A memorable series in which illustrious names and hits were made, in which subtle handed and headed pitchers contended gloriously, ended yesterday, on the whole the mellowest October day that ever made the world happy, in the victory of our guests from Cook County. By 4 to 2, an honorable score, did Chicago win the game and series, and cordially is she to be congratulated. The games have illustrated again the psychology, poetic, artistic, of the baseball genius, one day invincible, full of daimonic skill, the next, perhaps, helpless. Pitchers in particular are poets, loaded with temperament, as well as exact mathematicians with mastery of projectile.

Errors and faults of judgments there must be even in the work of these two schools of science. New York has some pride in the Giants, it would have more if they would rid themselves of the habit of fatal and unaccountable blundering at critical stages. Chicago, conquering at last on the enemy's ground, is beyond praise. The best explanation, after all, is that Chicago knows and plays the game better than its Manhattan rivals.

The crowd was courteous, if disappointed. The superior nine has won. And so, once more, the Giants have fallen before the Gods.

BELGIUM AND PEACE.

> Now we ask, is there really so much difference in this [the Belgian] question between ASQUITH's attitude and VON KUEHLMANN's statements?—The Berlin Tageblatt.

There is a difference as wide as that between heaven and the other place. Evidently we are in for a long series of pretenses based on the initial pretense that Germany is ready to restore Belgium and that nothing stands in the way but the question of Alsace-Lorraine. These pretenses are to be made for the purpose of bamboozling the uninformed people in England and the United States. It is as well to begin now with the necessary task of pointing out that no matter what Germany says, she does not intend to restore Belgium except in name.

Germany has not offered, as a matter of fact, to restore Belgium at all. Not one word to that effect has ever come from any responsible person in her Government. But some day she will make that proposal. She will propose that Belgium be restored on certain conditions, and when her proposal is indignantly refused she will make capital of the refusal among the ignorant in enemy countries. The conditions she will propose will be conditions by which Belgium will be independent in name, but actually ruled as a province of Germany. She will propose that King ALBERT resume his position on the Belgian throne, but as King in name only, and that politically, economically, and strategically Belgium and her nominal King shall be ruled from Berlin. Then she will raise her hands to heaven and cry out in injured innocence against France, England, and the United States for refusing so generous an offer.

Germany, we repeat, has never yet consented to Belgian independence. When she does consent to it, when she puts it forward as a peace proposal, what she really means has already been foretold. When BETHMANN HOLLWEG told Ambassador GERARD that Germany would be willing to withdraw from Belgium "with guarantees" when peace came to be made Mr. GERARD asked him what those "guarantees" were. The Chancellor replied:

> We must positively have the forts of Liége and Namur; we must have other forts and garrisons throughout Belgium. We must have possession of the railroad lines. We must have possession of the ports and other means of communication. The Belgians will not be allowed to maintain an army, but we must be allowed to retain a large army in Belgium. We must have commercial control of Belgium.

Nominal independence, a powerless King sitting handcuffed and gagged on his mournful throne; German commercial control, German possession of the railroads and the ports, a German army dominating the country and garrisoning its towns and forts. This is what Germany means when she speaks, as speak she will, of restoring Belgium. Chancellor MICHAELIS has the impudence to talk as if she had spoken of it already, to wonder at the refusal of the English and French to consider so handsome an offer, and to pretend that nothing stands in the way of negotiation—Belgium being thus disposed of—except Alsace-Lorraine.

TWO ISSUES.

Governor WHITMAN will support Mr. MITCHEL on the issue "Shall Tammany Hall rule New York?" His support is welcome. Few men know better what Tammany rule of New York is. The issue which he emphasizes is great and sufficient. The better part of the Republican Party will have no hand in the attempt to bring back Tammany misgovernment. But what induces the Governor to hold that "there is only one issue"? In the presence of ugly, notorious facts to the contrary, how can he say that:

> There is no Hohenzollern issue in the campaign. My acquaintance with Judge HYLAN is slight, but I have no reason to doubt his Americanism. I have known Mr. BENNETT for twenty years, and I believe that he is as loyal to the country and the flag as is the Mayor or the Governor.

Mr. BENNETT's loyalty has nothing to do with the case. Nobody doubts it or that of his partisans. None the less they are permitting themselves to be the instruments and aids of the candidacy of Judge HYLAN, whose nomination was sponsored or dictated by influences that have steadily worked against the United States, attacked its associates in the war, labored for a German peace. The personal loyalty of Judge HYLAN, although he cannot bring himself to say a word against his pro-German comrade on the Tammany ticket, Mr. BRUCKNER, is not attacked, nor that of the majority of Tammany men. Yet all the disloyal forces of the community are behind either Judge HYLAN or the Socialist candidate, Mr. HILLQUIT.

Has Governor WHITMAN never heard of the seditionaries and the soapbox orators, of the anti-patriotic societies of many names, of the Cohalans and O'Learys? Has he not just read of a great seditionary demonstration against the Government's suppression of a treasonable paper and of a crowd of 10,000 yelling for peace, a German peace? Does he not know that Mr. HILLQUIT is the candidate of a party opposed to the war?

Governor WHITMAN's defense of the patriotism of New York does not alter the fact that the majority Socialists, who expect to cast a large vote in the municipal election, are bound to a platform of disloyalty, nor does it alter the fact that among Judge HYLAN's supporters are all the disloyalists, seditionaries, friends of Germany who are not Hillquitites. Mr. MITCHEL's patriotism is one of his worst offenses, his principal offense, in the eyes of these anti-patriots. No disloyalist, no traitor, no seeker of a fatal peace, will vote for him. They are divided between Mr. HILLQUIT and Judge HYLAN.

There are two issues, honest government and patriotism, an issue not raised by Mr. MITCHEL, but by his disloyal enemies. Mr. MITCHEL has said, "No HYLAN, no HEARST, no Hohenzollern."

NEEDS OF THE HENRY STREET SETTLEMENT.

It is to be hoped that the needs of the Henry Street and other settlements of the city will not be neglected by a public responding so generously to the demands of Europe. It is right and necessary that American men, women, and money be contributed generously to relieve the suffering in France and Flanders, in all regions devastated by war, but at the same time it should be remembered by every one that the need for relief and education here not only continues but increases under the conditions of the war, and that, as the country is prepared to sacrifice its men for the ideals for which it is fighting, it should attempt to reduce to the minimum the ultimate loss from this sacrifice by caring for the lives and the health of the next generation.

The nurses of the Henry Street Settlement, now some 138 in number, are a trained body of women who every day take their skill and knowledge and sympathy into hundreds of homes from which they drive ignorance and other causes of poverty and disease. They not only provide expert nursing service for persons unable to pay regularly employed professionals, but they instruct mothers, fathers, and children in the art and science of healthful living. When it is remembered that, according to the most recent statistics, about 90 per cent. of the sickness in the city never reaches the hospitals, the importance of the visiting nurse may be appreciated.

The published reports from the Henry Street Settlement to the effect that the difficulties in obtaining money are increasing with the need of it are not encouraging, but we may be sure that the people of New York will recognize their obligation and opportunity at home as well as abroad. Knowledge of present suffering, comprehension of the importance of conserving life, should prompt those who can to contribute generously to the settlement's work.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

He Saw a Gleam at Dawn. A Lieutenant in the city on leave for a few hours from the Yaphank camp, to illustrate the way things are going there and the effects of the hard and simple life led by the men under training, repeated something that had been said to him by one of the recruits. This particular recruit had come from the east side, his name showed that his Americanism would not be of very long standing, and all his experiences before he was drafted had evidently been such as to be poor preparation for soldiering, as preparation for it is commonly understood.

And that the man was neither unconscious of or indifferent to the hardships of his new existence was made plain by his appearance and his condition. For it was not long after the chill dawn, and after passing a colder night under one blanket, that he went up to the Lieutenant, and the latter expected to hear a more or less bitter complaint about sufferings undergone. Instead, after a correct salute, the man controlled his shivering limbs and chattering teeth as well as he could and proffered this curious piece of information: "Well, Lieutenant, if I can only stand this for three weeks I'll be a better man than we ever had in my family before!"

Why he set the limit of endurance at three weeks it would be hard to tell, and so it would be to tell exactly what he meant by "better," but it was obvious that he realized the beginning of a change in himself and was dimly conscious that he was undergoing an improvement the end of which would be highly desirable—if only he could last through the period of initiation. That he had a trace of dubiety on the latter point was natural enough, considering the time of day, for the dawn, in spite of all that poets have written about it, is a dreary and discouraging part of the day, and despair is pardonable then if ever. But this man was not despairing. It is possible that his hope of becoming a "better man" rested on the feeling that at last he was engaged in a service as nearly untainted by self as human service can be, and that his chance to be great and heroic was approaching. That counts—and it utterly refutes almost everything that the pacifists say about the "horrors of war."

Hardly as Bad as It Sounds. That a hospital building suitable for the tropics should have been put up at considerable expense for the use of the soldiers encamped at Spartanburg shows, of course, that our military machine is not yet working perfectly. It was, indeed, a rather bad blunder, due, presumably, to lack of discretionary power in the possession of some subordinate official, or to the lack of ability on that subordinate's part to use the discretionary power he had. Too much, however, can be made, and for that matter is made, of inevitable mistakes like these, for inevitable they are in a country like this. But they are neither fatal nor irremediable, and they are far from justifying pessimistic prophecies of dreadful things to come as the war goes on.

Large bodies move slowly, particularly when they are democracies engaged in the performance of an unaccustomed task. And though a hospital building designed for the housing of sick soldiers in Panama certainly should not have been erected high up in the South Carolina mountains, where there is real Winter, even though we do think of South Carolina as part of the sunny South, the result will be discomfort for the doctors and nurses rather than danger for the patients. Tents were long since recognized as useful increments of hospitals much further north than Spartanburg, and our own hospitals have reported excellent results from keeping their pneumonia cases on the roof and exposing them, except for warm bed coverings, to most of the Winter winds that blow.

The country is at war, and it is now obliged by circumstances that were practically, if not theoretically, beyond control to do many enormously large things in a very great hurry. That they will not all be well done at first is to be expected, but the blame for the occasional ill-doing is widely distributed and finely divided. Not one of us can escape a share of it, and the responsibility for any particular blunder cannot all be put on this or that department or bureau or on this or that official. In a final analysis, probably, much of it should be laid on Congress, which is not far from saying on the electors of Congressmen.

He Sent the Best of Advice. Excellent advice was given by President HENRY WEISMANN to the members of the Brooklyn branch of the National German-American Alliance in the letter which had to take his place at their meeting. That he should have exhorted them to utilize to the utmost their present opportunity to prove their loyalty by facilitating the country's preparations for war and by buying Liberty bonds is hardly as significant, perhaps, as is the fact that these exhortations were received with seeming enthusiasm by those to whom they were addressed, and with a seeming determination to heed and act on them.

It is not necessary to dwell on the fact that the members of the alliance have "seen a light," for the past is the past, and while it is well always to have been right, that is by no means as important as to be right now.

As a means of reconciling the German-Americans to the duty of antagonizing and fighting their kin across the water, President WEISMANN recalled that a like duty arose and was met here in '61. Then close kindred took up arms against each other to settle a fundamental difference of opinion, and he did not hesitate to imply that between the German Government and the Americans of German blood in this country an equally vital disagreement exists and justifies the same means of settlement.

The analogy is fairly close, but it is not quite perfect. Civil war has rules of its own that apply to no others.

Against Air Reprisals.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a British subject beyond the draft age but ready to enlist if needs be, I oppose the reprisals now so insistently demanded by the London press. At most, it could only mean the killing of hundreds or thousands of the men, women and children of the Hunnish cities; and the military oligarchy of Berlin would immediately circulate the report that while the German airplane and Zeppelin raids were confined to destruction of military depots, the reprisals were ruthlessly directed against the civilian innocent. It would all be an infamous misrepresentation; but the Kaiser-bound press is bound hand and foot to that dishonest policy. I have no doubt that reprisals are hoped for in Berlin, in order to whip to anger and action the flagging interest and energy of a misguided and enslaved people.

EDUCATION IN CIVICS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of Oct. 14 there appears an account of an educational conference which was held on Saturday to discuss and formulate plans for changing the system of education in civics in the public schools of the United States. No more worthy subject could occupy the attention of prominent educators.

Patriotic education and civics are inseparable. Unfortunately the subject of civics has in the past been presented largely by means of text books. A study of many of these texts shows that they are lifeless and absolutely incapable of meeting the demands of the present time. They are of the same value in teaching the young to be good citizens as printed rule books are valuable to teach the young to play baseball. They are rules of government and nothing more. The way for a boy to learn baseball is to play the game himself. Most boys learn the game without consulting the rule book. In the same way pupils should receive instruction in civics by having created for them situations where they can learn through association. Books on the subject can easily be dispensed with.

Perhaps certain secondary schools have made progress in this matter which collegiate and university men have not appreciated. In New Jersey a recent law, supplemented by a course of study issued by the State Department of Public Instruction, requires that in connection with the course in physical training, high school pupils must take community civics in their first year; patriotic knowledge in their second year, and problems in modern democracy in their fourth year. The latter course of study includes elements of practical politics, economics, and sociology. All of this, as can be seen, is quite unlike the former civics which laid emphasis mainly on the constitutions and machinery of government to the exclusion of the functions of government.

The time is ripe for a revival among educators in promoting better education in government. The conference held Saturday attended by men of such prominence is evidence that plans have been begun. Directors and instructors to reorganize this much needed work are as much needed in schools as are Directors and instructors of vocational education, although much has been heard about the latter, while very little has been said about the former.

Dividends on Patriotism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A personal experience may be of value in connection with the new Liberty Loan. Beginning with the Anglo-French loan the writer, "obeying that impulse," has subscribed successively to the United Kingdom notes, the French notes, and the first Liberty Loan. He has been able to give a total of over $200,000 to "make the world safe for democracy" and to avenge the Lusitania, all practically on less than $10,000 capital outlay. Each time he thought he was making a "sacrifice" and "doing his bit" by selling other securities when necessary. The result in dollars and cents has been (1) the saving of substantial losses that would otherwise have accrued in the later decline of the securities he sold, and (2) the later opportunity to buy back some of these securities on market breaks and make a substantial profit, after his "patriotic" duty had been performed. He has not, however, sold any Liberty bonds. His dividends, so to speak, on "Pat. Pfd." have been as gratifying as they were unexpected. His only present regret, from a business viewpoint, is that he did not make a heavier "sacrifice" each time. Whether for investment or speculation, the Liberty Loan is the "one best bet." It is better than gold because it carries interest and is always if necessary marketable or liquid capital.

Waterbury's Housing Problem.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Oct. 3 there appeared an article concerning housing conditions in Waterbury, Conn. While some of the statements are partly true, your correspondent failed to tell of the many efforts being made, both by the manufacturing concerns and private individuals, to meet the housing situation in our city.

Three of our large manufacturing concerns have been building modern dwelling houses as rapidly as labor and material could be secured, and these activities continue in full force at the present time.

A special Housing Committee was appointed by the Mayor in February, 1916, to cope with the housing of the rapidly growing population, due to increased industrial activities. This committee employed Mr. John Nolen, an expert on housing, to make a survey of the situation and make definite recommendations to meet it. These recommendations are being carried out as rapidly as the procuring of labor and material will permit. Approximately 2,000 dwelling houses have been built in Waterbury since the formation of this committee.

We also believe that your correspondent has somewhat exaggerated the wages received by men who merely sweep out factories.

While we fully realize the seriousness of the situation, we also know that the people of Waterbury are doing everything possible to meet it.

EUGENE KERNER,
Secretary Waterbury Housing Committee.

THE QUARTERMASTER.

My place is here, far down this little street,
And here I labor at my desk 'til dark;
I do not hear the tramp of marching feet,
I do not hear the rifles' angry bark!

My work is business! All each long day through
I deal in quantities and talk by weight,
I struggle to secure the shipments due,
And fight like mad to get them when they're late.

My job is just to see that Wrightstown camp
Shall not go hungry when it wants its bread,
And note that Yaphank, when it goes on tramp,
Will need some shoes to fit its martial tread.

I often sit in some brief second's lull
And wonder if a God-sent chance will come
To call me from this task—not that it's dull,
But, oh, I long again to hear the drum!

I know that some may fight while others find
And still it breaks my heart to stay behind

To fill our legions for the great advance?
I, too, am fighting hard against the foe
That battles may be won in far-off France!

FRIENDLY ACT OF DENMARK.

A Civil War Incident Recalled Apropos of the Embargo.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am sure that I will have no occasion to lose in self-respect when I hereby venture to direct the attention of the American public to the relations that existed between the United States and Denmark in 1864—a relationship that will be elucidated in the best way by the following article, which appeared in Harpers Weekly on May 28, 1864:

> During the absorbing interest in the domestic events in the last two or three weeks a sign of friendly regard from Denmark to this country may have been overlooked. Struggling like ourselves for national existence, and attacked by Austria and Prussia because of her declared policy of a free constitutional government, the ancient and valiant little Denmark, at the request of our Government, has permitted the Bremen and Hamburg steamers plying to New York to pass free of seizure by her cruisers, although they are the ships and ports of an enemy. This is a most unusual act of amity, and is done by Denmark, as her Government expressly states, from her friendly feeling for this country. Nor is it likely to be soon forgotten. The exigency of our own affairs has prevented that general attention to the Danish question and clear apprehension of it which in a time of peace it would certainly have received from us. But it is enough to determine our sympathies to know that liberal Denmark is attacked by reactionary and despotic Austria and Prussia. The cry of "nationality" is one by which the absolutist rulers of Germany lead the German people to a war upon free institutions; and we have now the melancholy and absurd spectacle of liberal Germans cheering an Austro-Prussian army in destroying the hope of constitutional government upon the Continent. Doubly cordial, therefore, is the grasp of the hand of friendship which Denmark stretches to us out of her cloud of war. Her fate is almost sure. The impending extinction of that old kingdom can hardly be averted. But in some form the spirit of Danish constitutionalism will survive and be felt in European affairs. Meanwhile, the people of the United States will remember with a gratitude which may one day be serviceable an act so friendly in the midst of their great struggle.

As a Danish citizen and as a member of the Merchant Guild of Copenhagen and well acquainted with import and export conditions in Denmark from the beginning of the war, I believe that I, without any compunction, can say that Denmark has always endeavored to maintain her neutrality on every side during this war; and it admits of no doubt whatever that she at any time will be able to stand the tests of the Allies, who so often have shown their sense of justice and fairness.

Leading men of the Danish business world have, through the arrangement made by them on Nov. 19, 1915, between the British Government and the Merchant Guild of Copenhagen, rendered their country an invaluable service, and we can with safe conscience in the face of the Allies insist that this arrangement has been respected in every way, and the few transgressors of said arrangement, no matter who they are, have been proceeded against without mercy.

It goes against my conscience and principles to bring to light services rendered by myself, and so it does for services rendered by my country, and it is, therefore, not my intention to implore the United States for a requital of our services of 1864; but from a necessity forced upon us I have on the behalf of my country and from my own initiative pointed to times past when the United States needed the services and good-will of Denmark.

FIRE PREVENTION COST.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In yesterday's SUNDAY TIMES there was an interview with A. C. MacNulty, counsel for the Real Estate Board, advocating the extinction of the Fire Prevention Bureau. The reasons for this drastic action, recommended by Attorney MacNulty, are that the Fire Prevention Bureau cost the taxpayers during the past six years approximately about $2,000,000 in salaries, &c. The real reason, of course, is given by Mr. MacNulty a few minutes later in his interview, when he says that the Fire Prevention Bureau has in 1914 alone issued 25,653 orders, and in the five years, from 1912 to 1917, the Fire Prevention Bureau required property owners to install more than 400 sprinklers, to put in fireproofing material, and, generally, to spend approximately $18,000,000.

Attorney McNulty does not claim for a moment that the 25,653 orders issued in 1914 were not justified and that the $18,000,000 spent by his clients should not by right have been spent for sprinklers, fireproofing material, &c. He makes no claim that all these orders were not necessary or the expenditures justified, or that the fire protection of the city's working population has not been improved by these orders and many of the lives of the workers saved by the additional expense imposed upon the loft owners. He does not claim all this because he cannot do so, not after the investigations of the New York State Factory Commission nor after the Triangle, Binghamton and other fires in which such large numbers of workers have lost their lives. What he objects to is simply the money spent by his clients and the $2,000,000 which has been paid by the city taxpayers for the Fire Prevention Bureau.

In Mayor Mitchel's article of yesterday he has shown that the total fire loss for the last three years of his administration was $22,721,233—a reduction of $6,287,150, or 21 per cent., in the fire loss suffered by the city—also that there were 1,647 less fires during the three years than the three years immediately preceding.

I am not a partisan of this administration, but my thorough knowledge of the working conditions in the factories in this city, gained through my connection with the New York State Factory Commission and my seven years of work in the Joint Board of Sanitary Control, has shown me the value of proper fire protection and fire prevention in the city, and I know from experience how much the Fire Prevention Bureau under the present administration has accomplished. Our latest report shows an improvement of nearly 40 per cent. in fire protection of buildings since last year, and there is hardly a building in which defects have been found by our inspector during last year which has not been covered by orders from the Fire Prevention Bureau.

The Fire Prevention Bureau, under the efficient management of Adamson and Hammitt, has done remarkable work during the last two years, and credit should be given to those to whom it is due.

British Soldiers in the Subway.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was surprised a few evenings ago when I saw a British officer enter a subway car where three British Tommies were sitting and the Sergeant immediately got up, saluted the officer, and offered his seat. The officer returned the salute, turned around, saw a lady standing there who had just entered the car, and handed the seat over to the lady. Don't you think our own boys could learn a lesson by this?

A GERMAN-AMERICAN NOTE.

Proposed to Tell Germans the President Means What He Says.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Once one has grasped—or, at least, thinks to have grasped—the full meaning of President Wilson's words in his answer to the Pope, it seems impossible even to a foreign-born citizen to understand why the right response from the German people has not been heard yet. But the thoughts expressed in this answer are so far-reaching and far-aiming, they are drawn from such a depth of knowledge of human nature, of individuals, and of nations; they represent such a marvelous result of a whole life's earnest study of the most difficult problems of nations, that it will doubtless count forever as one of the most momentous documents of history. And such a document (which, by the way, had to come from America, could come only from America in our times, and did come from America in the right moment for the world) cannot be understood at once by everybody. It took even some Americans some time to realize fully the value of each word, and if this was the case with readers whose hearts were open to the words of their President, who wished and desired to understand, to realize, and to feel every word he says in such moments, how much harder must it be for such people who, by the laws of human nature, cannot understand him, because they cannot want to understand him, because their hearts must be closed and are closed to President Wilson.

The President's message had to reach the German nation. It could reach it only through the hands of the German Government, and, though the whole answer to the Pope was published in the German papers, it was published at once with all the commentaries which the hypocritic Government thought wise to add to the President's words.

It has come to the point that the German nation has to show if it is capable of any sound judgment of its own. But when a nation in its sound and healthy days has been kept in wrong ideas about its own affairs and in a wrong idea about other nations' acts and feelings, how much sound judgment can one expect of this nation after a deadly sickness of three years? All the prejudices against America which had existed before the war were nourished and increased during the war, and the Germans cannot today at least believe at once the truth, the unbelievable, that it was American idealism which made the American nation enter the war.

But there are Americans in whom the Germans will always believe: the German-Americans. If these could talk today with their brothers of the Old World, they could make them understand and see things as they really are here. But they cannot reach each other, no letter can be sent, no way of communication is open, but perhaps one which I want to suggest by this letter. Would it not be possible to send a message from the German-Americans to Germany and Austria in the way it was suggested to send the President's answer to the Pope to Germany, by dropping it from airplanes behind the German and Austrian lines?

I would suggest that a message signed by the full names of thousands of German-Americans and Austro-Americans be sent in this way in hundreds of thousands of copies to the Germans and Austrians. It could not fail to have its effect on the minds of the soldiers as the message of Germans, by Germans, for Germans.

In this message I would say that first of all every word of the President's answer to the Pope is truth and nothing but truth. That the words must be taken as they are written, and that nothing whatever must be suspected behind them. That the President has pledged his word and will keep it with the whole nation as witness behind him. That the German-Americans are the first who believe in the President, and that the most hyphenated German-Americans are today the most enthusiastic fighters in the President's army, these German-Americans who are "hyphenated" to their country and their folk by their love and admiration for the qualities displayed by their brothers, but not by the Government which had driven them away from the soil, where they or their fathers were born.

I would say in this message that the most hyphenated German-Americans will be the hardest fighters in the American army, out of love for their brothers whom they are fighting. American brothers have once already fought against American brothers, because they had to. They did it with bleeding hearts, but with all the strength, vigor and persistence of highest duty. With the same strength, vigor and persistence the German-Americans will fight now against brothers, because they know that the German defeat will bring through the help of the President the greatest victory to the German nation—Liberty.

The "Nonpartisan League."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There appeared in your columns on Sept. 20 and Sept. 22 editorials concerning the recent conferences of farmers and workers held in St. Paul under the auspices of the Nonpartisan League, which did a grave injustice to our organization. It probably matters little what the Eastern press, or the Western press either, for that matter, has to say about the Nonpartisan League. Movements of this nature have a habit of thriving despite newspaper opposition.

Your attempt to make the purposes of the league seem unpatriotic is far from convincing, and the editorials which attempted to convey this impression contain several statements utterly without foundation in fact. You assert that "They, the farmers, want the Government to take away everybody's profits but those of the laborer and the nonpartisan farmer, who rebels at the thought of selling his wheat at the Government price." How does this square with the facts? The resolutions adopted—and these resolutions and not the speeches are the official voice of the convention—state: "We cheerfully acquiesce in this sacrifice, but we respectfully urge and will continue to insist that those who produce and sell other products be dealt with upon a like basis."

In another place you state that "genuine seditious rant was turned on." It is easy to make such charges, but sometimes more difficult to substantiate them. The Minnesota Public Safety Commission has spent numerous hours poring over sworn transcripts of all the speeches, and it has not discovered any sedition. If sedition existed, this body could be trusted to ferret it out.

You did not publish the resolutions adopted by the body, yet you say it "would be futile to go through the long procession of socialism and confiscation which marches over that platform." However, you are not alone in this. The Nonpartisan League was compelled to buy advertising space to have the resolutions inserted in the St. Paul papers, the very city in which the convention was held. They had columns for the denunciation of La Follette, but not enough room for the resolutions of the convention.

And, perhaps, it is well that this is so. It would not speak well for the Nonpartisan League's purity of purpose if it commanded the unanimous support of the metropolitan press. In fact, nothing else would condemn the league so fatally.

DUTCH-BRITISH DEAL IN TRADE DETAILED

Features of Agreement Made About the Same Time as Dutch-German Agreement.

COVERED FOOD PRODUCTS

Dutch Commission Says Waterways Will Be Closed to Germany If They Are Misused.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The substance of the agreement between Great Britain and Holland regulating the amount of food to be obtained by England from the Netherlands and also the amount to go into Germany was made public here today. It shows that Great Britain and Germany made agreements with Holland at about the same time. The British agreement was made Nov. 1, 1916, and the German agreement was made on Dec. 1, 1916.

Only commodities produced in the Netherlands were concerned. Imports were governed by the Netherlands Overseas Trust, which guaranteed to England that none of the products should be sent into Germany. The agreement provided that the total exports from Holland to the United Kingdom should be pro-rated. It was assumed that the remainder, not sent to England, went into Germany.

It was provided that the United Kingdom should get half the total exports of pig meat, one-quarter of the butter, one-third of the cheese, and two-thirds of the milk. Not less than half the exports of meat from Holland to belligerent countries must go to the United Kingdom. This left the other half free to go to Germany as required by the German agreement.

Great Britain, by the agreement, has the right to at least half the exports of potatoes at a price not greater than 50 per cent. over the price fixed by the Dutch Government for home consumption. England also was to get half of the potato flour, which included sago and pudding powder, and obtained quarter of the exports of fruit and vegetables at an average price. Quarter of all the eggs were to go to Great Britain. No live pigs, cream or fodder was to be exported.

It was agreed that exports to neutral European countries should be only to consignees approved by the British. Holland, under the agreement, had the right to import feeding stuffs and fertilizers for agricultural use, but such provisions as this were subject to revision whenever certain agriculture produce exceeded the average of exports.

Liberal bonuses were promised by the British for the articles exported, and the rate of exchange for the payments was guaranteed. Should vessels carrying agricultural products be captured, it was provided that the produce would be considered exported to belligerents.

Shipments to Dutch Colonies were not considered as exports. Exports to France and such parts of Belgium as were within the lines of the Allies and shipments to the Belgian Relief Committee were considered exports to the United Kingdom. Either Great Britain or Holland might terminate the agreement by a month's notice or by default; otherwise it was to remain in force for the duration of the war.

Members of the Dutch Commission stated here today that Holland was obligated under the Rhine navigation convention, in which all nations interested in the navigation of the Rhine participated, to permit the use by Germany of the Netherlands waterways connected with the Rhine. For this reason, it was asserted, Holland could not prevent the non-war use of these waterways by Germany without violating a treaty.

It was stated that earlier in the war the Dutch Government prohibited the use of waterways by Germany for the transportation of loot from Belgium to Germany. Holland, it was stated, was unaware of any military use Germany had made of her waterways, and stood ready, upon proof by England that Germany was so using them, to put an end to the traffic. It was added, however, that Holland had sent military officers to Belgium to discover the uses to which concrete-making materials were put by Germany, and in every instance found them to be nonmilitary.

As far as can be learned no agreement has been reached as to the disposal of the Dutch tonnage held in American waters. The embargo is as tight as ever, and there is no indication that the War Trade Board or State Department is disposed to relent because of recent developments.

J. M. BECK, JR., TO MARRY.

Princeton Aviator's Wedding to Miss Wilmerding Hastened.

Theodore Kearny Wilmerding of 9 East Thirty-ninth Street announced last evening the engagement of his daughter, Miss Adelaide Wilmerding, to James M. Beck, Jr., son of the former Assistant United States Attorney General James M. Beck, and Mrs. Beck of 100 East Sixty-fifth Street. Mr. Beck has received his commission as an aviator at the Princeton Aviation School.

Simultaneously it was announced that the wedding would take place tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Bartholomew's Chapel.

The wedding is hastened because Mr. Beck has been ordered to report for duty with the Signal Corps of the aviation section of the army at San Antonio, Texas, on next Saturday. Only the immediate members of the families and a few intimate friends will be present at the wedding.

Miss Wilmerding is a member of the Junior League of this city. She was active in many entertainments for charity during the last season. Mr. Beck is a member of the Sons of the Revolution, Rumson Country Club, Amateur Comedy Club, and the Delta Phi. He was graduated from Princeton University in 1914.

WOMAN DANCER SHOT BY FRENCH AS SPY

PARIS, Oct. 15.—Mata-Hari, the Dutch dancer and adventuress, who, two months ago, was found guilty by a court-martial on the charge of espionage, was shot at dawn this morning.

The condemned woman, otherwise known as Marguerite Gertrude Zelle, was taken in an automobile from St. Lazaire prison to the parade ground at Vincennes, where the execution took place. Two sisters of Charity and a priest accompanied her.

Mlle. Mata-Hari, long known in Europe as a woman of great attractiveness and with a romantic history, was accused, according to press dispatches, of conveying to the Germans the secret of the construction of the Entente "tanks," this resulting in the Germans rushing work on a special gas to combat their operations.

She was said to have left Paris last Spring and to have spent some time in the English town where the first "tanks" were being made, afterward traveling back and forth between England and Holland, and later going to Spain, where she aroused suspicion by associating with a man whom the French Secret Service had long suspected. When she reappeared in Paris she was arrested—a contributing circumstance, it appears, being the fact that she was seen there with a young British officer attached to the "tank" service.

HAILS BREAK WITH BERLIN.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Secretary Lansing has instructed the American Ministers at Montevideo and Lima to deliver respectively to the Uruguayan and Peruvian Governments messages expressing the appreciation and pride of the United States Government in their action in severing diplomatic relations with Germany.

The message which Mr. Lansing directed the American Minister at Lima to hand to the Peruvian Foreign Minister follows:

"The Government of the United States has received from the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Peru through the Peruvian Minister in Washington a statement under date of Oct. 6, 1917, in which it is set forth that the Peruvian Government, after having vainly endeavored to procure from the German Government a settlement of its claim for the sinking of the Peruvian bark Lorton in violation of the fundamental principles of international law, was compelled to exact of the Imperial German Government a satisfactory solution of the question within eight days, and, that solution having been declared an absolute impossibility by the German Government within a peremptory term, the Peruvian Government had resolved to break diplomatic relations with Germany and had taken the appropriate measures to that end.

TO REPRESENT CANADA HERE

Hazen Will Be Associated with the British Embassy at Washington.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Oct. 15.—The reorganized Canadian Government, it became known today, will be directly represented at Washington by a Commissioner instead of conducting its affairs with the United States through the British Embassy. J. D. Hazen, former Canadian Commissioner of Naval Service and Marine and Fisheries, has been chosen for the post.

At present the British Ambassador handles all Canada's diplomatic business for the United States. Formerly communications between Washington and Ottawa had to go by way of London. Recently the channel of communication has been made more direct, but is still through the British Embassy. Transactions between Canada and the United States have so increased in number and importance since the war began, and especially since the United States entered, that it is now proposed to carry out the long-discussed plan of naming a Canadian Commissioner.

RETAINS TYPEWRITING TITLE

Miss Owens Has Record of 143 Words a Minute for One Hour.

More than 6,000 persons visited the annual Business Show in the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory yesterday. The event of the evening was a typewriting contest for the international championship title and a $1,000 trophy cup. The winner was Miss Margaret Owens, who has held the title and trophy for four years. Her record last night was 143 words a minute for an hour. Miss Hortense Stollnitz, who maintained a speed of 142 words a minute, was second, and Miss Bessie Friedman was third. She also had a speed of 142 words a minute, but in the counting up of work it was decided by the Committee on Awards that she was just a fraction of a word behind Miss Stollnitz. All really wrote faster than would appear, but mistakes cut down their averages.

So close were the contestants that it took the committee until nearly midnight to figure out the records. Meanwhile those who had entered in the various events stood about the door of the committee room and talked shop with their friends. In the amateur event George Hossfeld wrote 145 words a minute for thirty minutes. Miss Rose Bloom was second with 141 words.

TO PROTECT DOGS.

A New Society Formed Under Inspiration of Wicks Law's Hardships

The Dog Lovers' Protective Association of America, which has more than one thousand members, is planning to present a bill to the various State Legislatures to give greater protection to dogs.

The bill, according to James Gardner Rossman, President of the society, will make dogs the personal property of their owners. It will also fix the license fee at $2 for the first year and $1 for subsequent years, and will provide that, in large cities, dogs must be leashed or muzzled.

"The Wicks Dog law has doubled and redoubled the dog tax in New York State, excepting New York City," said Mr. Rossman. "Every dog owner, under it, will be obliged to pay $3.25 for females and $2.25 for males. The Agricultural Department of New York State apparently wants to get control of the machinery of dog licensing throughout the State for the purpose of extending its patronage by offering fees to constables and other petty officials. The Wicks bill, which went into effect last Summer, is vicious, since it permits any one to kill, without recourse at law, any dog that chases a cat, chicken, or other dog beyond his owner's premises."

TELLS DISSATISFIED TO QUIT COUNTRY

RABBI WISE FOR SUFFRAGE

Says He Wants Women to Vote So They Can Make the World Safe for Peace.

A mass meeting at Cooper Union last night, under the auspices of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party, was attended by 300. It was one of the first meetings in the campaign for woman's vote, the question which will be decided at the polls in November. Frederick C. Howe presided. Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, Chairman of the party, was on the platform. Pleas for woman suffrage and questions relating to the war brought forth applause.

Mrs. William Jennings Bryan made a humorous speech telling of her studies into the prejudices of men. Rabbi Stephen Wise was denouncing Elihu Root for his anti-suffrage and other speeches when a voice from the floor called: "Why are you for war, then?"

"I am not for war," the Rabbi shouted. "I am for war against war and Kaiserism, so that we can make peace for the world, and I want the women to vote so they can make the world safe for peace."

"In order to avoid useless questions," said Mr. Barondess, "I will tell you what I have done for America. I have kissed my son good-bye today upon his leaving to enter the army. You will ask why I do not enter the army myself. I want to say that in spite of my 55 years I did offer my services to the Governor, and as God is my witness I am not for war. I hope that we shall have seen the last of war when this is over. We should not be satisfied with our own liberty, but see the realization of our great dream all over the world. They say I am a dreamer, but I would rather have a dream than a nightmare. It is not just for one part of the world to have liberty and the rest of the world to be in chains. It may be right and our duty to criticise our Government in order that it may be better."

"Yes," continued the speaker, "we want a free press, free men and free women. It is equally important that men and women should be politically as well as industrially free."

"This country—" began another voice.

"If you don't like this country, get out of it," said the speaker. "I hope this country is going to be better and freer, but wait until I have finished, and you may heckle me and do anything you like. You can share my millions with me. There is just one thing that you cannot do, you cannot take my son's place on the battlefield. He was not drafted, he enlisted. I took him down and helped him, and I have been doing social work for years and he has supported me. But I tell you that if he should die I would not weep. I would rather have my son die a thousand times than to be a coward and a slacker."

WHITE SOX BECOME WORLD CHAMPIONS

the bat while the crowd was still shaking its fists at Zim. Gandil walloped a hot single over first base, which hopped out to the concrete wall, while Jackson and Felsch scored. Gandil was out trying to stretch his rap into a double.

When the three life-sized runs were flashed up on the scoreboard the White Sox were doing Hawaiian steps all over the lot and the Giants were fit to be tied. Benton was still groggy from indignation, and after Weaver sailed to Burns, Schalk got a hit and Faber walked. John Collins died at first and brought the agonizing inning to a close. When the Giant players trooped back to their bench after that inning it is perhaps just as well that thick concrete walls held Manager John McGraw's talk a secret.

The Giants made the most of Red Faber's wildness in the fifth and a whale of a three-bagger by Charley Herzog gave them a couple of runs. But the Sox held the upper hand and held it for dear life. Intoxicated with the thrill of victory and the anticipation of being champions, they played like clockwork after that and the Giants were helpless. But no one will ever be able to tell New York fans that except for Heinie Zim's atrocious playing in that fourth inning the Giants would not have at least tied up the series.

The 33,969 people who jammed the stands made up the biggest crowd that has witnessed any game of the series. It was a delightful day for the game, warm and bright with sunshine. The crowd jammed the grand stand and filled up the bleachers. Overcoats were in the way and there wasn't even a breeze to chill the afternoon as the sun dipped over Coogan's Bluff.

Giants Expected to Win.

The Giants and their enthusiastic supporters expected to win this game. The defeat in Chicago Saturday they regarded as a careless fizzle. They expected to see the Giants come back at the Sox as they did in the first two games at the Brush Stadium. The Giants were confident of winning yesterday's game and tying the series, and then deciding the issue in a seventh game today. This deep plot was all in the making, and was being carried out just as the Giants planned when along came Heinie Zimmerman and threw a monkey wrench into the machinery.

Johnny Cook and his faithful band of Zimmerman worshippers from the Bronx were a depressed silent gathering after Heinie's monstrous mistake. No longer did the cheers break forth in great roars from their favorite section over back of third base. Their Heinie had proved false, their hero had suddenly changed into a clown, and they cheered him no more.

Upon Red Faber was showered all the admiration for carrying the White Sox through. It was this massive country lad from Cascade, Iowa, who proved to be the savlation of Rowland's pitching staff instead of Eddie Cicotte, upon whom they had depended. Faber pitched a good game of ball yesterday, and gave McGraw's sluggers only half a dozen hits and kept these well scattered through the game. In no one inning were the Giants able to bunch two hits. Charley Herzog's terrific drive to right for three bases was the only dangerous poke the Giants made, and this came after the Sox had already clinched the contest.

New York's pitching was of high order also, and both Benton and Perritt deserved a better fate than the defeat which was brought about by a blunder. With proper support it is doubtful if the Sox would have scored more than one run. Rube was on the mound for five innings, and gave Rowland's men only four hits, while Pol Perritt, who took up the flinging task when Benton was extracted to make way for Pinch Hitter Wilhoit, allowed only two hits, one of which was coined into an earned run.

Faber Stolid in Pinches.

The Giants went down fighting hard, but the quick break of Faber's curves hopped around too elusively for the Giants' heavy artillery to start on any effective flaying matinée. When Giant runners were on the bases Faber was at his best, and although he was inclined to be wild, he was always on hand to deliver the goods in a crisis.

The loss of the world's series of 1917 is a hard blow to McGraw and his club, which was ranked as the best that has won a National League pennant in many years. The McGraw hard luck in world's series play is becoming a tradition in baseball. Four times in the last seven years McGraw's Giants have won the National League pennant and in four world's series following the Giants have gone down to defeat against the American League. The margin of the younger league's advantage this year, however, was narrow. That the deciding game hinged on a flock of illtimed errors, both of ommission and commission, shows how closely the battle was waged and how slight the advantage of the winners.

There can be no holding back the great praise that is due the White Sox. Rowland has a great ball club, and they are all fighters. The way they climbed out of the ruck and won the fifth game in Chicago stamped them as a great uphill team. Even with their pitching staff failing to come up to expectations, not for one moment did their confidence waver. They were imbibed with the idea of winning this series, and they fought their way to the top after six of the best games that the world's series has even seen in years.

There can be no denying the honor that is due Eddie Collins, who this year has shown himself to be even a greater world's series player than in former years. It was his quick, brainy play in yesterday's game which led Zimmerman into making his foolish play which so upset the Giants' calculations that they could not recover. His second base play throughout the series was a work of art, and in all the wrangling and nagging between the players in the heat and thick of battle the deportment of Collins was always a model of fair play and good sportsmanship.

Collins Backbone of Club.

It was Eddie Collins who made this club of Rowland's. His quiet advice at critical stages of play, his keen knowledge of the Giant batsmen, all played a part in New York's downfall. As each Giant came to bat Collins, commanding the situation like a General on the battlefield, turned and placed his men in their proper places. Often he would run up and whisper words of advice to the Sox pitchers. In the fifth inning yesterday, when Red Faber was getting wild and had walked two of the Giants, it was the smooth encouragement of Collins which brought the big fellow back to his normal condition.

In all the array of White Sox pitchers who have faced the Giants in this series there is none the equal of Faber. He has greater speed and a more quickly breaking curve than Cicotte. He fooled the Giants constantly yesterday by bluffing to throw a moist ball when he was using just a common, fast-breaking curve. Faber is the kind of athlete who has the qualifications of a great pitcher, for it is in time of stress that he can master his greatest resources and gamely pitch himself out of difficulties.

After Zimmerman had raised havoc with the Giants' chances in the fourth and McGraw's men were glum and despondent, a ray of hope flickered for them in the fifth. Walter Holke succumbed to Faber's curves and struck out, but Bill Rariden was patient, and after Faber had two strikes on him Bill waited him out and got a pass when the Sox flinger's shoots went wide of the corners.

As Rube Benton went to get his club and take his turn at bat, McGraw waved him aside and called Wilhoit into the game to hit for the retiring pitcher. Wilhoit was also patient, and Faber gave him a pass. The crowd immediately awakened from the silence into which it had fallen after the sad occurrence earlier, and encouraged the Giants with great waves of cheering. In that crowd were men who had wagered thousands of dollars on the outcome of this game, and they threw their hats into the air and stirred up a riot of noise to rattle Faber. When Burns faced Red it looked dangerous for the White Sox, but the best that he could do was to roll a grounder to Weaver, who made a brilliant stop of a hopping ball and forced Wilhoit at second with a lightning-fast toss. Rariden scooted around to third on the out.

Herzog Hits Far Into Right.

Charley Herzog, who had been trying to prod the Giants into action all through the game, pranced about nervously at the plate and tried his best to encourage Faber's wildness. Faber flipped a fast one at Herzog, which took a sharp curve toward the outside of the plate, and the Giants' Captain crashed into it with his bat, sending a screaming drive to right field close to the foul line. The ball bounded along on its wild way toward the wall as John Collins raced after it. The noise from the hysterical Giant fans grew in volume with every bound of the ball. Collins played the ball badly off the wall, and when it struck it carromed off the concrete in the opposite direction in which Collins was running.

By the time Collins had captured the ball Rariden and Burns had crossed the plate and Herzog was on third. Now Zim's play was forgotten, and the crowd was yelling like mad for Benny Kauff. Yes, Benny was up, the same Benny who a few days ago threw the crowd into spasms of joy with two colossal home runs. The din became deafening as Benny stood at the bat watching Faber. Benny swung with as terrific a strain as he always swings, and the ball shot high into the air on foul territory off first base. Gandil made an easy catch and the rally was squelched.

The Giants weren't beaten yet, not by a long shot. In the seventh Pol Perritt came forward and did his bit for the Giants' cause, and if some of his clubmates had been able to do as much Pol would surely have tied the score. After Rariden had grounded out to Gandil in this inning, Perritt slammed a base hit to centre field. In the two times that Pol was at the bat in the series he made two hits, which gives him perfect ranking as a batsman. Faber was plainly disturbed, being so roughly treated by a fellow-pitcher. If the other Giants couldn't hit him he couldn't see why Perritt was able to get this clean, dangerous single. Much was expected of Burns, but he popped a fly to Weaver.

Perritt Goes to Third.

Faber unlashed a wild one while Herzog was at the bat, and it splashed through Schalk's glove and rolled toward the backstop. Perritt, who had tried several times to get down to second only to be called back on fouls, raced down to the middle bag for dear life this trip. He reached second and tumbled in a heap. Schalk was so anxious when he recovered the ball that he made a wild heave to Collins, and Perritt climbed to his feet in a jiffy and set his long, lanky legs into action toward third base, where he arrived blowing like a porpoise, with his cap lost by the wayside and his hair flying in all directions.

Here was Herzog still at bat. The crowd implored and beseeched him to cut loose. They didn't ask for a three-bagger this time, they would be satisfied with a nice clean single. Go to it, Herzog! The hope of 34,000 people rested in Herzog's bat. It was in his power now to make them joyful or thrust them into deep gloom. What did he do? The first one Faber shot over was a ball. Fine! The next one he hit and whacked off a foul. Not so good. Then, Oh, the pity of it! he struck way under one of Faber's spinning curves and the ball flew up again high over Weaver's head, dropping serenely into Buck's outstretched hands. Another chance gone, and gone forever.

The Sox were hanging on by that one run margin and they considered it too slim for safety. In the first of the ninth they they added another run for good measure. Buck Weaver hoisted a Texas Leaguer back of second, which landed safely for a single, and Schalk popped a foul to Heinie Zim. Faber sent Weaver down to second with a sacrifice, and Little Nemo Leibold was up. Weaver and Fletcher were trying to outwit each other at second and started to bump each other around. It looked for a moment as if Bucko and Fletcher would carry their fun too far. But the National Commission early in the day had ordered the umpires to quell all rough work and rough talk, so when Billy Evans warned the two players the controversy ended.

Weaver Adds a Tally.

Nemo pasted a single to centre and Benny Kauff romped in to try to make a catch off the top of the grass. He didn't quite reach the ball and Weaver hurried homeward, easily beating Benny's throw.

The Giants had one more chance left. In the last of the ninth Dave Robertson, who has been the king batsman of the series, was hit on the hand and got free transportation to first. It was now up to Holke. The fans begged him to knock it out of the lot and tie the score, but Eddie Collins threw Holke out at first, playing it safely and allowing Robertson to go to second unmolested. Then Rariden fanned.

Then came McGraw's final desperate effort in the series of 1917. He sent Lew McCarty, still suffering from a wrenched shoulder, in to bat for Perritt, and Lew slashed a grounder at Eddie Collins. Into the Sox second baseman's hands the ball hopped, rested for a moment, and with machine-like sureness he easily flipped the ball to Gandil, and the series was over.

As the disappointed crowd surged down onto the field, Manager McGraw, who had been coaching at first base, rushed into the diamond, elbowed his way through the howling mass of spectators, and grasped the hand of Red Faber. It was a hearty sincere handshake, for a few years ago McGraw, on the Giants-White Sox trip around the world, had borrowed Faber from Jimmy Callahan, as he was short of pitchers. Faber was under McGraw's guidance when the teams played in every country around the globe and the Giants manager took a great liking to Red. He taught him many tricks and gave him good advice. Little did McGraw think at that time that one day this same awkward Red Faber would beat his Giants out of a world's championship.

After he had spoken a few words of congratulation to Faber McGraw rushed on through the crowd until he found Clarence Rowland. Here was a picture. McGraw, one of the oldest and craftiest leaders in the game, squeezing the outstretched mitt of the bush league manager from Peoria, the same Clarence Rowland, a mere novice in the major leagues, who was said to be so young and inexperienced that the Giants would play horse with him.

Youth will tell—it always tells—just as it did when Rowland and McGraw clashed. There were tears of happiness in Rowland's eyes as McGraw grasped his hand, and he was happier still when McGraw told him he had won with as game and fair a team as he had ever played against.

DEFEAT ACCEPTED CALMLY.

Fans Expected Victory, but Were Treated to a Comedy of Errors.

On the island of Manhattan last night and in Brooklyn and the suburbs, too, the name of Heinie Zimmerman was a household word for every one of the 34,000 fans, who crowded into Brush Stadium yesterday primed to see the Giants victorious in the sixth game of the world's series, but carried away an indelible picture of Zim and Eddie Collins in a foot race along the trail to the home plate, which was ended when Collins scored. And, no matter whether an alibi can be established for Zimmerman or not, the spectators were in no mood to accept, and already they have enthroned Zimmerman among that select few, headed by Fred Merkle, who one time failed to touch second.

There was a confidence on the part of the spectators yesterday that the Giants would succeed in revivifying themselves at the Polo Grounds just as they had done in the third and fourth games, and there was a lot of money wagered that the McGraw clan would be victorious in the sixth game at least. The seventh was still held to be much in doubt. The comedy of errors, however, cut short the expectations of yesterday's victory, and the crowd saw the seventh game only as a possibility in some other world's series of future years.

It was a gathering which came to the ball park urged to do homage to the Giants, for while there had been talk of the poor playing of the New York club in Chicago, the evidence which has been spread before the fans in this city has been aglitter with brilliant play that seemed to spell nothing except eventual victory. The Giants were high favorites from the time the first ball flashed over the plate until the outcropping of errors turned enthusiasm into cold apathy. Every Giant was a giant in fact and fancy until the light of failure illumined the scene and showed them only pigmies. When the Sox first scored there was a groan and when three runs finally rolled across the plate in the fourth inning there was a cold shiver, as if the spectators were trying to awaken from a bad dream.

Hope once more was revived when the Giants made the most of a situation in the fifth inning and crowded two runners over the plate. From then on the crowd hoped against hope that the scant margin of one run would not be all too insurmountable for the Giants to overcome. It may truthfully be said that the Giants did try valiantly but the mole hill of one run was fast becoming the proverbial mountain.

The crowd cheered every deserving effort of the Giants. They implored and begged them to get the runs necessary for winning, or at least tying the struggle, but to no avail, and then came the fourth run for the Sox, and the spectators began to make their way toward the exits sure in their own minds that the series of 1917 was as good as over.

This series, as far as the New York public is concerned, has been a revelation. With the Giants coming home to play such a decisive game as the one of yesterday it would have been according to past precedent that the fans anxious to secure seats would crowd the entrance gates early in the morning, even that the old night line might form. Instead all was peaceful and serene at the Polo Grounds yesterday morning. The casual observer would hardly have gleaned from the handful of people in line early in the day that a world's series game of decisive proportions was going to be waged in the early afternoon. There was only a handful of early birds, and the sandwich and coffee men who live in the lap of luxury during a world's series looked mournfully at the small gathering and turned away.

The gates were thrown open at 9:20, and then there were only 700 people present. These were quickly accommodated, and then there was a lull. Along about noon the vanguard of the real host of fans began to appear, but still there was no indication of such a large crowd as was inside the park on previous days at that time.

Heretofore the drift toward the Polo Grounds has been gradual, the park filling up steadily from early morning without any crowding. Apparently this was taken to indicate that it would be as well to come late, and this thought pervading all minds, there was a big jam of people at the gates a little while before game time. When the game was called at 2 o'clock the park was full as far as the eye could tell. There didn't seem to be a vacant seat anywhere, unless it was that the bleachers in centre field were not accommodating quite all that they were intended to hold.

BENTON'S WORK IS IN VAIN

Veteran Is Master Until Support Cracks and Giants' Rally Falls Short of Turning Back Sox.

Almost every seat in the gigantic structure was occupied when Rube Benton started to warm up for the Giants and Urban Faber for the White Sox. At that time it was a happy gathering, but shortly thereafter, as the following details relate, all happiness was shoved out of the park and barely a cheer welcomed the new world's champions. It happened as follows:

First Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Benton breezed the first ball pitched straight over the heart of the plate for a called strike on John Collins. Collins only foul-tipped a slow one and then rolled the next to Fletcher for an easy out to Holke. McMullin watched the first one sail high over his head and swung under the second, only to raise a high foul which Rariden gathered in without great exertion. Eddie Collins was liberally booed, especially when Benton sped the first offering across the plate for a strike, but Eddie won the favor of the crowd immediately after with a line single to centre. Jackson swung viciously on the first ball offered him, but pulled it too far and the foul rested in the grand stand. Benton served a curve ball and Jackson caught it on the end of his bat for a slow roller to Herzog, who raced in fast, scooped up the ball and threw out Jackson at first. No runs, one hit, no errors.

GIANTS.—Believing that a job well done was that quickly accomplished, George Burns put his bat against the opening pitch of Faber and sent the ball sliding to Eddie Collins, who scooped it up gracefully and finished Burns at first. Herzog heard a strike called and watched a wide one pass before he brought the first real cheer from the immense crowd with a sizzling line single to left. Imbued with hope by Herzog's success the crowd greeted Benny Kauff with resounding applause. Benny only tipped the first offering and swung so hard at the second that when he missed connections the bat flew from his hands and Benny sprawled on the earth. The next pitch was wide and the fourth too far inside, but Benny offered at the one close to him and became Faber's first strike-out victim. Zim only allowed one ball to pass by before he rocketed to Jackson in left field for the third out. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Second Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Benton used a wide curve to fool Happy Felsch, who still seemed to command a lot of respect from the Giant pitchers. The first hooked over the plate, but the next two were wide. Felsch swung too hard at the fourth offering and missed. The fifth was another wide curve and the sixth too low, but Felsch wanted to hit, so struck at the low one and was called out on strikes. Gandil met the first ball pitched to him with a vicious swing, which sent the ball ringing into centre field. Kauff made a nice stop of the flying pellet and thereby held it to a single just when it seemed to be on a journey to the fence.

Weaver also proved to be a first ball hitter, but was hardly as successful as his predecessor. He drove the ball sharply to Herzog, who fumbled long enough to lose a chance for a double play, but recovered in time to throw out Weaver at first. With Gandil on second, Schalk turned the ball toward deep short. Zimmerman raced over, grabbed the ball with one hand, turned completely around, and threw it to Holke, just an instant before Schalk crossed first base. No runs, one hit, no errors.

GIANTS.—Fletcher grinned foolishly after vainly trying to connect with a wide sweeping curve. He only tipped the second offering, but it dropped on the first-base line in fair territory, and it was only the quick work of Ray Schalk and a clever pick-up of Schalk's low throw by Gandil which retired Fletcher at first.

Robertson fouled off the first offering and sent a hot grounder to Eddie Collins on the second, but it was not too hot for Eddie, and Robbie came to an untimely end via Gandil. Jackson, in left field for Chicago, played in close with Holke at bat, and immediately had cause for worry as Holke pounded the ball far over Jackson's head up against the left-field fence and was at second before Jackson could get the ball back to the infield. It was the first extra-base blow of the game and raised a tremendous cheer, which quickly rumbled into a groan when Rariden pounded the first ball offered him to the mechanically perfect fielder, Eddie Collins. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Third Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Benton tried to force his pitching rival, Faber, to hit at bad offerings, but Faber never so much as blinked when the first two went by and were called balls. Benton shoved a strike over and then Faber became industrious enough to foul off two before he missed the third strike. John Collins continued to have trouble, as his pop-up settled snugly in Herzog's hands. With the count one ball and one strike on him, McMullin tried to bunt, but again missed, and was so dumfounded by his failure he stood with bat resting on his shoulder as the third one whizzed over. Two strike-outs was Benton's portion in the inning. No runs, no hits, no errors.

GIANTS.—Not to be outdone by Benton, even if he was in Benton's own backyard, Faber wasted little time retiring Benton on strikes. Burns ducked away from one too close to him for comfort and connected firmly against the next, but it went on a line right into the hands of Felsch. Faber pitched craftily against Herzog on this occasion and earned decided results when Herzog lifted a high fly, which came down in the outstretched mitts of Felsch. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Fourth Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Once more the fourth session provided the decision of the game, but it came in a manner stunning to New York's followers, who were unprepared for the series of disasters which followed in rapid sequence. Heinie Zimmerman was doubly, and many think more so, at fault right at the outset, when he picked up Eddie Collins's bounder and threw wildly past Holke, the ball going to the grand stand and Collins to second on the two-base error. As if this were not enough harm against Benton, Robertson followed by dropping Jackson's high fly, which placed Jackson on first base and gave Eddie Collins a chance to hotfoot it to third. Benton had made Jackson bunt foul twice and was still pitching invincibly.

Even with Felsch at bat, Collins on third and Jackson on first and none out, Benton was not discouraged. Errors of commission are likely to happen any time and Benton knew it. He curved the first offering to Felsch and Felsch fouled it into the right field stand. The second was another curve and Benton was rewarded when Felsch bounded it right back into Rube's hands. Collins was midway between home and third by this time and standing stock still, so Benton tossed the ball to Zimmerman. Zim started up the line toward Collins, who was waving wildly to Jackson and Felsch to hustle around the bases before the going got too hot for the Chicago Captain. Zimmerman tossed the ball to Rariden, and the catcher, properly, chased Eddie back toward third, hoping to get Collins at that bag before the fast running Jackson arrived there. When Collins was near third Rariden tossed the ball back to Zimmerman, and Heinie, taking in the situation and guessing wrongly, as it turned out afterwards, decided the best thing to do was to touch out Collins.

Zimmerman started after Eddie and Eddie legged it toward the plate. Rariden blocked the path and prepared for a throw from Zim, which was the expected play, but Zim at that moment was determined to show up Eddie Collins as a sprinter. Rariden had to step aside to let Collins go flying by, since blocking a runner off a baseline is prohibited in the rules, and still Zim came chasing after. With nobody in front of him and a husky, baseball-wild, Bronx resident coming behind him, Collins had nothing else to do but sprint over the plate. If Zim was in a foot race, or testing his speed, it might be mentioned now that the man in front gained on Zim in the short dash instead of losing ground.

Zimmerman was going so fast that he went twenty feet beyond the plate before he could turn around. This state of affairs was not lost on Jackson and Gandil, who got to third and second respectively before Zim realized that it was a world's series baseball game he was mixed up in and not a game of tag.

Three such plays in succession were enough to break the heart of a pitcher even of Benton's courage, and it was no wonder that Benton's first offering to Gandil was sent spinning over first base by the Sox hitter and that Jackson and Felsch came home on the hit. Gandil expected that Robertson, too, would be in a demoralized state and tried to take two bases on the hit, but was out at second on Robertson's good throw. Benton was still bemoaning his fate and probably wrathfully considering his assistants, but Weaver helped him out of a hole by raising a fly to Burns. Schalk took advantage of the sickened Rube with a single to centre and Faber waited patiently for a pass to first, but with things again looking dark the amiable John Collins ended the fateful inning with a grounder to Fletcher. Three runs, two hits, two errors.

GIANTS.—After the crowd recovered from its horror of the atrocities committed, it saw Benny Kauff at the plate and hoped that Benny might duplicate his fourth inning home run of the fourth game. However, Benny was not in such humor and his effort resulted in an easy bounding chance, Eddie Collins to Gandil. The crowd offered Zimmerman no encouragement, and some of the spectators were inclined to be a bit abusive, which did not help Zim any. He was at bat long enough to miss two swings at the ball, see two wide ones pass harmlessly by and lift a high fly to John Collins in right field. Fletcher hammered the first ball pitched to him bounding between third and short, but Weaver halted it with a marvelous stop. Weaver made a fast throw toward Gandil trying to halt Fletcher, but had so precious little time the ball came low and bounded away from Gandil, while Fletcher got credit for a hit. Fletcher spiked Gandil crossing the base, but the injury did not prevent Gandil from continuing in the game. Robertson left Fletcher chained to first with a high fly to Felsch. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Fifth Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Benton was still wabbly from the effects of the dismal support in the fourth inning and was in the hole, three balls and two strikes, to McMullin, when McMullin pasted the ball on a line to centre field. Kauff came in on the run and managed to gather in the ball before it hit the ground. Eddie Collins picked out the fourth ball offered him to send skyward into left field and to fall into the hands of Burns. Benton started a slow ball in the general direction of the plate with Jackson up and Shoeless Joe swung so hard at it that when he missed he turned around twice and then sat down on the ground. When Jackson had recovered his mental and physical balance Benton again served a slow ball, but this time Jackson met it for a stinging grounder to Herzog, who fumbled badly, but recovered in time to throw out Jackson at first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

GIANTS.—McGraw's men had recovered from the shock of the fourth frame when they took their bats in this session. That is, all had excepting young Walter Holke. Walter still was in the throes of despondency and only waved his bat feebly at three offerings whizzed over the plate by the confident Faber. Rariden grimly waited, determined to make Faber work, if nothing else, and drew the award of patience by being passed to first. It was Faber's first base on balls and it was followed almost immediately by another streak of wildness. Benton had been removed to allow Wilhoit to pinch bat, and Wilhoit was even as patient as Rariden. This streak of wildness caused a flurry of excitement in the White Sox camp and sent Eddie Cicotte to the warming pit to prepare to hold the lead of three runs, presented the inning before. Burns hit the first ball, regardless of Faber's wildness, and helped the White Sox cause immeasurably by rolling to Weaver, who made a fast play getting the ball to Eddie Collins for a force-out of Wilhoit at second. Rariden galloped to third and Burns got to first. Herzog was well aware that Faber would risk putting the ball over the plate, as a cure for wildness, and when the ball came Herzog was ready for it. He pounded it on a line to right field for what would have been a single, but John Collins, the intrepid, attempted to make an impossible one-handed shoestring catch and the ball bounded by him to the right field wall. Rariden and Burns both scored and Herzog got to third before Felsch came to the rescue of John Collins. Benny Kauff was begged by the boisterous, howling multitude to tie the score, and any kind of a hit would have brought about that result, but Benny was too anxious and his ofering was only a pop foul to Gandil. Two runs, one hit, no errors.

Sixth Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Pol Perritt made his third entry into the series as a relief pitcher at this juncture, and Pol did as well as could be asked as a pitcher and hitter. Felsch, the first man to face Perritt, found Pol a bit uncertain of the location of the plate, and Pol never did find out in time to keep Felsch from walking to first base, a recipient of a pass. With Felsch aboard first Perritt suddenly got his sights adjusted and threw just three times to send Gandil back to the bench, a strike-out victim. Felsch did not wait for Gandil to strike out, but attempted to steal second, and was cut down on Rariden's throw to Fletcher. With the count three balls and one strike, Weaver sent a roller to Herzog, who had to make a fast sprint toward the diamond and a quick throw to retire Weaver at first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

GIANTS.—Zimmerman was far from being a well man. He allowed a strike to breeze over, half swung at a bad one, then bounded his usual offering to Eddie Collins. Zim did not even run out the chance, for which the crowd booed a little more. Fletcher lifted the first offering sent his way for a high foul near the Giants' bench. Gandil ran for the ball, and so did Schalk, but Gandil yelled loud enough to halt the catcher and then Gandil caught the ball. Eddie Collins seemed to know where Robertson was going to send the ball, since he moved well over toward first and brought Weaver over behind second. Collins guessed right, but was not over far enough since Robertson hit the ball spinning into right field for a single. Holke was unable to provide any help, his bounder being taken by Eddie Collins. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Seventh Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Perritt evidently had more confidence in his pitching with a man on first than otherwise, or that might go as an explanation for the base on balls issued to Ray Schalk, with only a strike offered to relieve the monotony of wide ones. Faber came to bat determined to bunt in the hope of sacrificing Schalk to second, but the first offering was too low and the next two were curves, each of which Faber bunted to foul territory. Then Faber obligingly struck out. Nemo Leibold was substituted at bat for John Collins, but had no instant effect, as his pop fly fell in the hands of Herzog. Herzog dropped the ball purposely and threw to Holke in an attempt to make a double play, but Holke missed his part of the affair. Holke was standing on the base when he caught Herzog's throw and of course Leibold was out as soon as the catch was made. Schalk also was standing on the base, and when the out of Leibold was effected Schalk was entitled to that station. The Giants kicked against the decision, but the umpires explained that the double play was not possible unless Holke had been off the bag and had touched Schalk out first before retiring Leibold. The umpires once more were right. McMullin only got a foul off Perritt before being called out on a curve which hooked over the corner of the plate. No runs, no hits, no errors.

GIANTS.—Rariden watched two strikes pass by, fouled off three attempts to connect, saw two wide ones offered, and then grounded out to Gandil unassisted. Perritt did his best to tie up the proceedings both as a batter and base runner and came near doing it. On the second offering from Faber, Perritt lined the ball into centre field for a single, his second safe hit in as many chances in the series. This being the lucky (?) seventh the crowd howled with delight as Perritt rested at first and anxiously awaited the efforts of Burns. Burns took a strike, fouled off three, disdainfully, wawtched three balls pass by, and popped to Weaver. Perritt was almost to second when he discovered that Weaver was about to catch the ball, but hustled back in time.

Herzog fouled the ball on the hit and run, and again Perritt got almost to second, only to have to return. He was still full of running, however, and when Schalk allowed the next pitch to get away for a short passed ball, Perritt again started for second. Schalk recovered the ball, but made a hurried and wild throw, which got away from Weaver, and Perritt never stopped until he slid into third. It was the second big opportunity for Herzog, but this time the Giant Captain lacked the punch, and the opportunity faded on another pop fly to Weaver. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Eighth Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Perritt had lost some wind, but not all he possessed, and proved it by putting a strike across on Eddie Collins. Eddie met the second offering. The ball bounded to Holke, who beat Eddie in a race for the bag. One wag suggested that it should have been Holke in that earlier race with Collins instead of Zimmerman. Jackson was so delighted at being able to hit against right-handed curves he hardly could wait to send the ball ringing into right field for a single. It was the first hit off Perritt, and was wasted utterly when Felsch hit the third one offered high into the air just ouside first-base territory, and Holke caught the ball. Gandil missed the first two pitched to him and fouled three in a row trying to help Jackson along. Gandil finally got hold of the ball for a long, rakish ride to centre field, but Kauff was under it in time. No runs, one hit, no errors.

GIANTS.—As the Giants felt the bigger end of the world's series spoils getting away from them they frantically tried to break through Faber's pitching. Kauff laced into the ball, but hit a fraction of an inch under it, and got nothing but a towering fly to Leibold. Leibold had to make a long run, but succeeded.

It seemed Zimmerman's last chance in this affair to do something worth while, and he apparently realized it. He foultipped the first one, carefully avoided any recognition of a wide one, and spanked the third offering bounding over Faber's head. The crowd cried out in joy, anticipating a hit for Zim, but it had not reckoned on Weaver, who hastened over behind second, intercepted the ball, and with marvelous accuracy threw out Zim at first base. Fletcher gave McMullin an easy chance for an out to Gandil. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Ninth Inning.

WHITE SOX.—The Chicago champions were not done yet. On the third ball offered him Weaver dropped a Texas leaguer just out of the reach of Fletcher and got credit for a single. Schalk barely dodged away from a ball coming straight for his head, backed away from a second close one, and then fouled to Zimmerman, who ran to the stands to catch the ball. Faber sacrifice bunted toward first, Weaver getting to second. Faber was out, Perritt to Holke. Leibold missed a vicious swing at the ball, but connected with the second offering. The ball went on a line to centre field. Kauff ran in, but had no chance to catch it. Weaver rounded third and started for home. Kauff momentarily juggled the ball, which gave Weaver just the time needed to score the fourth run for Chicago. Leibold got to second on the throw home, but got no further because McMullin fell a victim to Zimmerman's toss to Holke.

GIANTS.—Robertson wanted to hammer out a home run, but his effort only resulted in a foul into the lower right-field grand stand. He did not get another chance, as the next ball pitched struck him on the finger and he was walked to first, a hit-by-pitched-ball victim. Umpire Klem first denied the right of a free ticket to Robertson, but when McGraw and Robertson exhibited the reddened digit Klem decided that Robbie had been hit. Holke met the first ball pitched and sent it rolling to Eddie Collins, who elected to play it safe and threw out Holke at first instead of trying for a doubtful double play. Rariden, by dint of patience and a couple of fouls, worked the count to three balls and two strikes before allowing the deciding strike to pass over the plate unmolested. Lew McCarty, broken leg, injured shoulder, and all, was sent to the plate to bat for Perritt, and it was McCarty's roller to Eddie Collins, Collins's toss to Gandil at first base, which ended the world's series for 1917 and brought the White Sox its second baseball title in the history of the game.

CHICAGO FATHERS JOYOUS.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Members of the Chicago City Council were engaged in a heated debate today when Mayor William Hale Thompson rapped for order and announced that the Chicago Americans had won the world's baseball championship. The victory was greeted with an uproar.

A resolution congratulating Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox, on the victorious players was passed and ordered telegraphed to New York. "All those in favor of the resolution signify by saying 'aye,'" said the Mayor. The response in favor of it was deafening.

"Let the records show that for once the Council agreed unanimously on a subject," replied the Mayor.

Harvard Eleven in Benefit Game.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 15.—Receipts from the football game to be played here Saturday between the Harvard 'Varsity informal team and the eleven of the First Maine Heavy Artillery will be given to the Red Cross, it was announced today. The soldiers plan to bring along about a thousand of their regiment and five bands, while the Harvard regiment will add to the military aspect by a drill before the game.

FALL REGATTA IS PLAN AT HARVARD

BOSTON, Oct. 15.—Harvard is awaiting the action of other colleges before deciding whether it shall engage in intercollegiate rowing competition next Spring. It is generally expected that there will be a Harvard-Yale freshman race anyway, and if Yale has a 'Varsity crew there will probably be an informal Harvard-Yale 'Varsity race.

Meanwhile a dozen or more crews are out on the Charles every afternoon for the fun, the exercise, and interclass and interclub rivalry. 'Varsity oarsmen of last year who have returned to college have been formed into four club crews, and already the best of them have been selected for the Eliot and Thayer crews. Six freshman crews are practicing every day. Late this month there will be a Fall regatta with a special race between the Eliot and Thayer crews, bumping races, and interclass and individual competitions for the Slocum and Filley trophies and other prizes.

Single sculling, to which little attention has been given in previous years, is likely to boom at Cambridge. Coach Haines, who is devoting most of his attention now to the leading club crews to form the nucleus of a 'Varsity crew if there should be one next Spring, will continue instruction on the rowing machines indoors after ice prevents work in the river.

BARS EXHIBITION GAMES.

Commission Will Hold $1,000 of Each Player's Share as Bond.

The National Commission threw a bombshell among the champion White Sox and the near-champion Giants yesterday when it passed a rule forbidding the players from taking any barnstorming trips at the close of the series. The White Sox had been offered $10,000 by John P. Crozer of Upland to play an exhibition game with the Upland Club of the Delaware County League on Oct. 19. Eddie Collins was the manager of the trip, and the offer had been accepted.

It was not that the exhibition games and any others which might be scheduled have been canceled by the commission that made the players so mad last night. It was because the commission had decided to retain $1,000 from each player's share of the receipts of the world's series as a bond to prevent them from playing these exhibition games.

When the players heard about the ruling at the Polo Grounds after the game yesterday, they were furious, and the Giants elected Captain Charley Herzog and the Sox appointed Eddie Collins to rush at once and see the National Commission and lodge their protest. The commission will hold the $1,000 share of each player until Dec. 1, when it will be paid to the players, with 6 per cent. interest. Any players who violate the rule will not be paid the $1,000.

The players claim that this ruling is illegal, and if the commission does not decide to rescind it, the players on both the Sox and the Giants may take legal action to recover their money.

COLUMBIA HAS EASY DAY.

Head Coach Metcalfe limited the Columbia 'Varsity to a light workout yesterday. Howard Miller, the backfield star, did not put on his uniform, as he is resting up to prepare for Saturday's game with Union. After tackling the dummy and running through signals, a ten-minute scrimmage limbered the men up. Then followed a long discussion in the locker rooms, with play diagrams and questions.

The Freshmen and the second team battled for half an hour, the yearlings showing up better than ever. Although the material is neither numerous nor exceptionally capable, it looks at present as if 1921 would be represented by a fighting eleven. The seconds scored once on the Fresh, but the latter came back and threatened their opponents' goal line. After three downs the Freshmen scored from the twenty-five-yard line on a drop-kick.

At present the yearling lineup is: Ends, Johnson, Eccles, Longman; tackles, Garragus, Relyea; guards, Korn, Backrack; centre, Keninger; quarter, Mullinose, Stewart; half backs, Laskey, De Fronzo, Harte; full back, Mills.

Broadway S. C. Card Is Off.

There will be no boxing show at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn this evening, according to an announcement made last night by an official of the organization. The original bout arranged, which was to have featured Harry Greb, the sturdy Pittsburgh middleweight, against Al McCoy of Brooklyn, who is regarded as the champion of the class, was abandoned because, it was asserted by the Broadway S. C. management, McCoy refused to go on with the bout. It was announced that Clay Turner, the Indian boxer, had been secured to oppose Greb, but this contest also fell through.

DISPATCH, BUT NO NEATNESS

By IRVIN S. COBB.

"Well, gentlemen," said Mr. Clarence Rowland at 1:58 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the place being the Polo Grounds and Mr. Rowland having just finished the job of figuring up what a winning manager's share of the world's series receipts would be, in order to avoid having to do so later in the hurry of catching a train for the West: "Well, gentlemen, in what inning shall we take today's game, which is now impending? It is customary for us to take these games in the fourth inning; nevertheless, I am open to suggestions."

"We took Saturday's game in the eighth, as you may recall," spoke up Mr. Kid Gleason.

"Yes, I know," said Mr. Rowland, "but that was due to delayed transmission. I can only account for our slowness upon the occasion of last Saturday's game on the ground that something must have detained us."

"For one, I believe in abiding by precedent," said Mr. E. Collins. "What is the use of departing from a rule which to date has worked with the utmost satisfaction and resulting, if I may be so bold as to say so, in the greatest good to the greatest number? I move we take the game in the fourth, and then we'll have nothing on our minds during the remainder of the afternoon."

"I second that motion," stated Mr. J. Collins positively.

"It is moved and seconded that the fourth or regular inning shall be the inning in which we tuck this pastime away in moth balls," said Mr. Rowland. "All in favor of that motion will signify by saying aye; contrary-minded no. The ayes seem to have it, and the ayes do have it and it is so ordered."

So then as Nick Altrock would succinctly put it, they went and done it, just like they said.

The Versatility of Heinie.

To an innocent bystander the ensuing tragedy or comedy, or whatever you want to call it, offers in retrospect few complications for consideration, but upon the official scorers a difficult task devolves. In compiling the results, they must find some way of giving Heinie Zimmerman credit, in the Giants' column, for one error, and in the White Sox column, for two assists. It is not often that an athlete thus distinguishes himself in an ordinary ball game, let alone in the deciding game of a world's series. But then Heinie is versatile. Say what else about him you will—and doubtless a great number of persons have already done so—just the same you must concede that Heinie is versatile.

The occasion of his breaking simultaneously, as it were, into both sections of the box score—a feat which, so far as my recollection goes, has never before been accomplished—came in the fourth inning, just as Mr. Rowland's entourage had arranged. However, they had counted on bringing about the desired result themselves, never expecting such magnificent aid from a quarter like a theoretically hostile third base.

Up to this time things had progressed in a very pleasant manner. All over the grand stand native sons of New York, who had figured originally that no organization originating outside of New York could be better than a number 2 road company, and who had wagered their money accordingly, were remarking to one another that after all it was utterly preposterous to expect that a bunch of ham troupers from away out West somewhere could really win against an all-star metropolitan production having the unqualified indorsement of the New York critics. Those preceding three victories for the visiting barbarians must have been flukes. And anyhow, didn't that good old John McGraw dearly delight to come from behind and make a Snapper Garrison finish of it? Why, coitingly he did! Always, bo, always!

An Effective Stage Setting.

While these gentlemen were saying this thing, one to another, a bright, soft, Indian Summer sun was shining down upon a field as emerald green as a Sinn Feiner's conception of heaven; and several thousand persons, who had no business there, were jamming themselves into the press stand; and Rube Benton was pitching a very superior article of ball; and hot dogs were selling like hot cakes; and every smart play by a member of the McGraw outfit was being rewarded with a vocal tribute from 34,000 throats that sounded like Niagara Falls, the battle of Verdun on one of the Crown Prince's off days, and the waters coming down at Lodore all rolled into one; and the Boo Brothers, constituting a local offshoot of the parent lodge at Chicago, where the boo was really perfected, were endeavoring to rattle Ray Schalk; and otherwise all was going as merrily as a marriage bell.

Came then the fourth inning, and in the first half of this inning, with Chicago at bat, and no one out, Mr. E. Collins slammed one obliquely across the diamond from right to left.

This was the opportunity which Heinie Zimmerman, who was on patrol duty near third base, had been coveting. Throughout the series Mr. Zimmerman had been batting like an inmate of the Old Soldiers' Home on sick leave, and otherwise doing all within his power to convince the unprejudiced that he got into a World's Series by mistake. This was his chance. He snatched up the ball, and taking aim at a bare spot on the turf about twenty feet in advance and slightly south by southeast of the point where Mr. Holke stood in an expectant, not to any eager, attitude, he hurled the ball with all his might.

It was a faultless shot—he hit the exact centre of that bare spot—the prettiest you ever saw. By the time the bounding ball had been brought back from the old Fourth Ward, whither it had rolled, Mr. Collins was on second.

Mr. Zimmerman was now given an opportunity to rest up for his next endeavor, while Mr. Robertson obliged with a perfect error. Mr. Jackson of Chicago and South Carolina popped one to an altitude which gave Mr. Robertson so much time in which to wait for it to come down again that ennui overcame him and he became deely preoccupied. While he was absent-mindedly contemplating a hangnail upon one of his fingers the ball, in accordance with the laws of gravity, which are immutable, passed abruptly between the palms of his hands, as a consequence of which Mr. Jackson pulled up at second, while Mr. Collins continued on to third to prepare a place for him.

Aesop Unhappily Redivivus.

And now the really important doings were to eventuate. Up came Mr. Felsch, who hit to Mr. Benton, who flung the ball to Mr. Zimmerman, who started after Mr. Collins, who had been so ill-advised as to quit the safety of third for the perilous furlongs of the home stretch. Mr. Collins darted toward the plate; Mr. Zimmerman, pursuing him, tossed the ball to Mr. Rariden. Mr. Collins scooted back toward third, and at that Mr. Rariden flung the ball back to Mr. Zimmerman.

So far, so good. The runner was trapped. It was at this breathless juncture that a fable which he had heard in childhood's happy hour flashed into Mr. Zimmerman's mind. It was the fable of the Tortoise which beat the Hare, and in that instant he decided to emulate the tortoise and single-handed to make a personal triumph of the thing.

It is a grievous mistake, which no one at this moment realizes more fully than Mr. Zimmerman himself, for an athlete at a critical period in the national pastime to get to thinking about these old folk-lore tales.

Mark well what happened in consequence. Mr. Collins passed beneath the wire, under wraps, and all that kept Mr. Zimmerman from finishing in third place was the fact that no one else happened to be taking part in the race.

Immediately after this, the members of the National Commission, by unanimous consent, drew up a joint statement debarring any member of either team from taking part in exhibition contests during the remainder of the year. It is believed that Mr. Zimmerman's coup, in helping Mr. Collins to score the first run for Chicago, inspired this step. The commission wished to localize the outbreak—to quarantine the rest of the country from it, so to speak.

High Fever for Jawn McGraw.

I do not know whether the scorers gave the Great Zim an error, but I know what his teammates would like to have given him. And they will be replacing the divots in Jawn McGraw's disposition for months to come. Mr. McGraw had two trained nurses constantly in attendance until a late hour.

But to return to the game: Mr. Gandil now slapped out a hit which scored Messrs. Jackson and Felsch, and the word, flashing Westward over the wire, turned the City of Chicago into an institution with two million rabid inmates.

Remains to be told but little. Thenceforward, the Gay Broadway Burlesquers were picking the coverlid. The flickering spark flared up once in the fifth when the Giants scored their two futile little tallies, and once again later on, when Mr. Perritt, running the bases in a general direction, slid into third with the abandon of a runaway stoneboat striking a concrete dam.

Right up to the last, though, Mr. McGraw refused to consent that the lid should be screwed down, and the floral offerings carried out and put in the first hack. One minute he would be holding a mirror to the pallid lips in the hope of observing signs of animation—for he steadfastly refused to believe that it was anything worse than a trance—and the next minute he would be trying to give his boys an idea. But they didn't have any place to put it. With the exception of Mr. Fletcher, who deported himself in a somewhat peevishmanner in the last innings, the Giants in their attitude toward the enemy appeared to be actuated by the same cautious spirit which animated the green Indiana volunteer at the battle of Shiloh, who objected to shooting at the Confederates because it appeared to have the effect of irritating them.

And so, at the wind-up, when the White Sox had gathered in one more score just for good measure, the deciding game, the World's Series of 1917, and the chances for Heinie to do another Zimmerman, passed into history together.

But whether we love the National League or the American League, whether we strung our bets with the Giants or with the White Sox, we may one and all be proud of one thing, anyhow. The championship remains in this country.

LONG DRILL FOR N. Y. U.

Football Squad Practices Until Well After Nightfall.

In a practice that lasted until well after dark the New York University football squad was put through one of the longest grinds of the season yesterday. Coach Wall payed special attention to the development of a rounded team play which to date has been lacking in the Violet 'Varsity. In the tussle with the scrubs on Saturday, when the regulars had a workout under game conditions, several weaknesses were very apparent. Yesterday, after spending the early part of the afternoon in signal drill, the teams were lined up and began a scrimmage that had to be finished on one corner of the field, where an arc lamp on the corner of the gym afforded enough illumination for the players to follow the pigskin.

In the scrimmage Coach Wall put the scrubs on the defensive all the while and then gave all his attention to the 'Varsity interference, which to date has been weak. Only straight tactics were employed, and each play was rehearsed several times, until each of the green backs and ends knew just how to give interference to the runner. The regular back field had no trouble in penetrating the second-string defense and toward the close of the practice, when the ends and backs showed improvement in helping out the runner, progress was rapid.

Egan, Christopher, Covello, Ebenfeld, and Fiedelbaum were used alternately in the back field. Fiedelbaum, who heretofore has only been on the scrubs, displayed ability as a runner, and several times, by shifty advances, made substantial gains through the opposing team. The scrubs yesterday were under the tutelage of Hammerschlag and ex-Captain Bernstein. Billo and Wirth are still out with foot injuries received in practice.

A. A. U. NEEDS MORE TIME.

Local Officials Suggest a Two-Day Annual Meeting.

Local officials of the Amateur Athletic Union are considering a change in the manner of conducting the annual meeting. Those behind the agitation, including practically all of the officials of the Metropolitan Association, have under consideration a plan to extend the meetings of the future so that they will be concluded before the milkman begins his daily rounds. The suggestions are either a two-day session or an afternoon and evening session.

The dissatisfaction arose out of the recent meeting of the local association, which did not terminate until 1:45 A. M., after it had extended over a period of nearly six hours. The meeting started with representatives of nearly every club registered with the metropolitan body in attendance, but as the proceedings dragged along amid unusual bickering and arguments pro and con on almost every resolution or recommendation that was made, many of the delegates, particularly those who had come from New Jersey and Connecticut, were forced to leave in order to make train connections.

This condition took a majority of them away from the meeting before many matters had been broached and they were, therefore, unable to cast a vote or give an opinion on some of the chief happenings at the meeting. In fact, a number of the delegates had retired from further participation in the recent gathering before the final vote on the office of handicapper, one of the most important of the evening's questions, had been cast.

If the present movement meets with any success, meetings of future years will be divided so as to allow plenty of time for out-of-town delegates to make convenient train connections. The plan most favorably looked upon is the one calling for a two-night session, but no definite action on either suggestion has been taken as yet.

The responsibility for the recent long-drawn-out session can be placed on the delegates who argued strenuously for economy in almost every branch of the local association. Economic resolutions were advanced, and argued, across the hall practically throughout the entire evening, while another thing which contributed to the lengthy session was the unusually keen battle in the race for handicapper.

DRASTIC CAPTURES BROOKDALE PURSE

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 15.—August Belmont was practically sure of winning the Brookdale Purse for two-year-olds today when he started both Drastic and Jyntee, two high-class youngsters, which have been so unfortunate hitherto that they qualified under the conditions which called for non-winners of three races. The Belmont pair had the issue between them, Butwell, the stable jockey, landing Drastic in front of Jyntee, which was ridden by Johnny McTaggart.

A small field went to the post for the Liberty Bond Handicap, with favoritism divided between J. F. Sweeney's Hauberk and J. K. L. Ross's Damrosch. Robinson took an early lead with Hauberk and managed to stave off the rush of Waukeag in the last furlong. Damrosch weakened at the end, but finished in third place.

Though the track had dried out and was in good condition the talent, except in a few instances, had difficulty in picking the winners. There was an upset in the first race for two-year-olds, which was captured by Edward B. McLean's Kewpie O'Neil. Harry Payne Whitney's Blazonry had defeated the McLean candidate on their last meeting and was heavily supported. W. O'Brien had the mount on Kewpie O'Neil, and at the finish was able to take the measure of Blazonry, which had Robinson in the saddle.

In the third race, W. A. Carter's Early Sight won. With G. Wall piloting the son of Peep O' Day, he was almost neglected, starting at odds of about 20 to 1. The victory was a lucky one, as R. O. Egan's King Worth finished in front, but was disqualified, giving the purse to the outsider.

L. McAtee showed a return to riding form by piloting two winners. He first rode the 10 to 1 shot, G. C. Walsh's Napoleon, and in a hot finish had the better of Butwell on R. F. Carman's G. M. Miller. In the sixth race McAtee had easier work, as J. Sanford's Madame Curie proved far and away the best of a poor lot of selling platers.

Another long shot upset the calculations of the wise division in the last race in which Kebo was the supposed good thing. J. E. Griffith's Captain Ray led the field home and paid 17 to 1, while E. C. Griffith's Flare, an even greater outsider, took the place from Kebo.

LIGHT WORK AT FORDHAM.

Coach McCaffery Devotes Time to Improving Line.

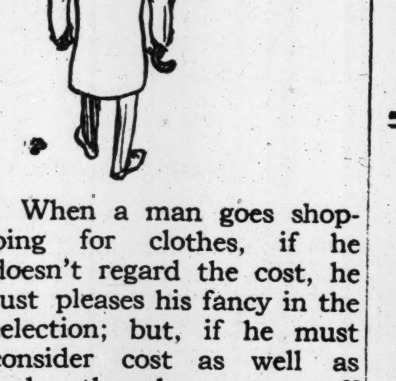

The Fordham football squad had a light workout yesterday afternoon. No scrimmage was held. Coach McCaffery devoted considerable time to removing the defects of line play in the Norwich game. A long signal drill, in which the attack for the Holy Cross game was mapped out, ended the workout.

Frisch, right half back; Dumoe, right end, and Christiansen, left tackle, did not don their uniforms yesterday. Dumoe and Christiansen got bruised a bit on Saturday and Coach McCaffery decided that Frisch needed a rest. Gulick went to left tackle, while Golden took Dumoe's assignment at end yesterday.

The Fordham line is still far from displaying the form that it was expected to attain at this time of the season and a big improvement is needed before the Bronxmen face Holy Cross, Rutgers, and Georgetown. There was a lot of loose playing by the maroon forwards on Saturday and the Fordham front will have to tighten or a series of disasters will be staged on the Bronx gridiron. There was a lot of individual power exhibited against Norwich, but Coach McCaffery will have a busy week getting the eleven co-ordinated for Saturday's game with Holy Cross.

Daly Beats Tod Sloan with Cue.

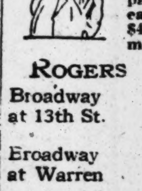

John Daly defeated Tod Sloan, the once noted jockey, by a score of 50 to 28 in an exhibition three-cushion billiard match played last night at Howison's Billiard Academy. Daly made three high runs of 5, while Sloan had one run of 4. The match went sixty-nine innings. Daly will engage in a number of exhibition matches at this academy during the week, in preparation for his championship match with Alfred De Oro, which is to take place on Oct. 23, 24, and 25.

When a man goes shopping for clothes, if he doesn't regard the cost, he just pleases his fancy in the selection; but, if he must consider cost as well as looks, then he wants stuff that will both wear well and look well.

Our salesmen are prepared to advise you as to which suits and overcoats are most durable.

THE SAVOY PACES FAST AT ATLANTA

Lowers Mark for Georgia by Two Seconds on Opening Day of Meeting.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 15.—W. R. Cox's The Savoy, driven by the owner, in winning the $2,500 cup race at the opening of the Grand Circuit meeting here today paced the fastest mile on record in Georgia. The black gelding's time was two seconds faster than the best previous record of 2:04¼, made last year by Ben Earl.

Jay Mack, driven by McDonald, won the second race, for 2:12 class pacers, in straight heats, but Rascal gave the winner a hard battle in each event. The 2:09 trot also was won in straight heats, Brescia besting a fair field.

FOR NEW BASEBALL LEAGUE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 15.—A report that within thirty days a new baseball league will be formed, including in its circuit four American Association cities and four International League cities, was current in Indianapolis tonight. Authority for the report was given as a "man high up in the councils of organized baseball."

The cities which, it is said, will be in the new circuit are Indianapolis, Columbus, Toledo, Louisville, Buffalo, Toronto, Newark, and Baltimore.

It is further reported that six baseball magnates, who will have teams in the league, met in New York last week and agreed on practically all the details. Organization was delayed, it was said, in order that arrangements might be made to satisfy claims of teams, now in one of the leagues, which would be left out of the new league.

According to the report Edward Barrow, now head of the International League, is slated for President of the league. It is said he will have powers almost as broad as those of President Johnson of the American League.

Walk-Over SHOES

Special, $5.

The Walk-Over Shoes we are now selling for five dollars in all Walk-Over stores are a shoe value that must be seen and worn to be appreciated. Had we not foreseen the present leather situation, this shoe would now have to be priced at about seven dollars. Our foresight and ability to offer the same shoe at the same price as before the rise in leather will, we are sure, make many new friends for the well-known Walk-Over line of shoes.

The regular prices of Walk-Over Shoes are $5. to $12.

Every purchase in Walk-Over stores is protected by the Walk-Over trade mark—which means shoe comfort, combined with style in shoes that give full value in service.

Another Walk-Over line of men's shoes at $4. is wonderful shoe value. In black and tan leathers but in two lasts only, and the line is, of course, limited.

We carry a full line of Phoenix Hosiery for men and women

PUBLIC NOTICE.

Sir Edward Ward, Director General of Voluntary Organizations in London, has received an appeal in behalf of Serbian soldiers and prisoners of war, through the Honorable Mrs. Haverfield's Comfort Fund. In consequence of the demand on English resources for the wants of British troops, it has been suggested that the people of the United States be asked to assist in mitigating the unhappy condition of the Serbian fighting men. Their own people can do absolutely nothing. These brave fellows lack necessaries and those little comforts which cheer the soldiers in the trenches. They need flannel shirts, mufflers, wrist warmers, woolen waistcoats, caps and gloves, sweaters, cigarettes and cigarette papers, concertinas, flutes, mouth organs, sweets, tea, and sugar.

Contributions may be sent to Sir Edward Ward, Scotland House, New Scotland Yard, London.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The liquidation which was so pronounced last week was resumed with the opening of the market yesterday, and declines registered at the close of the session were in many instances large enough to make up for the ground which stocks might have lost had the slump not been interrupted by the double holiday. Selling yesterday was on a large scale, spread over a wide range, and it was largely selling of real stock as opposed to operations by traders on the short side. It carried United States Steel through par for the first time in eight months, leaving it off 2⅞ for the day, but pressure was not especially directed at this issue. Marine preferred, for example, subject to an entirely different set of conditions, broke no less than 6 points, with Tobacco Products off 8½, and Bethlehem Steel B 6¼. However, the declines were so general that to enumerate the most striking ones would call for a lengthy list. All classes of stocks participated in the slump.

By some people part of the selling which took place yesterday was explained as being due to fears that agitation for closing the Exchange might prevail. There is extremely thin ground on which to justify such fears, for the closing of the New York Stock Exchange would be nothing less than a calamity which would introduce new difficulties in the way of Government loans. About the only argument that can be put forth in support of the movement to close the Exchange rests mainly on the false premise that professional trading has been the chief cause of the long decline.

There has been the usual amount of short selling in this market, of course, but the protracted slump has been due entirely to more tangible causes. The decline has been brought about as a part of the price we must pay for going to war. Liquidation of dividend-paying stocks which would have remained undisturbed but for the war has been encouraged by the imposition of heavy additional taxes upon incomes. In a way this liquidation has been fortunate for the Government bond issues, since many wealthy investors have found it advisible to take considerable losses on their taxable holdings in order to reinvest the money in the Liberty 3½s. The liquidation has carried standard securities down to a point where the smaller investor, as yet untouched by super taxes, can buy them on better terms than he has been offered in a decade.

GOOD UNDERTONE IN LONDON

Latest War News Causes Weakness in Russian Issues.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The latest war news caused weakness in Russian issues on the Stock Exchange today. Exchange was also flat at 310. The rest of the market had a good undertone. Gilt-edged securities and industrials were maintained by week-end orders, while Marconi and shipping stocks and Chinese and Peruvian bonds were the best of the other sections. Argentine rails recovered, but American securities were lifeless.

Money supplies were scarcer and discount rates were firm. It was reported that the new war bonds are selling at the rate of £20,000,000 weekly.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Re the Stock Exchange.

Neither bankers nor members of the Stock Exchange considered in serious light yesterday Samuel Untermyer's proposal that the Exchange be closed. The opinion was voiced in many quarters that such a step would hamper greatly the Government's financing of the war. In regard to short selling, Governors of the Exchange reiterated their oft-repeated assertion that without selling of the sort, with the buying it makes inevitable, the security market would be deprived of its balance wheel and would be subject to much sharper recessions than any experienced this Autumn. Among bankers mixed opinions as to the value of short sales were in evidence; some thought it might well be curbed without being absolutely forbidden, while others thought that nothing ought to be done at this time to restrict the free course of operations. On the best authority obtainable in Exchange and banking circles, it may be said that no movement has been made to close the Exchange.

Bankers Not Worrying.

The least disturbed persons in Wall Street over the continued decline of stocks are the big bankers, if surface indications show their real sentiments. While declining to predict whether the decline is likely to go much further, they do not appear to be worried over the possibility of lower price levels. A number of prominent bankers said yesterday that their loans on Stock Exchange collateral were well protected, and nothing was in sight to cause doubt of the continued strength of the protection supplied by borrowers.

The Government's New Fleet.

There was no visible signs of commotion in the local shipping market yesterday consequent upon the automatic transfer of all American overseas steamship tonnage to Government control. Business generally appeared to be going on as usual. The phrase "subject to approval of Chartering Committee, United States Shipping Board," now appears in charter parties, but this approval has not, so far, been difficult to obtain. The official statement put out by the Shipping Board last Friday, telling the industry just where it stands, made the dreaded day a much simpler matter than had been anticipated.

The Chartering Committee.

The Chartering Committee itself put in a calm, although a busy day, mostly taken up with the routine work of passing charters. It has so far been necessary for the committee to disprove very few charters submitted to it, because its conditions are few, simple, and already pretty generally understood. The committee is not, so far, concerning itself in the least with rates, or the question of apportionment of the profits of the industry taken over by the Government. The main thing, both the Shipping Board and the Chartering Committee feel just now, is to keep the freight moving and get the ships at work where they will do the most good, and leave the question of profits to be settled when that first essential to winning the war has been accomplished.

To Commandeer Profits?

It may be stated, consequently, on the best of authority that some elaborately circumstantial stories, published in certain newspapers and otherwise circulated, purporting to tell in detail just what the Shipping Board is going to do, how it is going to commandeer all shipping profits, and what operating fees it is going to allow the owners, are utterly unfounded. The Shipping Board itself does not know yet what it is going to do in this matter. It may decide to follow the course indicated in these stories, but if it does, that will prove no more than that their authors are clever guessers. The board will keep books carefully with the owners whose property it is taking over, and ultimately there will be a settlement, which the board aims to make fair for everybody, but just now it is more important to get every ton of freight value out of every ton of shipping than to decide who gets the profit.

It is already clear, from the action of the Chartering Committee on a number of charters submitted to it, that the Shipping Board has adopted a definite policy toward neutral shipping. While its control was not perhaps contemplated when the Shipping Board received its grant of powers from Congress, war emergencies have brought about extensions of these powers before this, and the Shipping Board will have no difficulty in making its control of neutral tonnage as effective as its control of American tonnage, because it is working in entire harmony with the British authorities, and the neutral ship whose charter is not approved by the Chartering Committee cannot get clearance papers from any American port, nor bunker coal nor supplies anywhere else. The first aim of this policy appears to be to get as much neutral tonnage as possible around from the Pacific into the Atlantic and make it bear its portion of the heat and burden of the day between here and Europe.

Cotton Mill Wages Raised.

PLAINFIELD, Conn., Oct. 15.—Cotton mill operatives in Plainfield, Wauregan, Moosup, Jewett City, and Central Village have been notified of an increase in wages of from 5 to 10 per cent., effective Nov. 5. About 3,500 hands are affected. The 1,200 employes of the French Rover Textile Company, in Mechanicsville, will receive a 10 per cent. increase beginning Oct. 22.

STOCKS BREAK AGAIN; LOW RECORDS MADE

BARGAIN HUNTERS RESPOND

The readjustment of security prices to conditions brought about by the task of financing the war was accompanied yesterday by another sharp break in stocks which marked down many active issues from 4 to more than 6 points. A part of the selling apparently resulted from the closing out of margined accounts because of rumors that the Stock Exchange might be closed, but the greater portion represented liquidation for more comprehensive reasons than this. Governors of the Exchange denied emphatically that the Exchange would be closed or that short selling would be forbidden.

In banking quarters the further recession was not looked upon as more disturbing than the declines of recent days. Leading bankers pointed out that the security markets were passing through the same phase which the stock and bond markets of England experienced after that country entered the war. The parallel was carried further, in comment made upon the market, by the statement that the decline on the London markets continued until investors realized that securities were "cheap," and then their buying quickly stabilized quotations.

The impression grew stronger yesterday than in earlier days of the current downward movement that large investors had been selling stocks for the purpose of reinvesting the proceeds in Liberty bonds. While the tax-free feature of the 3½ per cent. bonds is believed to have attracted a great deal of money from dividend-paying stocks, it is said in banking circles that many stocks and railroad bonds have been disposed of in the open market since Sept. 15 in order to provide means for taking up the new Liberty 4 per cent. bonds. To the extent to which this operation has been pursued, the decline of corporation shares and bonds is beneficial to the flotation of the new Government 4s.

Yesterday's market made a fairly good start, aided by expectations among traders that conditions would be improved through the statement by Controller of the Currency Williams that national banks could use a moderate latitude in valuing their bond investments, permission being granted to consider intrinsic worth rather than quotations established in the present abnormal market. The price betterment was short-lived, however, and before the end of the first hour Steel, Union Pacific, Reading, the tobacco and some of the copper stocks were offered down in big blocks. Steel sold under par for the first time since last February, and numerous railroad shares touched new low records for the year, and many preceding years besides.

Banking support was lacking, and inquiry among the banks indicated that the course of the stock market was receiving scant attention. Forced liquidation of accounts whose margins had become impaired hurried the selling in the second hour, and the recoveries which occurred later were slight. In the following table the extent of declines among certain of the more active stocks is shown:

	Gross Dec.	Net Dec.	Last Price.
American Beet Sugar	5	5	70
Baldwin Locomotive	5¼	4¼	50½
Bethlehem Steel, B	6¼	6¼	70
Central Leather	4½	4¼	71½
Chesapeake & Ohio	4¼	4¼	49¼
Crucible Steel	4¾	2½	63½
Great Northern pf.	2	2	99¾
Internat. Mer. Mar. pf.	6¾	6	78½
Missouri Pacific	2¼	2¼	26¼
New York Central	1½	1¾	70¾
Northern Pacific	2¾	2¼	95½
Reading	4¼	4¼	72½
Southern Pacific	3¾	2¾	87
Union Pacific	3¾	3¼	120¼
United States Steel	3¾	2¾	100

In the bond market many new low records were established. Railroad bonds continued to suffer from the adverse effects of earnings statements, and even expectation that the freight rate case would be reopened by the Interstate Commerce Commission shortly had no supporting influence. Bonds and stocks, alike, reflected the gloomy talk in brokerage offices about the inroads war taxation would make upon corporate and individual incomes.

The day's proceedings were not as one-sided, however, as the price-list indicated when the markets closed, according to investment brokers. Steel, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, and other high-grade stocks were absorbed, it was said, by bargain hunters on a greater scale as prices descended than on other days of the bear movement.

THE COTTON MARKET

The cotton market yesterday began where it left last week and under similar conditions, with the weather continuing the all-absorbing topic of consideration. Early reports of killing frosts in portions of the Eastern and Central sections started the market soaring from the opening, which was from 40 to 72 points higher than last Thursday's close. For a time it looked as though last Monday's exciting session would be duplicated, for prices went straight up to figures which, for practically all the active months, represented new high records for the season, December selling at 27.27 and January at 27.00. The advance was not sustained, however, and in the afternoon the entire list sagged off once more, closing practically steady, for net advances of only 15 points down to 15 points loss.

According to the detailed weather reports killing temperatures had occurred over the holiday in parts of Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, and Georgia, while light to killing frosts were also reported at a few points in North Carolina. These reports led to a further scaling down of popular crop ideas, but the advance into new high ground for the season attracted very heavy profit taking, and there was also scattered Southern selling. Prospects for warmer weather, weakness in the stock market, and the census report showing a smaller domestic mill consumption for September, were factors which promoted realizing, and there may have been a little selling for a reaction. The bulk of the offerings, however, were attributed to old longs, and trade interests were good buyers on a scale down.

During the early part of last month the trade was talking a crop of about 12,500,000 bales excluding linters, or a total growth of practically 14,000,000 bales. The market was weak on that idea of the yield, with prices breaking below the 20-cent level. By the end of September the official crop indication had been reduced to 12,000,000 bales excluding linters, pointing to a total crop of about 13,500,000. Yesterday morning, owing to the cold weather of the last fortnight, the trade was talking a crop possibility of around 12,250,000 to 12,500,000 bales, including linters. Comparatively few private crop advices came in from the South, and the few there were came from sections where temperatures were above the minimum.

Exports for the day were 3,719 bales, making 1,024,745 so far this season against 1,245,740 last year. Southern spot markets as officially reported were unchanged to 87 points higher.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The officials of the Food Administration are apparently endeavoring to bring about a more equal distribution of wheat and Eastern mills are to be supplied more liberally. The movement showed a slight increase over last week and the visible supply, including Canadian stocks in the United States, gained 1,784,000 bushels for the week. The total, however, is only 9,596,000 bushels, compared with 63,690,000 a year ago.

RYE.—Market easy; No. 2 Western, $1.88 cost, insurance, and freight New York.

CORN.

There was a very feverish tone to the corn market and sentiment was divided. Prices showed moderate firmness early, but subsequently broke sharply and closed with net losses of ¼c to 1c. Confidence was again disturbed by the attitude of the Government against high prices of commodities and also by the weakness in the stock market. It is the general belief, however, that the future course of values will depend to a large extent on the early movement of the crop and the attitude of farmers. The visible supply increased 325,000 bushels for the week and the total was 1,551,000 against 4,456,000 last year. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at $2.01 and No. 2 mixed $1.99, cost, insurance, and freight New York.

OATS.

The oats market showed firmness at the start, with the trade inclined to take a bullish view of the cash situation. The export demand proved disappointing, however, and the market gave way, closing ½c to ¾c net lower. Receipts at primary points were larger, and the visible increased 493,000 bushels, bringing the total to 13,190,000, compared with 41,880,000 last year. The local cash market was steady. Standard was quoted at 66c; No. 2 white, 66¼c; No. 3 white, 65c to 65½c; No. 4 white, 64½c to 65c; fancy clipped white, 66¼c to 68¼c; ordinary clipped white, 65c to 66½c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was feverish, but prices were firmer owing to the sold-out appearance of the market and reports of a good cash demand. Fears of Government control of the whole hog situation served to check buying, however, and operations were comparatively small. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 24,000; estimated for Tuesday, 8,000. Kansas City received 9,000 and Omaha 8,100 hogs.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The liquidating movement in cottonseed oil under the new restrictions has apparently reduced outstanding accounts in the market materially, and trading has fallen off to very small proportions. Total sales yesterday were only 4,000 bbls. The firmness in lard seemed to give the market a little firmer tone, however, and prices at the close were 45 to 50 points net higher. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

The coffee market was quiet yesterday, with irregular fluctuations reflecting its sensitiveness to comparatively small orders. Evidently traders found nothing in the news over the holidays to create fresh sentiment. The opening was 2 to 3 points net lower under scattered selling, which came partly from Wall Street sources, and which may have reflected the unsettling influence on long accounts of a weak stock market. The close was 2 to 4 points net lower. The local spot market was steady, with a moderate demand. Closing quotations were on the basis of 8⅝c for Rio 7s, and 9⅝ for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

In as much as refiners are not allowed to purchase raw sugar at above 5¾c, cost and freight basis, and holders showing no disposition to meet this price level, the market was practically at a standstill. No business was reported, and Canadian refiners have withdrawn from the market. There was no change in refined sugar, three refineries being idle and others taking only a very limited business, all being at the 8.35c basis, regular terms. Raw supplies are running very low, and unless early relief comes it is believed other interests will be forced to close their plants. Western beets are late and cannot be counted upon to help the acute situation for some time to come. Spot quotations follow: Centrifugal, 6.90c; molasses, 6.02c; cost and freight, 5⅝c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 8,087 packages. The market lacked buying support and prices declined about ½c on most grades of fresh creamery, with an unsettled feeling at the close. Renovated a little easier. Ladles and packing stock barely steady. Creamery, higher than extras, per lb. 45@45½c; extras, (92 score,) 44½c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 43@44¼c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 41½@42½c; thirds, 40½@41c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 46@46½c; extras, 45@45½c; firsts, 44@44½c; seconds, 42½@43½c; State, dairy, tubs, finest, 44c; good to prime, 42@43½c; common to fair, 39@41½c; renovated, extras, 42½@43c; firsts, 41½@42c; lower grades, 39½@41c; imitation creamery, firsts, 40½@41c; ladles, current make, firsts, 39½@40c; seconds, 38½@39c; lower grades, 37@38c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 38½@39c; No. 2, 38c; lower grades, 36@37½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 9,753 cases. The market opens quiet and without material change. There is a light offering of fine to fancy fresh gathered eggs containing a good proportion of new-laid stock. These are in fair demand and rated steady to firm. There has been some reduction in the accumulations, but offerings of good medium and lower grades are still liberal, and holders are very anxious to effect a clearance. Storage eggs quiet and irregular. Occasional sales of very fancy brands have been made up to 38@38½c, but there is no considerable demand for them at these prices, and the bulk of the trading is in cheaper eggs, ranging down to about 35@36c for fair to good seconds. Nearby white eggs in light supply, but the demand is limited and the situation unchanged. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 45@46c; extra firsts, 43@44½c; firsts, 40@42c; seconds, 37½@39c; thirds and poorer, 35@37c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 36@36½c; No. 2 and poorer, 30@35½c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 33@34c; undergrades, 30@32c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 35@35½c; firsts, storage and insurance paid, 34½@35c; seconds, storage and insurance paid, 33@34c; lower grades, storage and insurance paid, 33@34½c; refrigerator, State, whites, 41@48c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 62@66c; ordinary to good, 50@60c; gathered whites, good to fine, 45@52c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 45@50c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery browns, 48@56c; gathered browns and mixed colors, 42@48c.

Investing Just Now

You owe it to yourself and to your interests in the general stability of the country to consider present opportunities to purchase time-tested issues of investment stocks and bonds.

Every American should buy Liberty Loan Bonds. We suppose that you have bought yours or arranged to purchase one or more bonds of the Second Liberty Loan.

Do you think you have reached your limit of investment? Most Americans are more easily satisfied in this respect than any other. There is infinite room in the United States for the expansion of thrift.

For success in the war and the keeping up of home prosperity, we feel that it is important to establish stability in the security market.

We feel that the selling of big investors, burdened with war taxes, has given a real investment opportunity to the small investors who are not heavily burdened.

Buy your share of Liberty Loan Bonds and then consider whether you can't save $5 more a month to purchase a share of American prosperity—on the Partial Payment Plan.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Trading on the Consolidated Stock Exchange was active, with prices trending downward throughout almost the entire session. The market opened steady and for a short time prices moved up. Before the end of the first hour the buying power was exhausted. Liquidation appeared, and large blocks of stocks that had been taken over on Thursday were thrown back on the market.

SPEYER & CO. EXPLAIN MOVE

Say They Acted in Interest of M., K. & T. Security Holders.

Speyer & Co. yesterday issued a statement relative to the refusal of the United States District Court to grant its petition for a change in the personnel of the receivership of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad, making a representative of the bond and note holders whom they represent a co-receiver.

"We felt it our duty," the statement says, "in the interest of the 4½ per cent. bond holders and note holders whom we represent, and also as large owners of these securities, to ask that they be given representation in the receivership, and we regret, of course, that the court decided not to change its personnel. But we are very much pleased that, as an incidental result of our application, the judge has taken occasion to indicate the kind of reorganization which will commend itself to him. We are in thorough accord with what he says. We hope that the next plan of reorganization to be proposed will do justice to the real earning capacity of the road and to the intrinsic value of the various classes of securities."

ST. LOUIS Mo., Oct. 15.—Speyer & Co. asked for a co-receiver for the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway partly on the ground that the sole receiver, Charles E. Schaff, favored a plan of reorganization different from the one approved by them. The plan approved by Receiver Schaff, it was held by Speyer & Co., was based on an estimate of the possibilities of the road that was too conservative.

Judge Hook said the court would favor a reorganization based on a conservative estimate of the earning powers of the road, and would not favor a plan that made inadequate provision for future capital requirements or a plan under which in dull years net earnings would be absorbed by fixed charges.

Tobacco Products Dividend Voted.

An initial dividend of $1.50 a share on 160,000 shares of common stock of the Tobacco Products Corporation was voted yesterday by the Board of Directors. The dividend is payable on Nov. 15 to stockholders of record on Nov. 1. The total earnings disbursed will be $240,000. It was said yesterday by officials that the action of the Directors meant placing the common stock on a dividend basis of $6 a year. In making the announcement George L. Storms, the President, gave out the details of a financial report, showing a surplus of $3,165,470, and the net earnings of $1,400,445 for the first eight months of the year ended Aug. 31, compared with net earnings of $809,108 for a similar period in 1916. The report also showed that loans negotiated last year for the purchase of new properties, amounting to $2,400,000, had been settled in full.

New Haven Gets Extension of Time.

Judge Julius M. Mayer of the United States District Court issued an order yesterday extending until Feb. 1, 1918, the time for the sale of New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company's holdings of the preferred and common stock of the Boston & Maine Railroad. Under the dissolution decree of Oct. 17, 1914, the securities, which amount to more than $1,000,000, were to be disposed of by Jan. 1, 1918.

Southern Jobbers Benefiting.

One effect of the removal of duty, until Dec. 31, on imports of certain low-end cotton goods into Mexico has been to bring spot business in these goods to jobbers in Texas cities, like San Antonio and Dallas, that formerly came to commission houses in this market in the shape of export contracts. This is due principally to the shortness of time in which deliveries can be made in order to make use of the concession in duties, though the ease and cheapness with which the larger Texas cities can be reached from Mexican points are also helping. The business is not entirely lost to the local commission houses, however, for the jobbers in question are buying most of the goods here that they use to supply the Mexicans.

Mill Help Getting Short.

So serious has the labor problem become in some parts of the South that one big cotton mill in Mississippi, its production already reduced to 60 per cent. of normal, has withdrawn its goods until it has had time to study the situation and see just what can be done. According to men who know, production in the cotton mills of the South now averages not more than 75 per cent. of normal. The Mississippi mill in question, however, is so hard put for help that it has been obliged to abandon its night shift altogether, and this in spite of the 10 per cent. increase in wages on Oct. 1. This increase was the most recent of several. An airplane factory is being built near this mill, and the contractors are enticing the mill workers away with wages said to be as high as $3 a day for unskilled workers.

Gray Goods Trading Only Fair.

The combination of baseball and "blue Monday" kept trading small in the local gray goods market yesterday in spite of the higher cost of cotton. The day's sales included 39-inch 68-72s at 12 cents for shipment in November and December, as well as 38½-inch 60-48s at 9¼ cents for delivery during the last quarter of the year. Bids of 7½ cents were in the market for 27-inch 64-60s for prompt shipment, while for delivery in November and December 10¼ cents was bid for 38½-inch 64-60s. Bids that were declined outright during the day included 10¼ cents for 38½-inch 64-56s for January, February, and March, and 9¼ cents for spot 60-48s in the same width. Other sales included four-yard 56-60 sheetings at 13¼ cents and 30-inch 3.25-yard drills at 15¼ cents. Print-cloth prices closed this way:

Ginghams Lead the Demand.

The demand for fancy ginghams is the thing that stands out in colored cotton goods trading of the moment. Jobbers who feared they had overbought for Spring are now coming back for more and, unless there is a marked change in the demands of fashion, there promises to be a famine in these goods. Not only are the jobbers buying them, but the cutters are said to be active on them in a large way. Plaids and cheviots, which have been active, are quieter now, but have sold well into 1918 at high prices. Among the heavier goods the situation in tickings is a feature. These goods are "as dead as door nails" so far as civilian trade is concerned, yet it is said that, whenever mils get to the point where sharply decreased production is in sight, along comes a big Government order to keep things moving.

Straight Lines Attract Many.

Contrary to the contention in some quarters that the bustle effect is to be the big thing this year, many local manufacturers report that narrow skirts and the straight tube-like silhouette in dresses are among the outstanding tendencies emphasized by reorders coming in from out-of-town buyers. This straight-line or semi-fitted effect is also said to be attracting a great deal of attention in elaborate evening gowns, and many believe it will become the most generally acepted style feature of the year.

Burlap Market Opens Quietly.

With few goods available for trading, either afloat or ashore, business opened very quietly in the local burlap trade yesterday. Prices continue to mount, the last business done here on 40-inch, 10½-ounce goods being at 16¼ cents. Ten-ounce goods in the same width were quoted yesterday at 16 cents, with 8-ounce burlaps held at 12¼ cents and 7-ounce stuff at 12. Due to the three-day holiday that was enjoyed by many houses in the trade, information from the primary markets was rather meagre. According to the last reports, quotations in these markets are higher than in this city.

Buyers Certainly Need Goods.

Proof of the extent to which buyers of colored cottons are hard hit for merchandise is shown by an experience of a local commission house. The salesmen for this house had been literally hounding the executives to get one of their mills to make up a special kind of cloth for use in children's dresses. Finally, one of the mills was persuaded to make up a sample lot of 10,000 pieces, after several reasons why they did not want to do so had been cited. The main reason was that the amount of mill changes required to make the goods, coupled with the increased cost of labor, would make the price too high for buyers. When the goods were given to the salesmen it was with a price on them that was admitted to be "sky high." Despite this, however, the buyers snapped them up for Spring delivery on sight. The mill is no longer complaining about making them.

Skirtmakers Prospering.

Separate skirts of fancy plaids and stripes are reported, by manufacturers of this city, to be widely sought. The most popular, it is said, are those either side plaited or box plaited, and fashioned with a separate tailored belt of the same material fastening with two or three large buttons at one side of the figure or in the centre front. Skirts of satin are also said to be attracting attention, particularly those in plaited tunic styles. The approach of the Palm Beach season is reflected in a growing demand for seasonable models for the South. It seems that bright colors, both solid and in combinations, are to be big features in this line.

Government Underwear Orders.

Orders have been placed for about 160,000 dozen suits of underwear for the Government for delivery on or before Nov. 15, according to announcement from the Knit Goods Committee assisting the Council of National Defense. GOOD OPENING OF THE FUR AUCTION

A Large Attendance and Active Bidding Marked Opening of Sale Yesterday.

RED FOX PELTS A FEATURE

Buyers Were Present from Many Places—Outline of the Prices That Were Obtained.

Active bidding for fox pelts, especially red fox, featured the opening of the annual Fall sale of furs that began yesterday morning in the auditorium of the Masonic Hall here. Buyers from all over the United States and Canada were present, the largest attendance, when the red foxes were under the hammer, ranging between 400 and 500.

At the close of the sale the following comparative prices were given out, the comparisons being made with the prices obtained at the April sale: Fisher, same; Northern otter, 10 per cent. lower; Southern otter, same; blue fox, 10 per cent. higher; cross fox, 40 per cent. higher; red fox, 50 per cent. higher, and white fox, same. The highest price obtained for a red fox skin was $40, though others sold at $27, $28, and $29. The best blue fox skin, which brought $153, was purchased by Revillon Frères of this city. The best price brought by a cross fox was $121, the buyer in this case being Paul L. Wiener. The generally high prices obtained for foxes were due to the unusually heavy bidding for them. Among the cross fox buyers were C. G. Gunther's Sons, Revillon Frères, A. Bases, M. Cohan & Brothers, Julius Klugman, Kaye & Einstein, Kaufman & Oberleder, and S. Goldman. One of the sea otters sold for $320.

Among the features of the sale were the large number of manufacturing furriers present, and the attitude of the buyers when the red foxes were reached. The announcement of them created more of a stir than anything excepting Mayor Mitchel's speech in behalf of the Liberty Loan. Auctioneer J. Gordon Noakes of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation conducted the sale, assisted by a staff of seven "spotters." Many of the lots offered were disposed of in record time.

The man who traveled the longest distance to get to the sale was Ignatius Koslofsky of Juneau, Alaska. Mr. Koslofsky came 8,000 miles, as he expressed it, "to see for himself and report back to Alaska what a New York fur auction sale was like."

The corporation maintained a free taxicab service between Masonic Hall and its warehouse at 48 Great Jones Street during the day, and many buyers, when they were not directly interested in the furs then under the hammer, went to the warehouse to examine the pelts that are to be put up today and during the remainder of the sale.

Toronto.—John Hallam, J. H. Ledger.

Boston.—William Kakas of Kakas Bros., S. M. Norton of J. L. Norton's Sons, A. L. Barr of Wight Bros., Jarvis Lamson of the Balch-Price Company, W. A. Calkins.

St. Louis.—S. Weingarten, James A. Goldman, Mark Harris of the B. Harris Fur and Wool Company, McKenna Bros.

Charlottetown, P. E. I.—Chester McClure.

Seattle.—William Hibberd of Hibberd, Stewart & Co.

Milwaukee.—Albert Moravetz.

Washington.—Jacob Leibster.

Edmonton.—I. A. Ramelson and M. H. Levinson of Ramelson & Levinson.

Today's sale, which will begin at 10 A. M., will include about 14,000 kolinsky, 326 silver fox, and nearly 5,000 gray fox. With them will be sold Australian fox, wolverine, nutria, bear, badger, Japanese marten, stone marten, and marten.

DEFICIT FOR 3D AVE. ROAD.

Net Operating Income $890,358, or Less Than Interest Charges.

The report of the Third Avenue Railway Company for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1917, just issued, shows a deficit for the year, before paying dividends, of $1,622,326, instead of the profit of $991,072 shown the preceding year. Operating revenue fell from $11,136,370 to $8,972,649, while expenses grew from $6,808,194 to $7,287,840. Consequently the net operating income of $3,480,054 in 1916 fell to $890,358, less than one-third the company's interest charges.

President Edward A. Maher says in his report that operating revenue decreased "because of strikes, which were universal on all transportation lines in Manhattan and the Bronx during the Summer of 1916. Earnings were also seriously affected by the epidemic of infantile paralysis with which the city was afflicted last Summer, and which reduced pleasure riding to practically nothing. The unusually cold and rainy weather conditions existing throughout the months of April, May and June of this year also contributed materially to the decrease in revenue. Operating expenses have increased—it has been necessary to increase the wages of employes generally."

STEEL PRICES SATISFY GARY

Chairman Says Trade Conditions Will Be Much Improved.

Chairman E. H. Gary of the Steel Corporation said yesterday that, while the profits of some manufacturers would be reduced by the fixing of steel prices, conditions in the trade would be improved. Speaking as a member of the American Iron and Steel Institute Committee which conferred with the War Industries Board over prices, he said yesterday in reply to an inquiry about the effect of the new prices:

"Our committee was in conference with the War Industries Board on Wednesday and Thursday of last week and agreed upon recommendations to the President concerning the prices to be fixed for many of the leading semi-finished and finished steel products, and these were adopted by the President as published. On the whole, it may be said, the negotiations with the War Industries Board and the results were satisfactory to the steel producers, although the prices named are lower than had been expected.

"The disposition of the members of the board carefully to inquire into the facts relating to costs, capacity, facilities, and profits has been so fair and frank that the manufacturers, without exception, will be influenced to respond to the requests of the board for production equal to full capacity. And the prices determined upon will, with some adjustments between manufacturers as to deliveries, yield profits sufficient to bring them within the President's original proclamation.

"The prices of commodities not already considered by the board will be fixed by arriving at a parity. The steel industry generally will be benefited by the attitude and action of the War Industries Board and the President. The profits of some of the manufacturers will be somewhat decreased. However, conditions will be more normal and they will be healthy."

Bloomgarden, $200; Stella Englander, $100, and Rosaline Finkelman, $225. Judge Mayer appointed Charles P. Sandford receiver. Liabilities $5,000 and assets $4,000.

CARMINE CIOFFI, mason and builder at 1,267 Stebbins Av., has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $64,203 and no assets. Among the creditors are Charles Spengler, $4,473; John Hall & Co., $4,100, and Indelli & Conforti, $3,500. Included in the liabilities are thirty judgments against him.

GRAPE OLA CORPORATION, at 12 West Twenty-second Street and Vineland, N. J., has filed schedules showing liabilities of $38,139 and nominal assets $1,449,162, consisting of stock $35,402, machinery $21,421, accounts $1,775, cash $44, formula and trade mark $890,520, and shares of stock $500,000 in the United Beverages Machine Co. The largest creditor is Russell S. Stuart of Ottawa, Canada, $12,477 for loans.

LANCASTER BUTTER SEPARATOR CO., INC.—Oliver L. Goldsmith has been appointed receiver. Liabilities are $13,600 and assets $6,000. Archibald Palmer, representing creditors, said that Margaret M. Judge Hand restrained Mrs. Bonsall and the Sheriff from interfering with the property of the company.

BERLER SHOE CO.—Judge A. N. Hand has rejected the composition by the Berler Shoe Co. of 287 Broadway and 517 Fulton St., Brooklyn, with creditors at 20 cents on the dollar, cash, because the composition was offered to creditors before the bankrupt was examined in open court and before schedules were filed.

LLOYD GEORGE GROWS AS BURDENS PILE UP

LINCOLN AS HIS MODEL

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

PARIS, Sept. 3.—A few short weeks ago many had begun to wonder whether the Prime Minister of England had exhausted his inner resources, and his enemies were somewhat gleefully reexamining old leadership material. Meanwhile, Mr. Lloyd George, it now appears, was getting measured for a new suit of political clothes several sizes larger. They have been finished; he has discarded the old suit and put on the new. The fit seems to be an excellent one.

The men who grow are the men who become great in public life. Mr. Lloyd George may be said to have reached the very pinnacle of power and renown, but he is still a statesman in the making. No matter how big he may have been, the emergency is bigger, and, to be equal to it, he must grow, grow, grow. His growth is a series of adventures. With each fresh one he acquires more sureness, with each increase in sureness he goes with a steadier step to a new success. And so the metaphor maker, the half-baked thinker, the immature-minded visionary of a decade ago, grasps with an ever-strengthening hand the helm of world destiny.

It seems only yesterday, as I look back, that I saw him coming and going at the golf club, and the Conservative breed with whom I foregathered over the whiskey and soda on the veranda scorned to turn a head toward the man who even then had put an impudent spoon into the parliamentary dish. He was to them a mountebank and a hypocrite. I recall one mighty argument that turned on the question of the sincerity of a man who, while waxing eloquent on the grievances and sufferings of the poor, was willing always to have the best of everything for himself—a form of argument much invoked by the typical Tory, who takes everything for himself and rounds out his inflation consistency by disdaining any effort or thought for the poor, except in the relation of superior to inferior.

Never Modest as a Promiser.

Even as late as last December, when he became Premier, the average high-life sentiment was skeptical as to his ability to carry on. He was able to form a Government through the unexpected acceptance by the Labor Party of the promises he made them. Their exactions were great, but his promises jumped with them. He never was modest as a promiser. But, as on other things, Lloyd George had prescience as to what Labor was prepared to do to help on the war and the new concessions that public opinion would permit in return therefor. His Premiership had the distinct weakness of owing its existence and maintenance to an unsympathetic and unfriendly element in the House of Commons.

Mr. Lloyd George was conducting the greatest war in history by methods of ruthlessness and without the support of a proper parliamentary majority. Moreover, the party by whose sufferance he retained office was subject to violent internal disturbance, and, even if its leaders should be held in cohesion by conciliation and conviction, the masses which they represented might at any moment yield to an uninformed and perverse impulse and withdraw support from their own leaders. For be it remembered that these latter were labor men before they were legislators, and the strings that pulled them were held within the secret precincts of organized labor.

At this stage of Mr. Lloyd George's progress from Demagogy to Statesmanship, thanks partly to his shrewd tact and partly to the good record that he had made in war conditions, first as Chancellor of the Exchequer and second as Minister of Munitions, there rallied to his support a majority of the Tory Party. People of that ilk may be lacking in imagination; their patriotism may be tinctured by self-interest or self-importance, but they are a good crowd to have behind you. They generate a comfortable warmth, their manners are good, and they stick. Their support put backbone into the Lloyd George movement. For his Government was then hardly to be regarded as a consummation, it was rather an experiment.

For their confidence, Lloyd George made them a handsome return in kind. Earl Curzon, leader of the Lords; Bonar Law, leader of the Commons; Mr. Balfour, Sir Edward Carson, and Lord Derby are five of the more prominent Conservatives who share the responsibilities of Government. Thus it was that the Tories on one side and Labor on the other joined hands and made a saddle upon which Lloyd George was carried to the heights of secure power.

Making Hay Every Hour.

The Liberals were always looking about, but the more they looked the less they saw. There was no place for them to go. When Asquith fell, they were sure that the country was lost unless he came back soon to power. Out of power and not charged with the responsibility for action and results, he was a tremendous asset to the Liberal Party. He has the gifts, without the defects, of pointed and eloquent speech. No man, not even the Premier, can present the heart of the matter with greater happiness or clarity. But he was out, while his rival was in. And the Premier was making hay while the sun shone. Every day, every hour, he was going over the heads of parties and their leaders to the sovereign people of Britain. Little by little he established the direct relation firmly, until at last his unfailing sense of public thought and feeling told him that when the proper moment came he could strike from his hands the shackles of party control and make them his slaves who had been his masters—the leaders of the several parties in Parliament.

I hazard the guess, and not without some little foundation for it, that during this formatory period Mr. George has taken Abraham Lincoln for his model. There is a parallel in a large way between the two experiences and the two wars. I know that always Mr. George has ranked Lincoln almost first among English-speaking statesmen of all time. And I know that the lifelong reading and study of Lincoln by the Premier have within a few months been resumed with fresh assiduity. In the course of his eight months administration there has cropped out a constant analogy of policy. For example: Mr. George is ignoring of all previous personal associations, his obliteration of every line of social caste and politics party and his insistent search everywhere for ability and fitness recall the noble sacrifices of self made by the martyred President in his yearning to gain the best service for his imperiled country.

The English Premier was not called on to endure alone and in silence the misunderstanding that was Lincoln's reward for self-sacrifice, but he has had a terrible load to carry, and he has carried it cheerily and bravely. There has never been a trace of melancholy in the Prime Minister's life. He is not sensitive. He has had more of the rough and tumble of politics than Mr. Lincoln had. He has less of the meditative side. He is a "scrapper" and a practical politician. He used to fight for everything he got. In the last year or two he has been learning to rely more for his results on the play of great forces. But it was good for him that he got his training lifting dead weights. His early experiences and hard knocks gave him toughness and made him dangerous in a scrimmage, but also they prevented his acquiring for his armory that serene confidence without which absolute mastery in action can be only in the nature of a fluke.

When Fear Changed to Confidence.

And that is the Premier's new weapon. He has gained his own confidence in full measure and has been using it like a master these last few weeks. At first his every act was introduced by a gesture of deference in this or that direction. It seemed to me that I was able to discern the precise week-end when fear ceased to exist as an element in the Premier's policy.

It was on the occasion a few weeks ago of the marshaling of all the hostile forces of the press and the House of Commons. A formidable army it was. The Premier must have had private information in advance of others that he had the enemy beaten. He made a speech at Queen's Hall on a Saturday, and went off to Paris on a Sunday, leaving many of his friends dubious about the result of a vote in the House of Commons on the Monday, which, if adverse, would have sent the Government to the country in a general election. It was an opportunity for all those who were disaffected from various causes, including Winston Churchill's appointment, the Mesopotamia exposé, and Lord Hardinge's retention, the choice of Mr. Montagu for a Cabinet position, (recalling impleasant matters of the past,) the air raids, the Irish question, Lord Northcliffe, and all and sundry matters, to move on Lloyd George behind a masked battery. This latter was the labor fight to increase the minimum pay for laborers in the Agricultural bill from twenty-five to thirty shillings a week.

What happened is history. The great vote of confidence which this fight resulted in undoubtedly emboldened the Premier to strike for complete emancipation from labor dictation when Mr. Henderson made the opportunity a few weeks later. Mr. George showed in that affair the quickness of action and thorough preparedness that go with deliberate planning. He won, and he is free. He is in the saddle and on a horse bridle-wise to him and not tricky to secret signs from the labor hostler.

The Premier has apparently lost little in the ranks of labor, while his gain by his audacity has been immense in other directions. Only that portion of labor capable of sacrificing the narrow interest for the broader one of country has been sincerely friendly, and that portion he still holds. Almost every other element, except the spoils-hunting among the Liberals, is marshaled in support of the Government. England today shows a more solid front than at any previous time. Lloyd George's well-aimed blows have backed his enemies off the boards, and those who are against him now are down-and-outers and tainted with treasonable pacifism.

With all the fine developmgnt to which reference has been made there is still a certain narrowness about Lloyd George. In a limited number of things he thinks in terms of politics. He has defied parliamentary enemies, outschemed and outfought them. But, as I read him, he is still an opportunist. He wouldn't go against the popular mood, however uninformed and misled. He keeps his ear rather close to the ground.

I was discussing Mr. George and his services to his country and humanity at an officers' mess at the American Field Headquarters recently. The talk was in regard to a policy of absolute and public frankness about sinkings by the U-boat. An army doctor, evidently sharp on psychology, spoke in effect as follows:

"The present policy of soft-pedaling on submarine news is precisely the reverse of what is good for us and bad for Germany. We ought to put it out at its blackest. Fill Germany full of optimistic 'dope.' Let her get good and drunk on it. Then will come the inevitable disappointment. After that there will be a recovery. Give the optimistic stuff again. Get them up as high as possible. Then will come a fall. Keep it going on these lines, and Germany will crack. There is no fortitude that can withstand that process. On the other side, our looking at the facts squarely will give us an intelligent and reasoned courage and stimulate our effort. Mark my words, the war will be won by those with strength enough to face the truth at every stage and lost by those who befuse themselves with ill-founded optimism."

MATTHEW HALE NEAR DEATH

WEYMOUTH, Mass., Oct. 15.—Matthew Hale of Boston, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor and a prominent Progressive, had a narrow escape from death or serious injury tonight when an automobile in which he was proceeding with three companions to Abington to speak at a Democratic rally, plunged over a thirty-foot embankment, at the foot of which lay Whitman's Pond.

The car's plunge was checked by a tree just over the brow of the bank, and Hal and Francis X. Tirrell of Boston, together with a man whose name was not learned, were thrown out, escaping with painful, but not serious, bruises.

It is believed the accident was caused by the car skidding on the slippery road.

False Fire Alarm for Harriman Bank

Some one seeing smoke issuing from a grating at the Harriman Bank, at Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, yesterday afternoon, summoned the firemen, who found that a piston rod had been blown from the engine, but there was no fire. Crowds blocked traffic for a few minutes.

Bunion Comfort

The finest cuts of soft, seasoned leather are used in the Coward Bunion Shoe. At the point where the bunion comes a pocket is shaped in the leather to accommodate the tender joint. So skillfully is this done that the bunion is inconspicuous and the shoe appears to be practically normal in shape. This is true except in cases of extreme enlargement.

Made for men and women, in sizes to fit all bunions, or to order if desired.
